GAS PLANT PURCHASE

The Peterborough Gas Plant, offered for sale by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, is thoroughly modern and efficient. It has a capacity for the production of 150,000,000 cubic feet of gas per annum, The present annual sale of gas is approximately 50,000,000 cubic feet. The plant has a capacity for three times the present output. There is, therefore, no possibility of it being necessary to raise funds for enlargements of the plant for a number of years. Large industrial users can be supplied with gas for their requirements without delay.

This excess capacity is, therefore, a valuable potential asset to the corporation for inducing new industries to locate here.

The only capital expenditures, which would be necessary for some years, would be for extensions to the distribution system. The present earnings are sufficient to finance these expenditures.

REPORTS READ AT MEETING

Lakefield United Church Society Reviews Work for Year.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 21—The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Regent Street United Church was held on Tuesday afternoon, December 18. Reports were given of the year's work and the financial statement was read, each showing substantial progress in every respect. After the routine business was finished Mrs. George Craig Bell sang a solo which was very much enjoyed.

Rev. A. S. Kemp, pastor of the church, spoke of the splendid year's work which had been done by the ladies and on behalf of the official board and himself, he expressed deep appreciation of the contribution made by the Ladies' Aid, both financially and in enlisting women into the chruch activities, with a welcome for newcomers and a splendid spirit of co-operation which has resulted in a year which has been remarkably successful.

Rev. Mr. Kemp took the chair for the election of officers which was speedily conducted as all were elected by acclamation.

President—Mrs. Albert Darling.
1st vice president—Mrs. Robert Nugent.
2nd vice president—Mrs. Azor Northey.
Secretary—Mrs. Walter Hamblin.
Assistant secretary—Mrs. H. R. Wagar.
Treasurer—Mrs. S. S. Spence.
Assistant treasurer—Mrs. D. H. Webster.
Pianist—Mrs. Percy Spence.
Assistant pianist—Mrs. A. D. Payne
Convenor of flower fund—Mrs. F. H. Richardson.
Auditors—Mrs. A. E. Higgins, Miss Webster and Rev. S. A. Kemp.

The financial statement showed that during the past year the Ladies' Aid raised $1,000 which is far in excess of any pervious year and is largely to be attributed to the organization and co-operation. The officers were capable and efficient and the convenors of the committees were actively interested and always on the job, and the members were like a well trained army united in a common cause and the result has been outstanding in the community.

Christmas Cheer

The Examiner will this year collect parcels for distribution through the organized channels at Christmas.

All organizations are requested to write telling the name of the organization, about how many families are cared for, and the name of the person and address where parcels should be sent.

The Examiner is doing this—

1.—To assist these church, fraternal and service organizations;

2.—To help those who need Christmas cheer;

3.—To give Examiner neighbors the opportunity to make Christmas brighter for themselves by bringing happiness to others.

No parcels will be distributed to homes by The Examiner; they will be divided equitably among the agencies referred to.

"Adastia" Approves "Bobbie's" Modern Mother Ideas

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

Marion:

Don't you think that so long as we have conscientious, painstaking mothers such as Bobbie, there is no immediate danger of the dire catastrophe threatened by those that would decry the modern mother? I feel sure that Bobbie is a modern mother, one of the best.

Of course, Bobbie, one cannot begin too soon to demand obedience of a child and it is a splendid thing to have a regular routine mapped out for young children. They grow to expect a certain thing at a certain time, and it is so much better for their nerves and health in general than a haphazard way of doing things. Then, too, a spoilt child whose will is paramount in the home is never a happy one nor a source of happiness. It is always looking for new fields to conquer. How often we hear people say jokingly, "baby is the boss," and it is only too true. We all know what repulsive little plagues badly reared children can be and what a source of embarrassment to the parents. Nobody is attracted to the pert knowing youngster who is continually tiresomely showing off its little tricks that it has been told are "cute," always demanding the centre of the stage.

Indeed there was a great deal to be said for the old-fashioned idea that children should be "seen and not heard."

But still it does not do to be over zealous. It is well to avoid extremes either way. To be always on the lookout for some little flaw to correct in a child defeats its own purpose. The constantly "doing" and "don'ting" mother loses her influence by over-much reproof. It is wise, I think, to seem to overlook some of the minor faults that do not please us, if we lay too great stress on a thing it commences to be attractive, whereas if we can safely ignore it, soon it will cease itself. Such things, of course, as snatching at the table appliances should be corrected. How else can we teach a child table manners? A wisely administered slapping at the tender age of one and a half years proves more effective than it might do in an older child. I knew I always relied upon it as the best method of getting desired results. Now that my child has reached the school age, I think it wiser to use other ways of correction. Because I have always from infancy had no difficulty in having it adhered to. It pays to sacrifice one's own inclinations if we must to meet these hours of routine if we really desire our children to know and have the best in life later on. We know that "as the twig is bent, so the tree is inclined."

You may be very sure your child is perfectly normal, "Bobbie." We have, most of us, had your experiences. Indeed you might fear he was abnormal if he did not feel any inclination to reach for the forbidden. It is for you to make him see the error of his ways. Once this lesson is learned you will not have any more trouble along this particular line. One thing I remember is a bug bear of my own childhood. To this day I can remember the hurt of it. Perhaps I was over sensitive. Yet I have remembered it in dealing with my own. My good mother, well meaning woman, had a habit of correcting and reproving me in the presence of whomever happened to be present, strangers or otherwise. How well I remember the humiliation that overwhelmed me, long after the rebuke or the cause of it. I think we should consider the feelings of our children and they will honor us for it.

I have heard it said that a child whose spirit has been crushed or broken by constant fault finding and punishment is marred for life. The inferiority complex we hear so much about nowadays is often the result of this. It is a wise parent who knows just where to draw the line.

When we consider the splendid men and women our foreparents reared, we feel we might well learn of them in many ways. It remains to be seen what our present day methods will produce. I think we are all sincere in trying to do our very best to have our children grow up worthy men and women. We do not desire perfect children; no natural healthy child but what has naughty spells. Save me from the self-conscious faultless little prig used as examples in our childhood.

Someone wiser than the most of us has told us that if we train up a child in the way he should go, when he is old he will not depart from it.

We are bound to make mistakes, being human, but we're not so old but that we may learn. I think "Bobbie" will bring her boy safely to manhood if she goes on as she has commenced.

Yours sincerely,
ADASTIA."

Dear Miriam:

Pardon me, that name is not correct is it—but it is so appropriate for you that for this once I want to use it anyway, and while I was thinking this in my mind this morning I turned over the leaves of my Bible to find the passage in the Old Testament and opened it at the very page where it reads: "And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went after her with timbrels and with dances. And Miriam answered them, 'Sing ye to the Lord for He hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea.'"

Yes, dear Miriam, the good God has so arranged his laws that the evil which one would do another like a Boomerang returns to him. No. The Almighty does not delight in punishing anyone, but it's a case of necessity in order to protect those who seek His aid and who believe in His love, His power and justice. For instance, there was "Thinker's." There was no justice and no kindness, no gentle consideration that you were a woman seeking to help other women, but ther was downright cruelty and injustice in his letter to you, but never mind, Miriam, you have some valiant warriors at your call.

Well now, what do you think of this, I had already scribbled out the above when staring me in the face in to-night's paper was another he-male, another horse and his rider whose chariot wheels will stick in the mud and the waters which had parted for the faithful will come down and ingulf the evil. (Such a letter, insulting.) Miriam, my dear, methinks there is fear in these men such as gripped the men in the royal palace of Ahasuerus when Vashti refused to do the King's bidding—Esther 1, 16 to the end. May I say to "Another Thinker" that I am a married woman of over thirty years' standing, I am 53 years of age—old enough to know a man when I meet one, and with something akin to reverence in my inmost soul when I meet a man who still has chivalry and tenderness in his heart toward women and children, and if he wants his place in the sun, let him know he must be worthy of it before he gets it. No woman can respect or love a male of his type. I cannot call him a man for there are certain qualities which go to make a MAN.

For many years too I have been a sincere believer in God and His Divine Providence, and which just recently has been intensified and confirmed, for I have learned and experienced that not merely in a general sense does He rule, but in a particular sense, and I have a conviction, Miriam, that your so-called puerile page is going to increase in power till no "Thinker" of the type we have had recently dare write their thoughts for these pages. I suggest, Miriam, that you invite the opinions of men who have a different viewpoint. With this I close, thanking you for using other contributions I'll sign myself "Another Thinker" did only I mean it, and he didn't.

Yours affectionately,
MRS. M. B.

P.S.—I was looking in the dictionary to find the meaning of the word "Asinine" which our learned correspondent uses when speaking of the qualities of your column (am simple-minded myself and content myself with using ordinary languages which a child might understand). I see it means having the nature or characteristics of an ass, but I happen to know through reading Swedenburg the spiritual meaning of ass when used in the Scriptures—it means "Eternal Truth" and an ox "Eternal Good." Not so bad to have those chacacteristics after all. But let me tell you what he says of the unregenerate man, he is a "Wild Beast," such as wild hogs, tigers, panthers, leopards, and such like. Very true, we have the proof."

Yours is a pretty conceit, "Mrs. M. B.", in calling me "Miriam." Since I was christened "Marion," however, I don't think I can change now!

Thanks for your letter, so inspiring.

"Dear Marion:

I am enclosing a stamped envelope as you suggested in the Whatnot to-night, as I would very much like the instructions for decorating the Christmas tree.

Thank you for the instructions about buying and cooking meat. I read your page every night, and enjoy it very much.

I am a silent reader of your page. I received your helps some time ago. I have tried them and find them very easy to work from. I have also tried many of the recipes sent in, and I find them very pleasing.

I am also sending in one of my family's favorite recipes. I wish you would send me the Christmas ideas. I am sending in your coupon which I have marked.

Thanks, "Norway," for the recipe and for your nice letter. I hope you have decided to forsake your silence in favor of taking a part in our discussions.

"Dear Marion:

Three cheers for your answer to this second would-be thinker. Imagine how old Socrates would turn in his grave if he read the letter supposed to be written by this "thinker." I wonder?

As far as the modern girl displaying "about three dollars' worth of transparent silk hose," why does he look, since such sights shock him so? There was an article in a Toronto paper some time ago that said that we should walk with our heads in the air admiring the beautiful sky and trees. If "Another Thinker" dislikes the sights on George Street, tell him to walk up some other street or take a tip from me and admire the wonders of nature.

FASHION'S FORCAST.

RUSSIAN SUIT.

A comfortable smart style for small boys for playtime is the suit with straight shorts and Russian blouse, as it is so easily laundered, and simple for the little man of 2, 4, 6 and 8 years to dress himself with the blouse that opens down the front. It is shown in nile green chambray with trimming in deeper tone of same color with pearl buttons. Linen in Royal blue with white contrast, tan pique with brown, French blue wool jersey, navy blue wool rep, or home-spun in grey tones with plain grey, are attractive ideas for Style No. 2683. It is remarkably easy to make, at a saving well worth while. Pattern price 20 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred). Our patterns are made by the leading Fashion Designers of New York City and are guaranteed to fit perfectly. Address Marion, Examiner.

Forty years seems a long time back. I wonder how he remembers so vividly. It must have been funny to see the women hurrying around trying so hard not to split the hooks and eyes off. I'm sorry I missed it. Since he is such an authority on the way women should dress, I should like to know what he considers proper to wear. A man that would write such a leter as he, deserves no better than 'double pneumonia' and a 'few years on the hill.'

I also think he has a lot of nerve to sign himself 'affectionately.' I fail to see any reason for his endearing close. If he doesn't like your page, why does he read it? I find your page very interesting and the helps are fine.

The stories written by the women are great. I never thought there were so many authoresses belonging to the page. I vote for the Big Sister column. I hope I'm not boring you with this long epistle, I have some good recipes that you might like.

Sincerely,
JEANNIE.

City.

P.S.—I think "Another Thinker" wanted to see his name in print. If there are any other would-be thinkers ready to air their views, so am I."

That is a challenge, "Jeannie," but I hope you are not called upon to champion women's cause. There are lots more constructive things we might be doing—with men's kind permission. I'm glad you enjoy our pages so well, and I'll be looking forward to receiving the recipes and more letters. Better send your name and address to book that pen name.

"Dear Marion:

This is my first letter, but I have thought of writing you several times. I think your page is wonderful and the recipes are all good. I read every item of your page and enjoy it very much, and our evening paper is worth reading since you have started. Hoping you will be able to continue. Wishing you a Merry Christmas.

Enclosed you will find a recipe for a Christmas Cake which I know is good and a recipe for a home-made polishing cloth.

"Dear Marion:

May I step in with the rest? I have been a silent reader of your most interesting page for some time. But a bit backward in writing. I am enclosing a coupon for 4c for which please send the helps checked.

For those that are troubled with their feet hurting, try bathing them in as hot water as the feet can stand, with a teaspoon of mustard in it. This gives a wonderful relief.

FLORENCE W."

City.

Thanks for your nice appreciation, "Florence W." and best wishes.

"Dear Marion:

I did admire the restraint and dignity with which you replied to that "Assinine" and "puerile" brain storm of "Another Thinker."

Wouldn't you wonder why anyone troubled to raise such a conceited self-centred specimen of hu-"man"-ity? That someone did, speaks volumes for the long suffering patience of a woman. I just cannot let him have the last word (that's another privilege a woman claims). He has evidently been used to having his own way too long. My, what a spoiled boy he must have been! I simply have to answer him and I ask no odds. Let the best man win.

Won't you realize that you were born a thousand years too late, 'Another Thinker'? You would have flourished in the dark ages. Where have you been all your life anyway? Probably framing rules and regulations for the guidance of the unfortunate feminine members of your household (if any). I can think of no more terrible fate for any woman than to be condemned to "obey" a creature of your calibre. You see I'm not handling you with velvet gloves. You need a good, hard slap! Don't you know that this same word "obey" was put into the marriage ceremony by another man (maybe an ancestor of yours?) Now who would not prefer to live and die an old maid than to be the chattel of a man like you? I'll undertake to say that you are a domestic tyrant if you are a married man and that your wife is not allowed to even choose the color of her frocks.

Speaking of dress, the present style of which does not suit your valuable (?) ideas. What think you of the hoop skirt and bustle? They'd just make a hit with you, of course, for why? Because they were so restraining. I marvel how women kept their health and strength, the way their movements were hampered. No wonder so many of them spent half their lives on a couch. It was easier than trying to walk! Wouldn't you be at home in China where the women's feet are bound and distorted so they can just barely hobble?

How come that a man of your Napoleonic brain power has condescended to notice these transparent silk hose? Are you ignorant of the fact that as far as having pneumonia is concerned, there are far more men (muffled from head to toe) stricken down with that malady than there are women? Truly as you said there is enough bitterness in life. The cup must be full to the brim where you live.

Don't you realize that you cannot judge all womankind by a few who go to extremes any more than we judge mankind by the dancing sheik or lounge lizard who is abroad in the land. How ancient of you to talk of women expecting a man to take care of them. If there is anything more helpless than a man in sickness I'd like to know what it is, and in health if his mind is not too narrow to admit the idea he will acknowledge that a woman does her share where work is concerned. She doesn't quit when the whistle blows nor does she have her meals set in front of her ready to eat after a hard day's work. Well, I'm aware that although I 'spoke with the tongue of angels' I would not convince you, a lord of creation, that women have an "equal right" with men or indeed any rights at all. But you see I like to get something off my chest too.

One thing puzzles me. Not you. Your type is obvious. But why oh why bother to read anything written on this "puerile" page of ours? It is not written to interest men. Why you would even deny us a page of our own. Tiberius. 'My, how those home truths concerning men must have gone home'! Got beneath your skin in fact. I think Marion would be flattered at drawing such attention from you. It's such a give-away.

Well, 'Another Thinker,' if you would just take your "place in the sun" the one you call "Man's" and stay there until you get a sun stroke the world would be none the poorer. You certainly can lay no claim to chivalry; by your own words you have condemned yourself a small tyrant living in a world of your own fashioning. You know the homely old saying that one must not expect much from a pig but the-er-customery grunt.

I am no "female dreadnought" and I do not admire mankind in general sufficiently to care to be like him. No, I'm just a very ordinary married woman but luckily possessed of a husband who does not judge a woman's character or morals by the length of her skirt. Foolish man! To allow the present change of things in general is partly due to the fact that women are not sweeping the dirt off the sidewalks with her skirts or wearing cotton stockings! You give us credit for too much influence I think. You know quite well what is the real cause of any chaos there may be in the world: the aftermath of a cruel war engineered by man of course!

The "mind's the measure of the man." I think yours would fit into a very small space.

Yours lovingly (?)
More Chaos."

That SHOULD finish "Another Thinker," I think, "More Chaos." But what's the use?

"Dear Marion:

Your pages are exceedingly interesting and among the first I turn to. You certainly gave "Another Thinker" his answer to-night. We, too, enjoy Miss Crawford's poems and have for a number of years. I am also fond of Mr. Lampman's poems. Do you know the one enti led "Frogs." May I too, have some of your helps as marked on the enclosed? Thanking you and with best wishes for the coming season and continued success.

Yours sincerely,

FAVORITE RECIPE.

CHRISTMAS CAKE.
(Mrs. J. S. Stewart Street)

2 pound currants.
2 pound raisins (seeded).
1-2 pound peel.
1-2 pound shelled almonds.
1 pound chopped dates.
1-2 pound cherries.
1-2 cup sour milk.
1-2 cup baking syrup.
1 pound butter.
6 eggs.
6 cups flour.
2 Tsp. pastry spice.
Bottle of vanilla.
1 tsp. of baking soda.
A little salt.
1 pound brown sugar.
Make a stiff batter.

This makes a three-storey cake of 10 pounds, and requires 3½ hours' cooking.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

It is an old-world saying that every member of the family must have a hand in the stirring of the Christmas pudding. That brings good luck. In fact, making the Christmas pudding is very nearly as much of a ceremony as eating it.

The chances are that you aren't making a Christmas pudding at all. You may prefer mince pie—or you may buy your pudding, in a tin or from a bakery store. It is usually more economical to do so, unless you have decided to make quite a number of puddings some of which you are giving away for Christmas.

But that idea about luck coming to those who have a hand in mixing the pudding is a good one. It suggests cheerful scenes in old-time kitchens, more picturesque than convenient, and an actual lightening of the cook's pre-Christmas tasks by this sharing of the work. And I wouldn't be a bit surprised if that old adage had its origin in this desire on the part of old-time housewives to lighten the work of preparation by getting co-operation from every member of the household.

Let's extend the old saying in our own household. The burden of the preparations for Christmas ought not to rest on one pair of shoulders. Everyone ought to have a hand. It is lucky to help stir the Christmas pudding. Well, then, it's lucky too to help wrap the Christmas packages, to make the Christmas favors, to hang the greens, to run errands, to do the shopping, to dust and sweep and put the house in apple pie order—to help do all the things in anticipation of the happy holiday that so often fall to the lot of the mother of the house alone.

TAFFY.

(Contributed by "Unknown")

2 cups brown sugar.
2 tablespoons vineagr.
Butter the size of a walnut.
Pinch of salt.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
Enough water to make thick paste.

Boil until hardens in cold water and do not stir after sugar is melted and never scrape out the dish. If nuts are wanted place in buttered dish and pour taffy over them.

The staff of the Haboco Stores entertained this week at the home of Mr and Mrs. H. J. Boyle, 514 Weller street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Agnew, whose marriage took place recently. The evening was spent in the enjoyment of music and games, followed by the service of dainty refreshments. Mr. W. T. Wilson, of Montreal, on behalf of the employees, presented Mr. and Mrs. Agnew with a case of flat silverware, which was acknowledged suitably by Mr. Agnew. Mr F. Another item in the 'Y' program last evening was a charming rendition of Christmas carols by Trinity choir, led by Miss Mabel Clarry, sung in the open air around the Christmas tree on the lawn. This tree, which casts a bright and pleasing light over the snow, with its colored lights, will be casting its radiance until Christmas day, and forms a pleasing bit of color on the 'Y' corner. Carolsols sung last evening by the group of singers clustered around it included "The First Noel," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," "Good King Wenceslas," and "Silent Night, Holy Night." Light refreshments were served later in the green room, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner pouring coffee.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

WE HAVE been reading and talking a lot lately about buying Christmas presents. Let us suppose all the shopping for the Christmas of 1982 has been done, and turn toward something which is important too—the planning of the menu for Christmas Day.

• • • • • • •

The menu may be simple, yet substantial. In making your plans for dinner, it is well to decide what the main course will be and the rest may be added to that.

• • • • • • •

And when making familiar dishes, it would be lovely and in keeping with the season, to supply a little decorative touch that will make them attractive, but still a little different from the usual.

• • • • • • •

The holiday colors of red and green are very simple to introduce. Very attractive garnishes can be made of pimento, cherries, lettuce, parsley and cranberries. Cranberry sherbet would be a delightful contrast to the othe dishes, lending a colorful note.

• • • • • • •

For the supper, light refreshments would be fitting to close the day of feasting. The main dish might be a substantial salad, and dainty sandwiches may be served. A fruit salad served and dainty sandwiches followed by cake and coffee would make an excellent light meal.

• • • • • • •

There are still a number of helps left for this week—directions for making the new wool and velvet trimmings, which are very simple.

• • • • • • •

There are a number of helps left for Christmas games and menus, Christmas Gift Suggestions and Christmas Decorating which the neighbors should send for this week.

• • • • • • •

Do you remember a few weeks ago I suggested getting your Christmas card list ready? Are you remembering with a little postcard, aged inmates of our different institutions?

• • • • • • •

Of course I do not expect you to act as Santa's pals to little children and to these aged people too, but those who do not see their way clear to contribute a parcel, might be able to send some little cards.

• • • • • • •

It is not yet too late to bring Christmas cheer to these, perhaps friendless, aged people, especially those in our many institutions in Peterborough, for whom Christmas does not mean very much. I knew of a lady who sent cards to these people last year, and the kind words spoken more than rewarded her.

• • • • • • •

Even if Santa does not come to all the little children in Peterborough, which I know will not be the case because of the kindness of our readers, they are still young and their spirits will not be crushed for very long, although it is sad to think of their spirits being crushed so early in life. But the spirits of old people have gone, leaving them depressed and often dependent upon young folks for their happiness.

• • • • • • •

Of course they are very happy when being entertained throughout the year as they are by such organizations as Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs and Sunday School classes, but this happiness may not last very long.

• • • • • • •

It seemed so terrible to read of the old man and his wife who were forced, a couple of weeks ago, to leave their home which they had worked so hard to have, and come to one of our institutins provided for such unfortunate people.

• • • • • • •

Disappointments such as these, prick the inner tube of the heart and they become a flat tire, as it were. It is necessary then that we should try to fill it again with some new joy, so that they will not brood upon their loss. It is a worthy work to find things to keep old people forever happy.

• • • • • • •

Although you cannot tell by looking at them, it has been found that it is very, very hard indeed for some old people to always look on the bright side of life.

• • • • • • •

In many cases, physical pain and torture deprives them of a great many enjoyable things in life, and they realize that they are gradually slipping down the hill, instead of coming up.

• • • • • • •

Mysteries, thrills and surprises together with good health which nearly every youth possesses are absent when age creeps on.

• • • • • • •

We all travel at the same rate a year, and in due time those of us who are young and enjoying life with all its luxuries, will become aged. Wouldn't it be nice if someone could invent something to keep old folks happy 365 days in the year, instead of just at intervals throughout the season?

• • • • • • •

This Christmas season, when goodwill abounds on every side would be an excellent time to begin. Have a kind word for the old people whenever you come in contact with them, and their smile will be your rich reward.

• • • • • • •

I read this thought somewhere the other day, and it impressed me very much. It is a quotation from W. E. Barton: "I spoke a kind word, almost thoughtlessly, and a long time afterwards one thanked me for it, with tears in his eye. Then I thought, since kindness costs so little and helps so much, why am I not always kind?"

• • • • • • •

So from now on, always be kind to everyone and see how much it will help.

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

DECEMBER 21, 1928

"You have given us articles by French, British, Irish, Scotch and Canadian writers," says 'Mrs. C. B.', "and now I would like to see one by an Italian." And so to-day, we have a story from the "Decameron," by Giovanni Boccaccio, Italian novelist, poet and scholar, born 1313, died December 21 1375. The "Decameron" is a collection of one hundred stories, supposed to have been related by ladies and gentlemen who fled to a country villa to escape the plague of 1348.

ITALIAN PRACTICAL JOKING

There dwelt not long since, in our city of Florence, a place which has indeed always possessed a variety of character and manners, a painter named Calandrino, a man of simple mind, and much addicted to novelties. The most part of his time he spent in the company of two brother painters, the one called Bruno, and other Buffalmacco, both men of humor and mirth, and somewhat satirical. These men often visited Calandrino, and found much entertainment in his original and unaffected simplicity of mind. There lived in Florence at the same time a young man of very engaging manners, witty, and agreeable, called Maso del Saggio, who, hearing of the extreme simplicity of Calandrino, resolved to derive some amusement from his love of the marvelous, and to excite his curiosity by some real novel and wonderful tales. Happening, therefore, to meet him one day in the church of St. John, and observing him attentively engaged in admiring the painting and sculpture of the tabernacle, which had been lately placed over the altar in that church, he thought he had found a fit opportunity of putting his scheme in execution, and acquainting one of his friends with his intentions, they walked together to the spot where Calandrino was seated by himself, and seeming not to be aware of his presence, began to converse between themselves of the qualities of various kinds of precious stones, of which Maso spoke with all the confidence of an experienced and skillful lapidary. Calandrino lent a ready ear to their conference, and rising from his seat, and perceiving from their loud speaking that their conversation was not of a private nature, he accosted them.

Maso was not a little delighted at this, and pursuing his discourse, Calandrino at length asked him where these stones were to be found. Maso replied: "They mostly abound in Berlinzone, near a city of the Baschi, in a country called Bengodi, in which the vines are tied with sausages, a goose is sold for a penny, and the goslings given into the bargain; where there is also a high mountain made of Parmesan grated cheese, whereon dwell people whose sole employ is to make macaroni and other dainties, boiling them with capon broth, and afterwards throwing them out to all who choose to catch them; and near to the mountain runs a river of white wine, the best that was ever drunk, and without one drop of water in it."

"Oh!" exclaimed Calandrino, "what a delightful country to live in! but pray, sir, tell me, what do they with the capons after they have boiled them?"

"The Baschi," said Maso, "eat them all!"

"Have you," said Calandrino, "ever been in that country?"

"How," answered Maso, "do you ask me, if I were ever there? a thousand times at least!"

"And how far, I pray you, is this happy land from our city?" quoth Calandrino.

"In truth," replied Maso, "the miles are scarcely to be numbered; but for the most part we travel when we are in our beds at night, and if a man dream aright, he may be there in a few minutes."

"Surely, sir," said Calandrino, "it is further hence than to Abruzzo?"

"Undoubtedly," replied Maso, "but to a willing mind no travel is tedious."

Calandrino, observing that Maso delivered all these speeches with a steadfast and grave countenance, and without any gesture that he could construe into distrust, gave as much credit to them as to any matter of manifest truth, and said with much simplicity: "Believe me, sir, the journey is too far for me to undertake, but if it were somewhat nearer I should like to accompany you thither to see them make this macaroni, and take my fill of it. But now we are conversing, allow me, sir, to ask you whether dance with present arrangements will motor to Buckingham palace, where he will stay.

Council Meets.

While the physicians were attending His Majesty in the sick chamber, the council of state which was appointed to act for the King during his illness, held a brief privy council in another part of the palace. The council transacted routine business and a number of questions arising out of the adjournment of parliament were settled. All of the six counsellors were present. The Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Premier Baldwin, the Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Hailsham, the Lord High Chancellor. It was understood that the Queen presided.

Others who attended the council meeting were Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary; Walter Guinness, Minister of Agriculture; the Earl of Cromer, Lord Chamberlain, and Maurice Hankey, Clerk of the Council.

The proceedings lasted less than half an hour.

Prince George, the youngest son of the King, who left New York aboard the steamship Berengaria last week, was expected at Southampton this afternoon.

Contrary to an erroneous report from Cherbourg that he had taken off in a seaplane for London, the Cunard officers stated that he had remained on board the Berengaria.

through the night, having an awesome appearance.

Spectators Watch Flames.

The incessant hissing of escaping gas and the roaring of the flames with intermittent minor explosions among the surrounding stillness in the night and early morning gave an eerie impression to spectators. West End society people mingled in the crowds, attracted by the weird spectacles, women in fashionable opera cloaks and men in evening dress spending hours looking on from behind the cordons of police. The flames located in the centre of the roadway were allowed to burn, being considered in the nature of a safety valve, using some of the accumulations of escaped gas lodged underground, and it was hoped that in this way the gas would eventually burn itself out.

Occasionally through the night some refugees returned to their homes to collect personal belongings, these being carried away in suit cases or bundles made with bedsheets. Others spent the night in the large restaurants nearby, which keep open at all hours. A roaring trade was done here though the variety of food available was restricted by the cutting off of gas-cooking services. Not a pipe was lit or a cigarette smoked in the whole affected area during the night because of the danger of escaping gas. "No smoking" notice were prominently posted up at strategic points.

NO CONTEST FOR CITY MAYOR

has arranged to be held in the Collegiate Institute on the evening of December 26. This meeting is for the purpose of giving the citizens of Peterborough a chance to inquire into and satisfy themselves, of the merits of the Gas by-law which has received the support of the whole council.

"I thank you and wish you one and all the compliments of the season and a very merry Christmas," concluded His Worship.

Accomplished a Great Work

"I wish to extend to the mayor my own hearty congratulations on his appointment" said James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce. "I feel" he continued "that Mayor Denne has accomplished great work in his one year. In a civic capacity every man must receive and generally expects criticism, criticism of a constructive nature is all right and is generally welcomed but the kind that hurts is the unkind, often unfair criticism which is sometimes levelled at a man; it hurts and cuts deep. With such a man as Mayor Denne at the helm every man should get behind him. I hope to see Peterborough grow and in the direction I hope that both the Gas By-law and shrdlushrdlushrdlu Gas Plant by-law and Johnson Motor's by-law receive the full support of every citizen at the polls, said Mr. Dutton.

"Gentlemen, I appreciate very much your appointing me to the Utilities Commission for the next three years," said Gordon Matthews, newly re-appointed commissioner. "We will have some real problems to face during the next three years and some plans for the future power situation will have to be made. There is a yearly increase in the demand of electric power in the city of from 600 to 700 horsepower and that demand will be even greater this coming year; some plans must be made and a means worked out to fulfill that increase.

"There are good men on the Commission who represent fairly and work for the citizens of the city and we will continue to do so."

The mayor in speaking again reiterated the need of the support of the two by-laws. "The Johnson Outboard Motors will become one of the best factories we have; just like the Westclox has grown. It is a big company which intend to manufacture here not only enough to supply Canada, but also the British market. Then there are other manufacturers who are watching what we are going to do with the Johnson Motor by-law before they will come and look over the city with the object of locating here. It is the duty of everyone to turn out and vote and support the two by-laws. At the public meeting we intend to have it free and easy so that every citizen may ask questions which will be answered by a specialist from the Hydro of Toronto." In closing the mayor again praised the work of the council last year, commenting on the brief business-like meetings and amount of work that was accomplished.

Alderman Walter Stocker expressed his confidence in the Johnson Motor By-law prophecying that the factory would grow as did the Westclox, which started in one room.

The meeting ended with the singing of God Save the King.

KIWANIS HEAR FINE ADDRESS

Art of Training Memory Is Described By Herbert F. Irwin of Toronto.

HOW TO REMEMBER.

"The Person Who Remembers, Succeeds," was written across the card, handed Kiwanians at their luncheon to-day by Herbert F. Irwin, of Toronto, the guest speaker who delivered one of the most novel, concise and yet practical addresses heard locally for some time. Mr. Irwin, whose company teaches the art of memory training, not only gave the Kiwanians something to wonder about by his exhibitions of memory work, but went on to explain his system, whereby he names (by way of example), all of fifteen articles, the names of which had been written on a blackboard; by which he identified persons of slight acquaintance and remembers to discharge any of a large number of business duties, in their proper order.

How to Remmber Names

Pointing out that the most common trick of memory is failure to remember names, Mr. Irwin went on to stress the fundamentals by which such a weakness might be overcome. The first of the four he called "interest" and showed the value of becoming interested in the person to whom one may be introduced. Then, under the heading of "Attention" he stressed the importance of making sure of the name, even by asking that it be repeated, while by the third fundamental, "Observation," he meant that one should make close observation of the features and shape of a face.

The fourth and last fundamental he called a combination of the first three, namely "Association," declaring that some of the ways of remembering names should be by associating them with animals, flowers, minerals, birds, colors, objects, people of national fame, or other acquaintances.

Memory Filing System.

The more fascinating phase of the address, however, was the way in which, by using a series of key words, the speaker was able to name off many objects in the order that they were called out, or in an other order. The key words had a certain relation, one to the other and by following them, Mr. Irwin pointed out that a man might remember to carry on his work with the proper duty presenting itself for discharge at the time intended. He stressed the importance of memorizing the key words, and in conclusion, extended the season's greetings to the Kiwanians.

Jhn R. Marshall moved the vote of thanks in a capable manner. Previous to the address, Edward Wainman had been named booster for the day and his prizes went to F. G. Stinson, H. McCannon, W. E. Taylor and P. Bond.

All Brought Presents.

To the meeting to-day, all brought small prizes which were placed in boxes to be given around to the less fortunate children of the city. This afternoon through the courtesy of the Border Transit Company, the children of St Vincent's Orphanage and of the Shelter are enjoying a ride about the city and an entertainment in the Paragon tea room, sponsored by the Kiwanis club.

INDUSTRIALS MAKE GAINS AT NEW YORK

High Priced Specialties Marked up Six To Eight Points.

DIVIDEND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Market Becomes Firmer in Face of Further Stiffening of Call Money Rates.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—The stock market gave an impressive demonstration of strength to-day in the face of a further stiffening in call money rates. Prices of several of the high priced specialties were marked up eight to sixteen points, while a long line of standard industrials and rails moved up one to nearly six points. Trading however, showed a marked contraction in volume.

Call money renewed at eight per cent. and advanced to nine when banks called about $25,000,000 in loans. Time money was firm at 8¼ per cent. for the shorter dates and 7½ for the long maturities.

There were several favorable dividend announcements during the day including the resumption of payments on the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company and the declaration of a $9 extra by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal Company.

Merchandising shares continued to respond to reports of record-breaking holiday trade.

Radio ran up fourteen points to 375, which is exactly one hundred points above the low level touched in the reaction earlier in the month.

Doctors Remove Tack From the Lung Of Young Child In Nicholls Hospital

When little four-year-old Patsy Elliott accidentally swallowed a tack at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Elliott, Frank Street, there was grave concern for her well-being. Patsy seemed to be carrying on successfully, but there was danger of an abscess forming, for the tack had lodged in her lung.

That was the reason for a most unusual operation performed at Nicholls Hospital at about five o'clock on Thursday afternoon, by Dr. N. D. Buchanan, assisted by Dr. Edward H. Wood. Locating the tack by X-ray he worked with a tube, inserted in the child's throat and down to where the windpipe branched into the lung, where was located the tack. Then by means of specially designed instruments, Dr. Buchanan was able to work the tack free and remove it. Patsy is convalescing.

NEW TREATY IS DISCUSSED

Great Britain and United States May Draw Up New Arbitration Agreement.

MAKING CAREFUL INQUIRY.

LONDON, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press)—The possibility of a new arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States received official attention in the House of Commons yesterday, just before that body adjourned for the Christmas recess.

The attention merely indicated that such a pact was receiving some consideration.

The discussion followed questioning of Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, by Liberal members, with reference to evacuation of the Rhineland, Anglo-American relations, and relations with the Soviet.

Referring to Anglo-American relations, Sir Austen said he profoundly regretted that a little cloud had come over them recently, but that he refused to believe that between two nations, both so peacefully-minded and so friendly to one another, these passing differences were going to create any permanent disturbance of relations.

He then referred to the arbitration treaty, and said that His Majesty's government had made a very careful inquiry and consideration of the very large issues involved, but had not yet reached a conclusion which enabled it to proceed further in negotiations with the United States government.

DAILY READING

or not any of the precious stones you just now spoke of are to be found in that country?"

"Yes, indeed," replied Maso, "there are two kinds of them to be found in those territories, and both possessing eminent virtues. The one kind are the sandstones of Settignano, and of Montisci, which are of such excellent quality that when millstones or grindstones are to be made, they knead the sand as they do meal, and make them in what form they please, in which respect they have a saying there, That grace is from God, millstones from Montisci! Such plenty are there of these and millstones, so lightly here esteemed among us as emeralds are with them, that there are whole mountains of them far greater than our Montemorello, which shine with a prodigious brightness at midnight, if you will believe me. They moreover cut and polish these millstones, and enchase them in rings, which are sent to the great Soldan, who gives whatever price they ask for them. The other is a stone which most of our lapidaries call heliotropium, and is of admirable virtue, for whoever carries it about his person is thereby rendered invisible as long as he pleases."

Calandrino then said, "This is wonderful indeed; but where else are these latter kind to be found?"

To which Maso replied, "They are not infrequently to be found on our Mugnone."

"Of what size and color is this stone?" said Calandrino.

"It is of various sizes," replied Maso, "some larger than others, but uniformly black."

Calandrino, treasuring up all these things in his mind, and pretending to have some urgent business on hand, took leave of Maso, secretly proposing to himself to go in quest of these stones; but resolved to do nothing until he had first seen his friends Bruno and Buffalmacco, to whom he was much attached. He went therefore immediately in pursuit of them, in order that they three might have the honor of first discovering these stones, and consumed the whole morning in looking for them. At last recollecting that they were painting in the convent of the sirters of Feenza, neglecting all other affairs, and though the cold was extreme, he ran to them in all haste, and thus addressed them:—

"My good friends, if you will follow my advice, we three may shortly become the richest men in Florence, for I have just now learnt from a man of undeniable veracity, that in Mugnone there is to be found a stone which renders any person that carries it about him invisible at his pleasure; and if you will be persuaded by me, we will all three go there before any one else to look for it, and we shall find it to a certainty, because I know its description; and when we have found it, we have nothing to do but to put it in our pockets, and go to the tables of the bankers and money changers, which we see daily loaded with gold and silver, and help ourselves to as much as we please. Nobody can detect us, for we shall be invisible, and we shall thus speedily become rich without toiling all day on these church walls like slimy snails, as we poor artists are forced to do."

Bruno and Buffalmacco, hearing this, began to smile, and, looking archly at each other, seemed to express their surprise, and greatly commended the advice of Calandrino. Buffalmacco then asked Calandrino what the stone was called. Calandrino, who had but a stupid memory, had utterly forgotten the name of the stone, and therefore said, "What need have we of the name, since we are so well assured of its virtues? Let us not delay any longer, but go off in search of it."

"But of what shape is it?" said Bruno.

Calandrino replied: "They are to be found of all shapes, but uniformly black: therefore it seems to me that we had better collect all the stones that we find black, and we shall then be certain to find it among them: but let us depart without further loss of time."

Bruno signified his assent; but turning to Buffalmacco said: "I fully agree with Calandrino, but I do not think that this is the proper time for our search as the sun is now high, and is so hot that we shall find all the stones on Mugnone dried, and parched, and the very blackest will now seem whitest. But in the morning, when the dew is on the ground, and before the sun has dried the earth, every stone will have its true color. Besides, there are many laborers now working in the plain, who, seeing us occupied in so serious a search, may guess what we are seeking for, and may chance to find the stones before us, and we may then have our labor for our pains. Therefore, in my opinion, this is an enterprise that should be taken in hand early in the morning, when the black stones will be easily distinguished from the white, and the festival day were the best of all others, as there will be nobody abroad to discover us."

Buffalmacco applauded the advice of Bruno, and Calandrino assenting to it, they agreed that Sunday morning next ensuing should be the time when they would all go in pursuit of the stone, but Calandrino entreated them above all things not to reveal it to any person living, as it was confided to him in secrecy. Falling therefore on other subjects, Calandrino told them the wonders he had heard of the land of Bengodi, maintaining with solemn oaths and protestations that they were all true. Calandrino then took his departure, and the other two agreed upon the course they should pursue with him for their own amusement.

Calandrino waited impatiently for the Sunday morning, when he called upon his companions before break of day. They all three went out of the city at the gate of San Gallo, and did not halt until they came to the plain of Mugnone, where they immediately commenced their search for the marvellous stone Calandrino went stealing on before the other two, persuading himself that he was born to find the heliotropium: and looking on every side of him, he rejected all other stones but the black, with which he first filled his breast, and afterwards both his pockets. He then took off his large painting apron, which he fastened with his girdle in the manner of a sack, and filled it also: and still not satisfied, he spread about his cloak, which being also loaded with stones, he bound up carefully for fear of losing the very least of them. Buffalmacco and Bruno during this time attentively eyed Calandrino, and observing that he had now completely loaded himself, and that their dinner hour was drawing nigh, Bruno, according to their scheme of merriment, said to Buffalmacco, pretending not to see Calandrino, although he was not far from them, "Buffalmacco, what is become of Calandrino?"

Buffalmacco, who saw him close at hand, gazing all around as if desirous to find him, replied, "I saw him even now before us hard by."

"Undoubtedly," said Bruno, "he has given us the slip, and gone secretly home to dinner, and making fools of us, has left us to pick up black stones on these scorching plains of Mugnone."

"Indeed he has served us right," said Buffalmacco, "for allowing ourselves to be gulled by such stories, nor could any but we two have been so credulous as to believe in the virtues of this heliotropium."

Calandrino, hearing them make use of these words while he stood so near to them, imagined that he had possessed himself of the genuine stone, and that by virtue of its qualities he was become invisible to his companions. His joy was now unbounded, and without saying a word he resolved to return home with all speed, leaving his friends to provide for themselves.

Buffalmacco, perceiving his intent, said to Bruno, "Why should we remain here any longer? Let us return to the city."

To which Bruno replied: "Yes! let us go: but I vow to God, Calandrino shall no more make a fool of me, and were I now as near him as I was not long since, I would give him such a remembrance on the heel with this flint stone, as should stick by him for a month, and teach him a lasting lesson for abusing his friends:" and ere he had well finished his words, he struck Calandrino a violent blow on the heel with the stone. Though the blow was evidently very painful, Calandrino still preserved his silence, and only mended his pace. Buffalmacco, then selecting another large flint stone, said to Bruno, "Thou seest this pebble! If Calandrino were but here, he should have a brave knock on the loins:" and taking aim, he threw it, and struck Calandrino a violent blow on the back; and then all the way along the plain of Mugnone they did nothing but pelt him with stones, jesting and laughing until they came to the gates of San Gallo. They then threw down the remainder of the stones they had gathered, and stepping before Calandrino into the gateway, acquainted the guards with the whole matter; who, in order to support the jest, would not seem to see Calandrino as he passed by them, and were exceedingly amused to observe him sweat and groan under his burthensome load.

Without resting himself in any place, he proceeded straight to his own house, which was situated near to the mills: fortune favoring along the river side, and afterwards through part of the city, he was neither met nor seen by any one, as everybody was then at dinner. Calandrino, ready to sink under his burthen, at length entered his own house. His wife, a handsome and discreet woman of the name of Monna Tessa, happened to be standing at the head of the stairs on his arrival, and being disconcerted and impatient at his long absence, somewhat angrily exclaimed, "I thought that the devil would never let thee come home! All the city have dined, and yet we must remain without our dinner."

When Calandrino heard these words, and found that he was not invisible to his wife, he fell into a fit of rage, and exclaimed, "Wretch as thou art, thou hast utterly undone me: but I will reward thee for it:" and ascending into a small room, and there ridding himself of his burthen of stones, he ran down again to his wife, and seizing her by the hair of the head, and throwing her on the ground, beat and kicked her in the most unmerciful manner, giving her so many blows, in spite of all her tears and submission, that she was not able to move.

Buffalmacco and Bruno, after they had spent some time in laughter with the guards at the gate, followed Calandrino at their leisure, and arriving at the door of his house, and hearing the disturbance upstairs between Calandrino and his wife, they called out to him. Calandrino, still in a furious rage, came to the window, and entreated they would come up to him. They, counterfeiting great surprise, ascended the stairs, and found the chamber floor covered with stones, and Calandrino's wife seated in the corner, her limbs severely bruised, her hair dishevelled, and her face bleeding, and on the other side Calandrino himself wearied and exhausted, flung on a chair. After regarding him for some time, they said:—

"How now, Calandrino, art thou about building a house, that thou hast provided thyself with so many loads of stones?" and then added, "And, Monna Tessa! what has happened to her? You surely have been beating her. What is the meaning of this?"

Calandrino, exhausted with carrying the stones, and with his furious gust of passion, and moreover with the misfortune which he considered had befallen him, could not collect sufficient spirits to speak a single word in reply. Where upon Buffalmacco said further, "Calandrino, if you have cause for anger in any other quarter, yet you should not have made such mockery of your friends as you have done today, carrying us out to the plains of Mugnone, like a couple of fools, and leaving us there without taking leave of us, or so much as biding us good day. But be assured this is the last time thou wilt ever serve us in this manner."

Calandrino, somewhat recovered, replied, "Alas! my friends, be not offended; the case is very different to what you imagine. Unfortunate man that I am! the rare and precious stone that you speak of I found, and will relate the whole truth to you. You must know then, that when you asked each other the first time, what has become of me. I was hard by you, not more than two yards distance; and perceiving that you saw me not, I went before you, smiling to myself to hear you vent your rage upon me;" and proceeding in his discourse, he recounted all that had happened on his way home; and to convince them showed them where he was struck on the back and on the heel; and further added: "As I passed through the gates, I saw you standing with the guards, but by virtue of the stone I carried in my bosom, and undiscovered of you all, and in going through the streets I met many friends and acquaintances, who are in the daily habit of stopping and conversing with me, and yet none of them addressed me, as I passed invisible to them all. But at length arriving at my own house, this fiend of a woman waiting on the stairs' head, by ill luck happened to see me, as you well know that women cause all things to lose their virtue; so that I, who might have called myself the only happy man in Florence, am now the most miserable of all. Therefore did I justly beat her as long as my strength would allow me, and I know no reason why I should not yet tear her in a thousand pieces, for I may well curse the day of our marriage, and the hour she entered my house."

Buffalmacco and Bruno, when they heard this, feigned the greatest astonishment, though they were ready to burst with laughter, hearing Calandrino so confidently assert that he had found the wonderful stone, and lost it again by his wife's speaking to him. But when they saw him rise in a rage, with intent to beat her again, they stepped between them, protesting that his wife was in no wise to blame, but rather he himself, who knowing beforehand that women cause all things to lose their virtue, had not expressly commanded her not to be seen in his presence all that day, until he had satisfied himself of the real qualities of the stone; and that doubtless Providence had deprived him of this good fortune, because though his friends had accompanied him and assisted him in the search, he had deceived them, and had not allowed them to participate in the benefit of the discovery. After much more conversation they with difficulty reconciled him to his wife, and, leaving him overwhelmed with grief for the loss of the heliotropium, took their departure.

THE 1927 COUNCIL AND NEW SCHOOL

History of Part Played by Municipal Fathers in Erecting School.

In an address at the opening ceremonies of the new technical school reference was made to the part taken by the 1927 and the 1928 City Councils in connection with the school, and as a matter of history the following information has been given to The Examiner.

In June of 1927 the Board of Education met the Committee of the whole Council to consider the plans submitted by the Board which were unanimously approved of by the Council. In anticipation of the passing of the by-law by the City Council at their meeting on July 4, 1927, Mayor Holloway on July first broke ground for the school and at the meeting on July 4th the by-law was passed authorizing debentures to be issued to provide the necessary funds.

On December 5, 1927, the by-law of July 4th was rescinded and a new by-law passed to change the form of debenture so that it would be more saleable. These debentures were sold to Matthews & Co. in December 1927, printed and ready for the market in January, but Matthews & Co. asked that they be signed by the 1927 Mayor and consequently Mayor Holloway of 1927 Council signed the debentures and cleaned up the slate so far as accepting plans, and arranging finances for the building was concerned.

This information was given to The Examiner so that the 1927 Council would get its credit when the history of the new technical school was written.

HELD FOR MURDER ON JURY VERDICT

Rumanian Faces Charge Following Quarrel On Hamilton Street.

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—John Boychuj, a Rumanian, was named by a coroner's jury last night as the man responsible for the death of Nick Bomback. George Ballard, K.C., Crown Attorney, stated that a charge of murder would be laid against Boychuj as a result of the jury verdict. The jury heard a document read which purported to be a confession of the crime on the part of Boychuj.

Bomback died early on the morning of December 8, a few minutes after he had quarreled with other men on Catharines street north. He had been struck over the head with a heavy instrument. Four men, John Boychuj, Michael Sareuts, Peter Colo and John Owens were arrested on nominal charges of vagrancy.

It is now definitely known that the dog does not see very well, probably possesses no color vision and hence sees everything as some shade of gray.

Help Check Influenza!

Local People Urged to Help Prevent Epidemic Spreading

Eat Wisely, Exercise Regularly, Keep Away From Crowded Places and Treat All Colds Promptly.

Medical authorities now agree that influenza is a germ disease—most commonly spread by breathing in the germs. If the system is in good shape—the membrane of the air passages in a healthy condition—these germs do not usually breed. It is only when the bodily resistance is lowered that the germs do the most harm.

Start Protective Treatment at Once

Right now while influenza is so prevalent every precaution should be taken to protect the air passages. When you feel one of the "Flu Colds" coming on, don't wait; start the following treatment at once:

Get a jar of Vicks VapoRub and place some up each nostril, or melt some in a bowl of hot water and inhale its medicated vapors. This helps to keep the air passages in a healthy condition, thus making it difficult for the germs to breed.

At bedtime take a laxative, if you are constipated, and rub Vicks VapoRub on the throat and chest. Vicks medicated vapors are then released by the heat of the body, and breathed in all night long, direct to the air passages. At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like an old fashioned poultice, drawing out tightness and pain and helping the vapors to break up the congestion. If you feel feverish call a physician.

Avoid Crowds and Use Vicks Freely

It is best to keep away from sneezers and coughers in street cars and public places. If you must go out in crowded places insert some Vicks up each nostril before starting out. On returning home melt some Vicks in hot water and inhale the vapors. This is a simple precaution which everyone should take to prevent the flu spreading as it did in 1918 when half a million lives were lost in the United States alone.

MONTREAL, December 21. Canadian Press. — The Toronto Leafs put on a fast scoring display in the last two minutes of last night's National League hockey game against the Montreal Maroons, getting three goals past Goalie Benedict of the local team in that time, but they fell short of their objective by three goals, and the Maroons skated off the ice with a 6 to 3 victory.

Frank Frederickson Sold To Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 21.— Benny Leonard, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Hockey League, last night announced a trade where Mickey Mackay, defence man, goes to the Boston Bruins for Frank Frederickson, star centre. The Pirates also handed over $12,000 to the Boston club, it was announced. The new player will report to the Pirates in Toronto Saturday. The move was made, Leonard said, in an effort to give the Pirates scoring punch.

MILLIONAIRES TIE FOR THIRD POSITION

Victory Over London Puts Toronto in Four-Cornered Tangle.

AUSTRALIANS TO HAVE NEW ROSTER

Aussies To Get Together Stronger Eleven For Third Match.

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press Cable).—Radical changes are expected to be made in the team which will represent Australia in the third cricket test match, which opens at Melbourne on December 29. After the bad beating the Antipodeans received in the first test at Brisbane and the second which ended here yesterday with England winning by eight wickets the board of control regulating the game in Australia are faced with the task of geting together a stronger eleven. A third win for England will leave the "Ashes," mythical cricket championship emblem, in their possession for another term.

It was rumored yesterday that J. S. Ryder, who captained the Australians in the two tests played, will be superseded by V. Y. Richardson of New South Wales. Mr. Ryder took over the captaincy for the first time in the Brisbane game.

Changes in the rank and file of the team are forecasted and the name of Dr. Bettington, an Oxford "Blue," who recently returned to Australia, is mentioned as a likely choice by the board of control.

England's win here yesterday is their first on the local grounds for sixteen years.

Cochran Regains Lead In Balkline Match

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—Welker Cochran regained the lead over Jake Schaefer in the seventh block of their special 4,800 point 18.2 balkline billiard match here yesterday. Schaefer went ahead Wednesday night but Cochran came back to take yesterday's block, 432 points to 239 and leads 2,800 to 2,639.

Aided by the highest run of the match, 262 points, Cochran ended the block in eight innings.

STRENUOUS DAYS FOR LEAGUE CLUBS

Many Games Scheduled For Holiday Season in Old Country.

LONDON, England, December 21.— Soccer teams in the British Isles on Saturday start on the hardest part of the league playing season. The English League fixture list calls for games to-morrow (Saturday), Tuesday (Christmas Day), Wednesday (Boxing Day), the following Saturday, and New Year's Day.

In Scotland there will be games on New Year's Day and the day after, in addition to the Saturday fixtures, while in Ireland there will be Christmas and Boxing Day matches.

In England the great test coming for the leading teams in the various divisions may bring out one club with a definite lead and head it for the championship. On Saturday Sheffield Wednesday, league leaders, will entertain Aston Villa, who are playing a strong game at present. Derby County, runners-up in the league standing, have a soft job, having been allotted Bury, who apparently are anchored to the cellar position. Leeds United, third team, meet Birmingham and as Leeds must do the travelling, a draw can result.

Leaders Play Chelsea.

In the Second Division fixtures is to be found probably the best soccer attraction for the day in England; Chelsea v. Notts County. The match will be played at Stamford Hill. Notts County are heading the division, while the Pensioners are in the third berth behind Hull City. While the results on Saturday cannot immediately affect Notts County's position as leader, the Midland club cannot afford to give away points, particularly as Hull City, who are playing the other Nottingham team, will likely win.

In the Scottish First Division Rangers, the only unbeaten team in the League, are at home to St. Mirren, a powerful club. They are hardly strong enough to trim the Rangers on their own grounds, however.

In the Irish League Belfast Celtic are running away from the other clubs. They, too, have yet to be beaten this season.

The superstition of lighting three cigarettes from one match arose from the custom of having three lamps on church altars in Russia; it was considered unlucky to light these three lamps from one taper and the priests would not do so under any consideration.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

Peterborough's all-star team of 1904 invaded Belleville on the night of January 22, accompanied by some forty supporters and the game that ensued is still talked about as one of the hardest fought battles between two evenly matched teams as has been seen in this district.

The group championship depended upon the result and Belleville, with Maguire, their crack centre, who had been off the line up in the game in Peterborough, back in uniform were supremely confident of an easy victory.

On the contrary the game was in doubt until the final whistle and Peterborough fans who saw the tussle give Winchester, Belleville's crack goaler, the lion's share of the credit for his team's win. Remember Winchester with his old soft hat pulled down over his eyes? There was a goal keeper, a player who would have been snapped up by the N.H.L. scouts if there had been any such animals back in 1904.

The first half was a thrilling exhibition of hockey, with neither team able to score a legitimate goal. The Petes did manage to drive the puck past Winchester early in the game but Referee Chaucer Elliott, of Kingston, called the play offside to the great relief of the Belleville crowd. The goal keeping of Winchester and Mercer and the great defence work of Howell and McMillan was too much for the respective attacks and the first half went by without a move from the goal umpires.

The little band of Peterborough rooters got their chance to cheer half way through the second half when Chris Graham succeeded in beating Winchester for the first goal of the game. Shortly after Maguire, the Belleville centre player, had to retire for the rest of the game and Graham was dropped to even up the side, and his absence was felt for Kennedy afterward scored two goals for Belleville and put the Petes out of the hunt. The visitors held their 1 to 0 lead until the game was nearly over and then Kennedy scored on his own rebound, tieing the score, and he came back with the winning counter on a pass from McMillan.

It was a great win for Belleville and a tough game for Peterborough to lose, particularly after leading the way for most of the journey.

The line up:

Belleville—Goal, Winchester; point, McMillan; cover point, Brown; forwards, Burrows, Maguire, Marks, Kennedy.

Peterborough—Goal, Mercer; point, Howell; cover point, Cavanah; forwards, H. Armstrong, Whitcroft, R. Armstrong, Graham.

Referee—Chaucer Elliott, Kingston.

To-morrow—The semi-final game that never was played.

MASTER WOULD IMPROVE GAME

Capablanca Suggests 100-Square Board and Addition of Two Pieces.

WOULD ENLIVEN GAME.

LONDON, England, December 21. — (Canadian Press.) — How to liven up the ancient game of chess—more accurately described as an exact science—how, indeed, to prevent it becoming dead within 15 years, is the subject of a letter contributed to the Times by the international champion, Senor Jose Capablanca. Fault, he declares, lies in the ability of the modern master to memorize thousands of games by heart, until he sees the time coming when such a one will be able thus equipped to draw every game he plays. The remedy he suggests is for a hundred square board, instead of 64, and the addition of two new pieces. He says in part:

"Imagine a game in which some half dozen experts neither win nor lose, but always draw. The game as a game is dead; it has lost all its interest; it becomes intolerable to play and intolerable to watch. Tournaments are now gone through without the loss of a single game by players who could never have done so some ten years ago. In tournament after tournament there is no 'brilliancy' and very few combinations are possible because each player knows exactly what to avoid, and the position after the opening makes combinations out of the question. Meanwhile the average number of moves per game in tournaments among great players, is increasing.

"There should be nothing surprising in this when we remember what has happened in other games, billiards for instance. But surprise if not resentment is expressed from time to time by lovers of the game of chess who do not understand what has happened and why. The best players are sometimes accused of being dull and unimaginative, and wanting in initiative, because their play shows no "brilliance," no resourcefulness, no courage. The fact is they are given no chance to show these qualities when playing against their equals, or their betters. They play simply the best variations they know, and these lead nearly always to a draw. They play according to knowledge, as they must. It is a dull conclusion, but it is inevitable if a player is to have regard to his position in a tournament. He cannot be expected to commit suicide for the sake of sport.

"The demand, however, for a livelier game, where there would be more combination, more sacrifice, and more scope for native talent and imagination and less room for the chess player's least valuable virtue, memory, is thoroughly legitimate. Let the critics, and let the first class players, who suffer quite as much under the present system as the average competent observer, have what they want. There must be a change in the game (as there has been in other games) not in its structure of fundamental principles, but such as to abolish the present drawbacks, and to give the game once more an unlimited lease of life. The change I am convinced, must be fairly far-reaching, for no shifting the relative position of the pieces, as at present arranged on the board, nor any of the many minor often suggested changes, will do. It would be a palliative for a very short time.

"There remains then a larger board to consider, and the addition of extra pieces. Personally I am in favor of the hundred square board, 10 x 10, with two new pieces for each side, the one to have the powers of the rock and knight. Where exactly these pieces should stand at the start can be settled later, though I suggest one each next to the King and Queen; and there would be another minor change to consider, in giving permission for the pawns to move one, two or three squares on the first move, in order to bring the opposing sides more quickly in touch with one another. The broad principle is the one hundred square board which I prefer to the eighty square board, 10 by 8, and the new pieces.

"It is not difficult to see what a new term of life would be given to the game. All the mamorization and theoretical experience of the present would be gone from the game, which would be open only to the real chess-playing virtues—large conception, imagination, self reliance, and hard-thinking—while an inexhaustible area would be available for combination, and thus the spirit and essence of chess play would remain intact.

Senor Capablanca's suggestions drew the following letter, some days later, from S. S. Blackburne, well-known British chess "problemist," who more or less opposes the Cuban master's proposals and argues on behalf of the "average players."

"Six years ago, shortly before leaving New Zealand, where I used to be chess editor of the Canterbury Times, a chess player wrote to me from America, asking my opinion of a proposal, akin to that now put forward in your issue of the 24th inst., by Senor Capablanca, of which my correspondent claimed to be the originator.

"If I remember rightly, his scheme was to substitute for the queen's rook a piece having the combined powers of a rook and a knight, and for the queen's knight a piece having the combined powers of a knight and a bishop. The two bishops now existing on each side, he would not interfere with, because he thought each of them ought, so long as it remained on the board, to continue running always on diagonals of the same color on which it was originally placed.

"Unlike Senor Capablanca, my correspondent did not propose to add to the present number of pieces or to the present number of squares on the board. Nor did he as Senor Capablanca does, propose that the pawns should be allowed to move one, two or three moves on the first move, instead of one or two moves only, as at present.

MAJOR HOOPLE OBTAINED SANTA'S INDORSEMENT OF SANTA PAL CLUB

Even Major Hoople and his Boarding House friends get generous when they see a bunch of mistletoe or a little bit of holly. In fact, the Major insists he is the originator of the Santa Pal clubs. He claims to have obtained the indorsement of Santa Claus himself during one of his polar explorations, long before the days of dirigibles, radio static and two-car garages.

Wills-Firpo Bout Billed For Trinidad

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, Dec. 21 (Associated Press). — Harry Wills, the pugilist, and his manager, Morris, passed through here yesterday en route to Trinidad to fight Luis Firpo.

The news like a voice from the past that Harry Wills has bobbed up in the Virgin Islands on his way to a battle with the one-time "wild bull of the pampas," caused considerable surprise among boxing followers who have come to look upon this pair of top-notchers of a few years ago as definitely out of the heavyweight picture.

Firpo is understood to have been accumulating weight in idleness since he returned to Argentina some time after being knocked out by Jack Dempsey in their memorable battle in 1923. In 1924, Wills met and defeated Firpo at Boyle's Thirty Acres, before a crowd of 75,000.

WINS BY 90 VOTES

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—The majority of D. B. Plunkett, Conservative, over Hon. J. D. McLan, Liberal, in the Victoria federal by-election on December 6, stands at 90, following a recount conducted before County Court Judge P. S. Lampman.

Mr. Plunkett gained nine votes over the 81 majority which he was given in the results as originally given out by the returning officer.

SIX TEAMS IN SENIOR GROUP AND FOUR ENTRIES IN JUNIOR WILL COMPRISE HOCKEY LOOP

Committee Appointed To Draw Up Single Schedule For Each Group.

TROPHY FOR JUVENILES.

Expected Five Teams Will Make Up Juvenile Section of League.

Success, with a capital "S" was written all over the meeting of City Hockey League that took place in the office of the Raybestos Company last evening. Entries were received from six teams for the senior and four in the junior. No sooner had the entry list been declared closed, than a phone call was received from Al Gray, who desired to enter a team from a club in the George Street Sunday school in the senior, and although the league was loath to disappoint anyone, the entry was refused because it was rightly thought that not another team could be accommodated. Certainly the fans can be assured of fast hockey when the City League play their games at the Brock.

The following teams comprise the Senior League: C.G.E. Tool Room, C. G.E. Works Harrison's, De Laval, Cognawagas and the Peterborough Canoe Company. The Junior League is formed of All Saints' Athletic Club, Peterborough Canoe, Canuck Club and Barries.

It was moved that six teams constitute the senior and four teams the junior, believing that this would work out to the best advantage of the league. Walter Perks and Ted Outram were appointed a committee to draw up a single schedule of games for each of the groups. It was decided that teams' standings should be counted on a point basis, two points for a win and one point for each team in a draw.

The executive will consist of the officers and the following representatives from each club: Jack Killoran of the C.G.E. Works; Jack Pilling of the C.G.E. Tool Room; Percy Harrison; T. Taylor for the Peterborough Canoe; J. Punter for the De Laval and Bob Batley for the Cognawagas; and from the junior clubs, Bill Prindible E. Lebarr, Jim Roach and W. Hardwick.

Rules of League.

The following rules were written into the constitution:

Five dollars must be deposited with the executive before any protest would be considered by the league.

Any player desiring to change to a new club must secure his release from his former club manager and his certificate must be signed by the two managers involved He must then appear before the executive stating his reason for the change and these must satisfy the executive.

A player must have been a resident in the city for at least two weeks before he can play in any scheduled game

Any player can only be eligible to play in the finals if he has played at least one game for his club previously.

A club will be allowed to sign only twelve players, of that number only two may be Intermediate O. H. A. players.

Each team is allowed nine men in uniform during scheduled games and eight in the finals.

Suggested as Referees.

The following men were suggested for referees: P. Bond, Walter Jackson, Bill Jackson, Lou Lebarr, Jr., H. Parker, Jack McCarney, Walter Miller, Harry Ranger and Bernard Park

Entrance fee must be paid to the secretary by certified check before January .

Cup For Juveniles.

M. Bredin has donated a fine cup for competition in the City Juvenile League was the glad tidings made known to the members of that league at their meeting just previous to the senior pow-wow. Entries from five teams have been received for this league and there is room for one more. These are the teams already entered: Adanacs, Tigers, West End Maroons, East City Maple Leafs and the Canuck Club. The league is for players under seventeen and it is fully expected that another team will easily be secured to round out a six team group.

"Bummer" Sterling Will Attend Western Varsity

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Dec. 21. — Canadian Press. — "Bummer" Sterling, backfield star and valuable kicker of the St. Thomas Junior O.R.F.U. team, yesterday confirmed the report he would attend Western University next fall. He should prove a valuable asset to the backfield of the Mustangs who break into Senior company next season.

MANY TRADES MADE IN BASEBALL WORLD

Next Year Teams in the Big Leagues Will Look Considerably Different.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (Canadian Press).—It may be that 1928 will become known in baseball circles as the year of the "Big Trade Winds."

The playing season is no more than two months past yet already some clubs have so radically revised their rosters that a fan may be excused for being a bit bewildered as he sees apparent fixtures shunted off to some other major league team or else into the minors.

It has become an annual feature for Rogers Hornsby to go on the market and Emil Fuchs, of the Boston Braves, did not disappoint a waiting public. He graciously gave the "Rajah" to the Chicago Cubs for Percy Jones, Freedy Maguire, several rookie players, and a fat bundle of cash.

Not to be outdone by their National League rivals, the Boston Red Sox have consented to let Washington have Buddy Myer, crack third baseman, for the trifling consideration of five players, in place of Myer, who was the Red Sox' best batter last year and the league leading exponent of the art of solen bases; Bill Carrigan, manager of the Red Sox, will have to find room for Horace Lisenbee and Milt Gaston, pitchers; Bobby Reeves and Grant Gillis, infielders, and Ed Bigelow, a Southern Association outfielder, who clouted minor league pitching with abandon.

Pittsburgh needed a left-handed pitcher so the Pirates sent Glenn Wright to the Brooklyn Robins for Jess Petty and Harry Riconda, the latter an infielder when he's not sitting on the bench.

George Uhle, who has had his ups and downs at Cleveland, will see whether the weather at Detroit is any better for his pitching arm, while Jackie Tavener and Ken Holloway, doing their infielding and pitching, as the case may be, for the Indians.

These have been the major deals of the off-season, but there have been a number of other changes of more than a little interest. There are a number of clubs who could make use of the pitching of which Flint, Rhem and Vic Aldridge capable, yet both these right handers find themselves in the minors. Aldridge, traded to the New York Giants for Burleigh Grimes by Pittsburgh a year ago, has been sold to Tris Speaker's club of the International League. Rhem, a great pitcher in 1926, has been sent to Minneapolis of the American Association. Both were waived out of the majors chiefly because of a reputation for being hard to handle. Aldridge has a disinclination for signing contracts when they are first offered him. It took months of dickering to get him into the Giant fold last year and he never showed anything like his customary form. After his trade to Pittsburgh by the Cubs in November, 1924, Aldridge was a bit late in signing the contract Barney Dreyfuss offered him.

Other changes since the close of the season have seen Lefty O'Doul go to the Philadelphia Nationals while Freedy Leach was preparing to put on a Giant uniform; Johnny Neun, of Detroit, slides back to Toledo, and Arnold Statz, of Brooklyn, to Los Angles of the Pacific Coast League.

The moment a camel loses its footing in a stream it turns on its side and exerts no effort to save itself from drowning.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Six senior teams and four junior teams will comprise the City Hockey League and the games will be played at the Brock Street Rink.

At a big meeting all the entries to the City League we received and a few new rules to the constitution, were added, thus ironing out all the trouble that might have arisen later in the year.

* * * * * * *

There will be 170 players taking part in the City League games this season; 72 seniors, 48 juniors and at least 50 juveniles.

* * * * * * *

Last night in the N.H.L. the teams went on a scoring rampage, the like of which has not been seen before this season. The Maroons defeated the Maple Leafs 6 to 3 and the Detroit Cougars retained their hold on second place by turning back the Canadiens 5 to 1.

* * * * * * *

The Pittsburg Pirates did the unexpected when they trimmed the league leading New York Americans 1 to 0 breaking the five game winning streak.

* * * * * * *

The Yankee Stadium with a seating capacity of 80,000 is said to be too small and the Yankee officials have plans underway to enlarge it so that it will hold 100,000 for baseball games and 125,000 for football battles.

* * * * * * *

Ruth is something else besides merely a homerun champion, the American league records show that he lead several other departments too. He made the most circuit clouts and was tied with Gehrig for run making. He was also the victim of the most strikeouts and he received more walks than any other player.

Connie Smythe Denies Sale of Bill Carson

MONTREAL, Dec. 21.—It was reported at the Forum here last night, during the Montreal-Toronto N.H.L. game, that Bill Carson, Leaf centre player, was to be sold or traded to the Detroit Cougars. When seen in the Leafs dressing-room, however, Connie Smythe, manager of the Toronto team, stated that he had never heard of any such deal.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT,

TIM McCOY'S NEWEST—"SPOILERS OF THE WEST" IS SAID TO BE ONE OF THE MOST THRILLING AND AUTHENTIC FRONTIER STORIES EVER BROUGHT TO THE SCREEN.

"Spoilers of the West," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor, film depicting frontier life in the seventies and now being shown at the Regent Theatre with Tim McCoy in the stellar role, is said to be one of the most thrilling frontier stories ever brought to the screen and also one of the most authentic film tales of the days when the entire West was a power magazine to be set off by any overt act of red man, or white.

Tim McCoy, who is recognized as one of the great authorities on the American plains Indian, has spent many years among the Sioux, Arapaho, Crow and Shoshone Indians. He is an adopted member of the Arapaho tribe and is regarded as their "blood brother." Whatever Tim McCoy says with these Indians is taken by them as final because they regard him in the light of sincere friendship and know that he never breaks his word with them.

It was McCoy who persuaded the Indians to appear in "The Covered Wagon" directed by James Cruze some years ago. They worked in front of the camera because McCoy remained with them on the entire location trip and handled all matters which the Indians regarded as grievances.

Because of his influence with the Indians and his ability to ride and act McCoy later was placed under contract as a Western star by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Between pictures he retires to his big ranch in Wyoming and lives peacefully among his "red brothers" on the Wind River reservation, which adjoins his own broad acres.

Marjorie Daw, who has been famous on the screen for years, plays the role of the heroine of "Spoilers of the West" and is seen as the owner of a fur trading post established illegally on Indian lands.

William Fairbanks has the "heavy" role of her brother in the picture directed by W. S. Van Dyke. The story has to do with the Laramie treaty which guaranteed the removal of white trappers from the Indian reserves.

AT THE CAPITOL.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS IN "OUT OF THE RUINS."

A drama of the war, which still casts its reflection over movie films, is the production entitled "Out of the Ruins," which stars the popular Richard Barthelmess. It tells the story of Pierre Dumont who goes to Paris on leave and there meets his friend's sister, Yvonne, (Marian Nixon) and falls in love with her. Yvonne has a second suitor, Henri Volange, rich and elderly, a profiteer from the war.

Pierre, who is wounded, comes to Paris again from the front and marries Yvonne. They have a few happy days together, but Pierre hears the call of duty and once again returns to the firing line, with his wound still unhealed. The news of Pierre's death comes back and for two years Yvonne mourns for him. With her brother blinded and Volange still a suitor, the girl at last decided to marry the latter, but Pierre returns in time to reclaim her, after having lost his memory and being placed in an insane asylum.

The plot, while stereotyped, has woven about it many dramatic incidents of war time and Barthelmess carries it along with the sweep and surge of his youthful abandon and his serious, thoughtful mien

The comedy is a funny Charley Chase mix-up, "The Booster," with the ridiculous comedian at his best in some ludicrious episodes.

WOMEN BANKRUPTS ARE SENT TO PRISON

One is Given Month and the Other Three Months' Imprisonment.

ADELAIDE, South Australia, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Two women bankrupts were recently sentenced to prison terms here. Mrs. Lena Walters, the wife of a plasterer and bookmaker, whose extravagance and gambling were censured by Judge Payne, collapsed in court on hearing her sentence of a month's imprisonment. Christina May Orr, farmer, was sentenced to three months imprisonment when it was found that while heavily involved financially, she had sold for 235 pounds a header and binder held by her on a hire agreement and on which nothing had been paid.

WOMAN BRAGS OF AXE KILLING

Slayer Claims She Would Do It Again If She Had Chance.

BECAME ANGERED

WICKLIFFE, Ky., Dec. 21.—Authorities investigated the tangled marital relations existing in the home of Mrs. Annie Thornton, 65, to explain why she was beaten to death with an axe and why Mrs. Lizzie Boudreaux, 45, of Paducah Ky., boasted that she was the slayer and "would do it again if I had the chance."

Mrs. Thornton's mutilated body was found in a coal shed near her home and Mrs. Boudreaux was arrested twenty minutes later as she was about to board a Mississippi River boat bound for Cairo, Ill. She readily admitted the crime and was held pending grand jury action.

Mrs. Boudreaux had been brought to the Thornton home by Henry Leach, Mrs. Thornton's son by a former marriage. Her husband had sued for divorce November 7.

Authorities expressed the belief that the murder may have been committeed when Mrs. Boudreaux became angered at Mrs. Thornton's objections to her presence. The two women were alone in the house at the time of the killing.

OWNERSHIP IS NOT IMPORTANT IF SERVICE IS SATISFACTORY SAYS MATTHEWS OF UTILITY

and concrete tees are used instead of grass, to save expense in this way.

Going on to describe briefly the method used at the filtration plant, Mr. Matthews spoke of the difficulties encountered at this time of the year in other seasons, when frazil ice requires the use of an auxiliary steam pump for about three days.

In the financing of the waterworks plant, bonds amounting to $1,096,000 were issued and a sinking fund of $397,000 has been set up.

"In 1931, bonds that we issued to pay for the original purchase will be retired; in 1941, those issued towards the cost of the dam and pump house will be retired, and in 1961, the bonds for the filtration plant. So at that time, the people of Peterborough should get their water supply for practically nothing, because there will be no sinking fund. The present rate charged is less than that of 1900, when a private company was supplying unfiltered water."

Electric Utility

"The second utility is the electric power plant. In 1913, a by-law was passed here which empowered the City of Peterborough to sign an agreement with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to purchase power from them. It is supplied to us from the substation and we retail it to the people. Any profit that is made belongs to the citizens of Peterborough, but if there is a big net profit after paying the usual charges, the rates would be reduced."

Mr. Matthews described the three classes of electric customers as the domestic consumers in homes, the commercial consumers in offices and hotels and other buildings of the same type, and the users of power in factories. The rates for each are different.

"There has been a phenomenal increase in the use of electricity in the homes," he said, "owing to the fact that electric power is cheap. You can operate a forty-watt lamp for ten hours for one cent, an electric iron for one hour at a cost of 11-3 cents and a washing machine for one hour at 5 cents. The light bill in some homes in the city is less than the telephone bill. Which service would you sooner have? Here the charge for electricity is two cents per kilowatt hour. In the United States it is seven cents for the same length of time.

"The increase in consumption of electricity in this city has been large and will continue to be large. In 1927 it was seven hundred horse-power, which was an increase over 1926, and in 1928, it was six hundred horse power more than in 1927. The substation was built large enough for the increased demand, but we had to put in a larger transformer this year, and next year we may have to replace one of the small transformers by a larger machine. This is largely due to the action of the Canadian General Electric Company in purchasing a portion of their power from us.

"The fact that you have only been without light for a few minutes in each year speaks well for public ownership in Peterborough, and it also speaks well for this brand of ownership that the increase in demand has been foreseen and can be supplied. The total investment in the electric power plant is $490,000.

"These two utilities have not cost the taxpayer one cent, and on one or two occasions they have been able to reduce the tax rate very slightly. There has also been a decrease of 7 per cent. in water rates."

Mr. Matthews here paid a very sincere tribute to the excellent work done by the staff of the Hydro Commission, to Manager Ross and his assistant, Harry Bee, the accounting staff, the linemen, the foreman of the Waterworks department and the men who have much trouble with the ground the Filtration Plant and the substation, and who are always ready when citizens wish to pay the visit and inspect the premises.

Gas Plant By-Law.

"I want to be very careful in what I say with regard to the purchase of the Gas Plant," said Mr. Matthews with a smile, "because if I am fortunate enough to be re-elected and this by-law carries, I will probably have to operate it.

"If the city buys the gasworks, will the gas rates be reduced? These rates are extremely high in comparison with other cities. That question is hard to answer, but I can say now that the gas rates would not be immediately reduced.

"The gas plant is in good condition and has the capacity to manufacture three times the gas that is sold today. If the sale of gas can be increased any appreciable amount, then the gas rates would be reduced, but if it cannot, the reduction would be very small. However, the city at the present time is on the verge of an increase in population. There are very few empty houses, and if we can get this increase in population we will get a corresponding increase in the consumption of gas, as it costs less to instal gas than an electric stove."

"Mr. Pearson, the gas consulting engineer, who was formerly employed by the Consumers' Gas Company of Toronto, put a value on the plant as it stands of $365,000, with a replacement value of $616,000. The auditor who has been in charge for the past three years, acting for the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, advised them to sell for $360,000 as the lowest price. This by-law is for $335,000, which I think is a fair price.

"The revenue from the sale of gas last year was $92,000 and operating expenses were $62,000, leaving a gross profit of $30,000 before taking care of the sinking fund and interest. The sinking fund on the purchase price is $21,000, at 4% per cent., because the Hydro agrees to take these bonds at this rate.

"If the city owns the gas plant, they should make a profit of $9,000, and certain economies might make that bigger which would allow a slight reduction when these economies were effected.

"I have been somewhat worried over one thing. Just why does the Hydro want to sell this plant when it has been making money for them? The reason they give, and I am inclined to believe it is the right one, is the fact that they are anxious to confine their activities only to electric plants and wish to be free of activities of any other type."

Mr. Matthews concluded his address with the words: "Without ownership whether public or private ownership is always successful, I think I have shown you that public ownership in Peterborough has been a success."

Mrs. C. H. Edwards, president of the Local Council, in presenting a vote of thanks to the speaker, said that Peterborough should be lamented on the character of the men who were in public service to the olutions were read which for consideration at the meeting of the Provincial Women, to be held on and 9th, in the Ford Hotel at Toronto.

Approval was voiced by the Peterborough Local Council of the resolution, sponsored by the Ottawa Local Council, asking the Federal Government to supply more adequate inspection, supervision and encouragement to the boys and girls who are brought to the Dominion from overseas. Mrs. Edwards explained this as arising from conditions where such young boys and girls often die or commit suicide under circumstances which might be prevented by such supervision and encouragement.

A second resolution which will come up for discussion at the Toronto meeting will ask that the section in the Factory Act which has to do with hours of labor for women and girls in industry be referred to the sympathetic consideration of the local councils.

In this connection, Mrs. Edwards said the legal hours for such work for women and girls were 48 during the week. "In Peterborough, some of them work 50 hours a week, and I am told that in some of the factories, the girls often work until midnight at holiday time."

This resolution was approved and the local council will ask the provincial council to make investigation of such conditions.

The third resolution, which was also approved, is one asking the provincial government to establish a school for delinquent girls of the province, similar to the institution for boys now carried on at Bowmanville.

To the convention in Toronto in January, besides the delegates from the local council, each affiliated society is asked to send a representative.

A letter from Mrs. Dunnington-Grubbe in Toronto asked that a representative of the local council be appointed on the housing and town planning committee. This will be done at the January meeting, when reports from affiliated societies are asked for.

Mrs. Edwards extended wishes for a merry Christmas season.

IN MEMORIAM.

MARCHEN. — In loving memory of my dear brother, Laurison Marchen, who died December 21, 1927:
Yes, dear Laurison, how I miss you,
But you're gone to happy rest,
Where the angels throng around you
And they's crown you with the blest.
You have gone to be with loved ones,
Who have gone on long before;
They are waiting, watching for you,
Over on that golden shore.
Though your place on earth is vacant
And you'll come to me no more.
Yet I hope again to meet you
When my time on earth is o'er.
And in that land of song and beauty
Parting hands are clasped no more.
When we meet again, dear Laurison,
'Twill be where parting all is o'er.

BLINDING STORM HINDERS TRAFFIC

Temperature Dropped Suddenly In All Parts of Ontario Last Night.

LONDON, Ont., December 21. — Canadian Press. — A blinding storm which struck London last night caused numerous motor accidents, the disruption of railway schedules and other damage. The temperature also dropped sharply and for some time was only a few points above zero.

Traffic on the country roads was particularly hard hit by the storm and many cars were damaged in collisions, while others lost their way and wandered off the road into ditches.

HAMILTON, December 21. Canadian Press. — Motorists had a close call last night when a fairly heavy snow storm made the John street hill unsafe for travel. Two hundred cars were stalled on the steep grade. While no casualties were reported, there were scores of narrow escapes. Women and children who were passengers in some of the machines became hysterical as the wheels locked and the autos continued at a fast clip.

Half Breed Boy Saves Party of Prospectors; Three Foodless Days

Without Food and Travelling Over Slushy Indian Trails and Half Frozen Lakes Men Reach Amos, Quebec.

DOGS HAD NOTHING TO EAT FOR FOUR DAYS, TOOK 24 HOURS TO TRAVEL LAST 12 MILES

Broke Camp On December 10, Expecting To Reach Civilization in Seven Days—Dogs Ate the Snowshoes While Men Slept At Night.

AMOS, Quebec, December 22 (Special to The Examiner). — Without food for three days and travelling south by dog teams over slushy Indian trails and half frozen northern lakes and rivers, a party of five prospectors have reached civilization at Amos, Quebec, after a two hundred mile overland trip from Mattagami Lake, North-Western Quebec. Their hazardous journey up 50 miles of the mighty Bell River course and 150 miles along half-broken Indian trails makes one of the most amazing stories that the north has produced.

Trekking over ice bridges, and through burnt country, the party, led by Major Cunningham (Ret.) of Haileybury, reached "the steel" after nine days on the trail. The other members of the party were three other well-known prospectors, Cyril O'Shaughnessy and Fred McLeod of Cobalt, and Gus Matson and a half-breed boy of seventeen, who guided them out and whose knowledge of the country certainly saved them.

For fifteen and sixteen hours a day they marched through slush and icy water, carrying packs themselves and helping the dogs with the toboggans. Several lakes were crossed at night by torchlight, and the last stretch by flashlight. The dogs had nothing to eat for four days, and the men nothing but tea for three. It took them about 24 going hours to travel the last twelve miles to the settlement. At night they slept in the open on tarpaulins. Howling of the timber wolves kept the dogs and men awake the first few nights, but after that they were too tired to care about anything. Continuous snow and rain added to their discomfort.

Seven Day Trip

Expecting to make the trip in seven days and to find "grub" in caches along the trail, the prospectors left camp lightly loaded. Grub consisted of fifteen loaves, four pounds of butter, and less than ten pounds of Chicago chicken (salt pork). This lasted three days, but scarcely made two square meals a day for the party. On the fourth day, an Indian sold them ten pounds of moose meat for $10, and they picked up an armful of frozen fish in a deserted cabin. On the sixth day the food was gone. The dogs ate their snowshoes at night. One of the men shot a partridge, but the lead dog, "Togo," a beautiful

TWO MEN O'WAR TO BE ADDED TO CANADIAN NAVY

Southampton Firm Is Awarded Contract For New Destroyers.

WILL COST $3,500,000.

Ships Will Be of Latest Type and Specially Equipped For Canadian Conditions.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Canada's force at present limited to the destroyers "Champlain" and "Vancouver" and a number of minesweepers will receive an access of strength in 1931 when two new destroyers of the "Amazon" class are delivered. The contract for the new men of war was given to Thornycroft Ltd., of Southampton, England, it was announced here last night, at a price of $3,850,000. Fifteen shipbuilding firms submitted tenders, one of them Canadian and the others British.

The destroyers of the "Amazon" class are the latest type designed and are armed with four 4.7 inch guns and two anti-aircraft guns. They have two triple 21 inch torpedo tubes. The new vessels are 320 feet long, have a speed of 35 knots and carry a compliment of 150 officers and men.

The destroyers will replace the "Patriot," and "Patricia," which were retired from service a year ago. These two destroyers, together with the light cruiser "Aurora" were presented to Canada by the British Government following the war.

Special features to meet the demands of Canadian climatic conditions will be embodied in the new men o' war.

Consideration must be had of the extremes of climate in Canada which have the effect of "sweating" the hull in both summer and winter.

The new Canadian destroyers are the first war vessels to be ordered and built as such by the Canadian Government.

The Royal Canadian Navy now contains a personnel adequate to man these ships, a considerable number of the ratings who enlisted in the past few years having been encouraged to renew their enlistment by the passage through Parliament last session of the measure which placed them in the same category as the militia forces in the matters of service pensions. The terms of enlistment are for seven years, with men pensionable at 14 years.

SALVATION ARMY REACHES SERIOUS CRISIS IN ITS HISTORY

Evangeline Booth Sails For London—May Replace Brother.

HOLDS SOLE CONTROL.

High Council Considers General Is Physically Unfit For Office.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Commander Evangeline Booth, chief executive of the Salvation Army in the United States, sailed for London on the Olympic early yesterday morning on a journey that may end in the removal of her brother, General Bramwell Booth, as international head of the Army, and in her election to succeed him.

What is described as the most serious crisis in the history of the Salvation Army now exists, as the result of the failure of eight years' effort by a "reform movement" within the Army, headed by Commander Booth, to persuade her brother to give up the autocratic and dynastic powers now vested in him by the constitution. This not only gives him sole control of the organization throughout the world, as long as he lives, but also empowers him to name his successor and hand down his power in hereditary succession.

General Still Ailing

As a last resort and to protect the Army against what they regard as the evils of an outworn system of government, the reformers have caused the calling of a High Council of the Salvation Army in London on January 8 to decide whether General Booth is to be removed on the ground of unfitness to continue his duties.

General Booth, who is 73 years of age, has been in failing health for two years. The negotiations to persuade him to change the constitution were halted last May, when he was taken seriously ill.

It is the understanding in Army circles on this side of the ocean that he has been unable to attend to his duties since that time, and that he is suffering from nervous prostration and neuritis.

Under the present system of government, he is empowered to enclose the name of his successor in a sealed envelope, to be opened after his death. This was done by his father, William Booth, founder of the Army, who appointed his son as General in this manner.

Successor Named

Bramwell Booth is understood to have followed his father's example; to have written the name of one of his seven children on a piece of paper and to have enclosed it in a sealed envelope.

If the General is deposed the High

Santa Claus Won't Miss This Little Girl

Dear Santa Claus:—

Just a line in asking if you would visit our place this year. My daddy and mother is not very well. I hope you will come up to my place this year. I want a doll carriage too.

This appeal came to Santa Claus, care of The Examiner, yesterday, and has been forwarded to him in the sure expectation that he will heed the little girl's request.

LARGE CROWD VISITS MARKET

Fowl Is Very Plentiful, Turkeys Bringing From 42 to 45 Cents.

GEESE 24 TO 29 CENTS.

The farmers' market resembled Rome this morning, in that all roads seemed to lead to it. But once the eager buyer got inside, the basket section recalled to mind the joke-smith's definition of matrimony, as a state where those who were out wanted to get in and those who were in desired nothing so much as to get out.

The crowds jostled each other good-humoredly in narrow aisles which were cluttered by auxiliary tables where dairy produce and fowl were laid out in rows. All the birds of the barnyard that have been unwittingly fattening themselves for this day for many months past, came to market meekly this morning and waited for someone to take them home and boil, or roast, or fry them. They came in crates and baskets, in flour bags and pillow cases, and there were many of them left unsold at a late hour.

Fowl Plentiful.

Large birds were plentiful. The vendor who couldn't dispose of a nineteen and a half pound turkey, priced at 40 cents remarked philosophically that the family would eat it, if no one bought it. "It may be hard to sell, but it won't be hard to eat," she said, eyeing the noble bird that would have caused Dickens, had he been living to gaze upon it, to go into raptures over its firm, clear meat and plump physique.

Another large turkey, which was the biggest that this scribe encountered, weighed over thirty pounds and might be bought for 30 cents a pound.

SIX QUALIFY FOR ELECTION

Three For Council and Three For Board of Education.

MORE TO-NIGHT.

For Council.

Nagle E. Phelan

For Board of Education.

Dr. A. Moir.
J. F. Strickland.
E. F. Reid.

Thus, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, stood the list of those who had qualified, following nomination meetings held yesterday morning and last night in the City Council Chamber. The remaining eight nominated for the Council and the remaining twelve nominated for the Board of Education, have until nine o'clock to-night to qualify.

Contest a Likelihood.

With seven hours left, it was thought that an aldermanic contest would be the ultimate result—this based on the fact that at last night's meeting, J. A. McNabb voiced his intention of entering as a candidate for the Council, in addition to the above named three. Thus, it would only be necessary for two more of the remaining seven to qualify, which is a probability. Six candidates will make a contest, as only five aldermen are needed.

As for the Board of Education, with three already qualified, and only four needed, the chances are about the same as those for an aldermanic contest.

Will Not Be in Field.

One of the fifteen nominated for the Board of Education at the Friday morning meeting, has already announced his intention to remain out of the contest should one materialize.

Provinces Rally To Support of Monarch and Situation Is Saved.

LONDON, December 22. Canadian Press. — The Afghan legation here announced this afternoon that the rebels of that country had been driven from the heights near Kabul and that all roads leading to King Amanullah's capital had been cleared. The statement said that the loyal troops had pursued the malcontents some 35 miles north of Kabul.

The communication also related that touch had been re-established between the capital and the British legation which is situated about two miles from the city limits. The general position of the government forces has become very strong and the whole situation, especially in Kabul and the eastern provinces has been greatly improved.

Airplane service was resumed yesterday when a machine left Kabul for Tashkent.

Revolt was Serious

London, December 22. Canadian Press. — Troops loyal to King Amanullah of Afghanistan have taken the offensive and advices to-day told of the defeats of rebels. The Afghan legation to London, however, acknowledges that the revolt was a serious one.

The Soviet News Agency Tass said that a battle was begun by loyal troops that attacked the Bagibala Hills which were held by the Afghan rebels. Military headquarters were confident that the insurgents would soon be driven from their strong entrenchments.

Troops of King Amanullah were stated to have repulsed the rebels in

To The Examiner this morning, H. J. McCannan said:

"I did not solicit the nomination I received to the Board of Education yesterday, though the newspaper report made it appear differently, and because of business and personal reasons I will be unable to accept the nomination. I certainly wish to thank Mr. R. J. Kidd and Mr. Walter Kidd for their generous action in placing my name on the list of nominees."

Eleven Candidates Are Nominated For Five Vacant Aldermanic Seats in City Council—Old Members Are Renominated.

MANY NOMINEES MISSING AT LAST NIGHT'S PROCEEDINGS ALD. PHELAN ANNOUNCES SURPLUS IN YEAR'S BUSINESS

J. A. McNabb, Nagle E. Phelan and Henry C. Huffman Announce Their Candidature When Addressing Small Meeting of Citizens.

Eleevn men were nominated, and of those present at last night's nomination meeting held in the city Council Chamber, at least three announced their intention of allowing their names to go before the voting public in the aldermanic contest which is almost certain to take place in Peterborough on January 1. A fourth had not reached a decision, while the remaining seven were absent. The intentions of all will be known by nine o'clock to-night, the time limit for qualifying.

Indicating that The Examiner's references to a general lack of interest were not without justification, last night's meeting was a decidedly peaceful one, the first half-hour of nomination time passing with only four candidates being nominated by a mere handful of citizens present. Gradually, the number grew so that by 8.30, the hour of closing, there were 26 persons present, including His Worship Mayor Denne, and City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, who conducted the nomination. Those nominated were as follows:

KING GEORGE PASSES FAIRLY RESTFUL NIGHT

His Majesty Is Making Real, If Slight and Slow, Progress.

CONDITION STATIONARY.

Christmas Activities Continue in Atmosphere of Subdued Cheerfulness.

LONDON, December 22 (Canadian PPress).—King George had a fairly restful night, with no noticeable alteration of his condition and there was no disposition among the public to regard it as other than satisfactory under the circumstances.

The King's physicians, by their recent statements, have satisfied the popular mind that His Majesty's case has taken a more favorable turn and that he has been making real, if slight and slow, progress.

Consequently Christmas activities went on to-day in the same atmosphere of subdued cheerfulness which has marked them during the past few days.

While the King's condition has remained stationary for the last twelve hours, it was stated in authoritative quarters that he has lost no ground. Therefore optimism continued at Buckingham Palace.

LONDON, Dec. 22 (By Thos. T. Champion, London manager of the Canadian Press).—The King had had another restful period. The 8.15 p.m. (last night) bulletin read: "The King had a quiet day. The general conditions show a very slow though favorable course."

The very fact the evening bulletin is so brief is taken by His Majesty's subjects as a good sign in itself that the King is conquering, if only slowly, the malady which beset him and in half a dozen small ways public relief from the tension of the last four weeks is audible.

What happened at the meeting of the Council of State yesterday is only available in barest outline, but it is understood the Council lasted considerably less than an hour and merely routine business, much of it concerned with the adjournment of Parliament for Christmas, was transacted. The business accomplished in a few weeks by the Privy Council's Judicial Committee was also presented for ratification—this including several decisions of importance to Canada which were previously reported.

Three Men Marooned On Lonely Lighthouse Face Prospect Of a Cheerless Christmas

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Marooned by blinding snow and the lashing waters of Lake Erie just four miles from Cleveland's downtown, where a million others were skeltering about with Christmas shopping, three lonely men to-day awaited a break in the weather that would enable them to get home for Yuletide.

The three men—Harry Holsworth, his brother Edward, and William Atwater—spend nine months of each year in the "crib" just four miles off the East Ninth street pier where a light house marks the place where Cleveland obtains its water supply. Now the shipping season is over and they want to get home for Christmas.

A sturdy little tug was ready to make its annual trip to bring the trio back yesterday but waves pounding against the steel sides of the structure made the journey too perilous.

Now the trip may have to be delayed several days and three men face the possibility of remaining on their bleak "Island" until after Christmas.

Awaking In Room Where He Spent His Youth, 22 Year Old Man Does Not Remember Parents

Macon, Ga., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Tom Scott Goolsby, 22, awoke this morning in a bed in the room in which he had slept for years, at his home where he resided during his youth, and surrounded by his parents and relatives, but he did not remember the familiar surroundings nor the faces of his nearest kin because he is still suffering from amnesia which has afflicted him nearly two years.

Goolsby dropped from view July 23, 1927, and his parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Goolsby, of Forsyth, Ga., near Macon, spent a large sum in a nation wide search which ended recently when their son was found and identified in Tyler, Tex., where he held a responsible position with a large firm and went by the name of J. C. Morrison.

When greeted by his parents and confronted by undisputable evidence of his identity, young Goolsby said he did not remember the faces of his father and mother and could recall no events of his life prior to a sudden awakening shortly after the date of his disappearance on the waterfront at New Orleans. Goolsby said he was suffering from a wound of the head when he became conscious.

"THE LORD GOD OMNIPOTENT REIGNETH"

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

WHAT is the meaning of all this stir which has been going on for weeks throughout the whole civilized world? Everywhere, men, women and little children have been looking forward to and making preparation for the coming of a day. When that day is compared with the other days of the year, it stands head and shoulders above every other one so far as popularity is concerned. I can't think of a single department of our complex life in which there has not been more or less of this stir. Weeks ago we had evidences of it on the pages of most of the magazines, as these pages displayed, in attractive fashion, gifts of all kinds as being fit for bestowal on all sorts of friends on the arrival of this day. Newspapers also have been most persuasive in their espousal of many worthy causes deserving to be remembered when the day arrives. Then the postoffice jogged our memories and gave valuable information and advice as to how this important branch of public service could best help us to make the most of the day. Stores, large and small, have been humming with increased activity in preparation for this one outstanding day. They have made the most elaborate preparation for supplying the needs of the multitudes who want to live up to the spirit of the day. In homes and schools and churches there has also been unusual stir. What does it all mean?

CHRISTMAS.

It is Christmas that all this preparation and stir has to do with. Yes, but what does Christmas signify? Is it simply a day that has to do with the giving and receiving of gifts? Is it only an opportunity for enjoying a much needed rest from labor? Does it just provide a chance to take part in a round of pleasures, consisting of dances, card parties and shows? Or is there some deeper significance that we are in danger of losing sight of in the multiplicity of these things? The background has become so commercialized that the mere giving and getting seems to overshadow all else.

To get an answer to this question we have to go a long, long way back into the dim and distant past. And when we get far enough back we shall make an interesting discovery. We shall learn that something happened in the far-off past which gives the real distinction to the day we call Christmas.

Once upon a time the Creator gave a wonderful promise to the creature. This promise carried within it the assurance of the advent of One with whose coming there would be bound up the highest good of the race. Therefore, it is not to be wondered at that from that hour the human race looked forward with glad anticipation to the advent of Him in whose person and program this promise would be realized. Multitudes of women carried within their breasts the hope that their's might be the honor of bringing the promised "seed" into the world.

THE BURDEN OF IT ALL.

A long line of prophets carried on a unique ministry down through the centuries. They were credited with having been inspired to speak or write by the Holy Spirit. Their words are not mere guesses, but divine pronouncements as direct and dogmatic as it is possible for words to be. Many of them stand far apart with regard to time and place, yet there is a marvellous unity when all their utterances are compared with each other. They have the same object in view. They are calling man's attention to a promise and pointing forward to the time and manner of its fulfilment. Examine this promise and you will find that it is in all respects the same as that given by the Creator to the creature.

Priests, kings and sweet singers throughout the earth, all unite with these prophets to speak and sing the praises of one long looked for and soon to appear. When He comes He will combine in Himself the qualities of Redeemer and Ruler. He will be a Sovereign as well as a Saviour.

But, what has all this to do with Christmas? asks someone! Just possess your soul in patience and perhaps we may be able to answer that question to your complete satisfaction.

GOD'S ARRIVAL.

Nearly two thousand years ago there had gone forth from the imperial presence at Rome an edict that all the world should be taxed. This involved an enrolment which could only be done at the ancestral centre. Drawn to the little hill town of Bethlehem as one result of this edict was a large number of travellers. In this company was a man named Joseph with his espoused wife, Mary. This couple had come from their home elsewhere to the village of their royal fathers to have their names inscribed so that they might comply with the law.

On their arrival at Bethlehem they found every bit of available guest-room already occupied. Being human, they would be subject to all the fears and disappointments to which the heart of man seems heir. Probably there would be more than a shade of apprehensive fear. Something must be close at hand, and how helpless they both felt to provide the proper preparation for the long-heralded event! Yet, I cannot help thinking that there would be an inner feeling of trust in the Father, and of gratitude for shelter of some sort, as they accepted the meagre accommodation of a cattle-shed.

Jesus was born in a stable! Not the glorified kind of shelter which artists have created on canvas, as if ashamed that their God should be compelled to rest amidst poor and unclean surroundings. It was a real stable. And at that time, whatever it may be now, it was made of four rough walls, a dirty pavement and a simple roof supported by rough-hewn beams. It was dark, dirty, and evil smelling. Nothing in it was clean except the manger where the owner prepared the cattle's food.

"In such a stable as this Jesus was born. The dirtiest spot on earth was to be the first dwelling-place of the only Pure One, born of woman. The Son of Man, destined to be devoured by beasts bearing the name of men, was first cradled in the manger wherein animals feed upon the marvellous blossoms of spring.

"Nor was it by chance that Jesus was born in a stable. Is the world anything else than a huge stable wherein man devours and emits? The most beautiful, the purest and most divine things—does not man by some infernal alchemy transform them into what is loathsome? And when he has done this he stretches himself upon the remains of his own creation, and he calls that 'enioying life.'

"In this temporary pigsty of a world, whose dirt no trimmings and perfumes can conceal, Jesus appeared one night, born of a stainless virgin, armed with nought but His own innocence."

WHAT IT ALL MEANS.

Christmas means that we are celebrating the birthday of a King. When they came seeking Him, they said, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews?" By proof of the most positive kind, Jesus of Nazareth has sole right and title to the Throne of David. He has never occupied that place yet, but as sure as God is in His heaven He will one day sit upon that Throne. To this truth Christmas bears overwhelming testimony. More than this—the day will yet dawn when He will be King of kings and Lord of lords.

Surely the message of Christmas is that the Divine Thought has become Incarnate and appeared in human flesh among men. But more than this is contained in the fact of Christmas being the celebration of the birthday of Jesus of Nazareth. The miracle of Bethlehem, expressed in the Incarnation, is not the only miracle of incarnation that God has performed. When the soul stretches out in its helplessness, conscious of its sin and seeking a Saviour, a miracle takes place in the experience of that soul. Christ is formed in that life by the operations of the Holy Spirit. Then there breaks out in that life the most ravishing music which will never cease as long as life shall last.

Christmas means that Heaven has come down to earth to bring earth back to Heaven. The pity is that just as there was no room in the inn for Him who came to do this blessed work, so He is still crowded out of lives and enterprises which will never reach their greatest glory until they come under the power of His transforming touch.

Oh, mystery of mysteries! That helpless babe nestling into the bosom of the virgin mother is God manifest in the flesh. Let this thought grip your imagination and you will begin to understand how the shepherds felt when we read that they "were sore afraid." The ground on which we stand, even in this stable, is holy ground.

"There's a song in the air,
There's a star in the sky:
There's a mother's deep prayer,
And a babe's low cry,
And the star rains its fire
While the Beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem
Now cradles a King.

—Allan Fairbairn.

VIRGIN BORN

CHRISTMAS invites men to look at one of the most stupendous facts in all history. It is the Fact of Christ. God, in human form, has appeared among men. This Fact is itself supported by a combination of other facts, all of which were brought about by the Great Architect of the Universe, for Whom nothing is too hard, but with Whom all things are possible. The Virgin Birth is a necessity if the Divine Decree is to be fulfilled and a Saviour provided for sinners. And the Virgin Birth is gloriously possible when God is counted in.

A GROUP of men are talking earnestly together, or rather one is narrating to his three companions something that has impressed him very much.

It is evidently a remarkable piece of information, and the suggestion which the speaker found upon it is very novel and somewhat startling. It may never have occurred to any of them before. His companions seem to agree entirely with the proposed scheme, and one of them, from his look of devotion to the speaker, would I think agree with any suggestion that fell from his lips. That being settled, the next question is, When should the plan be adopted? "Immediately," is the prompt reply of the leader.

The others agree; it may be more difficult perhaps for one of the party to make his arrangements than the others, so it is quite possible that he may have to go home and wind up affairs, while the others go down to the quays and make inquiry about outgoing ships. A few hours later I see that party on board ship, they have a favorable breeze and are going fast on their course in a N.W. direction; it is open sea, and yet there are islands always near, they pass three, and the sun sets over one on their left hand a little further off.

Next morning they sight another island and then they approach the mainland; a lofty promontory runs into the sea, and the ship enters a harbor on the western side. See how interested our travellers appear! The story narrated by one of them at the first makes the sight of this land intensely attractive. They are almost overcome with emotion and suppressed excitement. I wonder what awaits them there!

The key to the previous Pen Picture of Bible History is to be found in Jer. 39:2-4; and Ezekiel 33:21. It was found before we went to press. I rejoice in the increased interest in these Pen Pictures.

This week's picture has been taken from Acts and I expect to learn that a number of readers have discovered it before it is given in our next. Let me hear from you, please!

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S QUESTIONS.

1. Angels were the pall-bearers at the funeral of Lazarus the beggar (Luke 16:22).
2. The sores on the body of Lazarus were probably caused by malnutrition.
3. Dives was in Hades (the abode of departed spirits between death and the resurrection), and his five brothers were on the Broad Road that leads to Hades. To-day men come right up to Christ and then detour (Luke 16:23-28).
4. God records our deeds on our memory cells. Dives was alive in the spirit world, conscious of physical need, in full possession of his memory, worrying about his brothers (Luke 16:28).
5. A solemn responsibility is connected with the possession of the Scriptures. We should search them, receive and obey them, as "able to save our souls"—for there is no second chance (Luke 16:26-31).
6. We learn from the story of the rich man and the beggar that there are no "pockets in a shroud"; that death is an unalterable state.

A Thought For the Faithful

AT Christmas the heart should be subdued and softened. The divine hope that is as dew on the thoughts of youth should be revived and the old tenderness restored. There may be no other Christmas for us in this world. We are nearer the end of all things. Here we have no continuing city, but at Christmas we recall that through Christ the new world is ours, and our life is but beginning. Now is our salvation nearer at hand than when we first believed. We go forth to meet it, and the still lights of the New Jerusalem burn and shine in welcome.

AN INSISTENT DEMAND

THE demand for finality is persistent and insistent. Man is restless and peaceless until the supreme concerns of existence are settled in his own mind. "Let me fly to the Rock that is higher than I," is the earnest cry of souls seeking sure and secure foundations upon which to build character and from which natural and spiritual realities may be viewed sanely. The Church of the Lord Jesus Christ can never successfully advance half rationalistic and half evangelical. Two cannot walk together except they be agreed. — "The Seven Finalities of Faith," by A. Z. Conrad, Ph.D., D.D.

"PEACE ON EARTH TO MEN OF GOOD-WILL"

I HAD an interesting experience on the occasion of my last visit to the workshop of my genial friend, John Plain. I discovered that two other visitors were there ahead of me—a man and his dog. The man's name was Bill Sykes Le Claire, an old friend of John's who had come over from the States to pay him a visit; and the dog's name was Mike. A French lecturer used to say that if two Britishers, strangers to each other, were cast on a desert island they would wait until a third came along to introduce them to each other before they would attempt to speak, the one to the other. The man was as friendly a soul as I have ever had the good fortune to meet. Without any bluster, he introduced himself and his dog in the quaintest possible manner, which I will endeavor to set down here as well as I can remember it.

A NOVEL INTRODUCTION.

"Just we two. Mike and I. Man and dog. Companions, chums, partners.

"Breed: Anglo-American, Airedale Scotch terrier.

"Age: In the prime of manhood, and—doghood.

"Nativity: Mississippi Valley, U. S. A.

"Education: Thirty-third degree post-graduate from the school of experience.

"Occupation: Travelers—bread-winners, unclassified.

"Politics: Ishmaelites.

"Religion: Orthodox; eclectic.

"Condition: Mostly hungry. Man, ragged; dog well dressed. Poor now—millionaires in prospect.

"Character: Man, from the man standpoint, questionable. Dog, from the dog standpoint, perfect.

THE MAN TO THE DOG.

"If there was ever a perfect pup, Mike you're it; you are all silk and twenty-four inches wide. We have globe-trotted together day in and day out, weeks, months, years. We have been wet, cold, half-starved, run over, knocked down, dragged out, shot at, too well-fed, comfortable and a paradise of plenty. Through it all you have been the same happy-go-lucky, high-minded, examplary, classy, contented dog you were when we first met. You didn't know it, Mike, but through it all I have studied you and read you like a book, and that has made me study myself. And, from every comparative moral standpoint, you are the better of the two. Your standard of morals is sky high by the side of mine. You live yours. I take most of mine out in resolving and thinking.

"You despise liquor and you never get drunk. They tried to pour it down your throat once, and you scared the scamps that did it into a complexion like milk. You have never gotten into the ditch except after me. You have never gone back on a friend. You have never acted a lie—never. You have never abused, or bullied, or jumped on a small dog; and you have literally wiped the earth with bigger dogs than you that did. You have always been on the side of the weak. You never took, nor tried to take, from others when you had plenty for yourself. You have never refused to help others when you, in any way, could understand how it could be done. You never, in all our long friendship, mistreated me, while you know I've often mistreated you. I've scolded and yelled, and kicked, and struck at you. You never even growled back at me. You have seen anger and vengeance in my eyes. I've seen only kindness, good-will, love or fear in yours. I've sworn and struck at men who abused you. And you have chawed up dogs that jumped on me. I'm even with you there for once, old chap. Man invariably argues that in every good quality he is superior to his dog, but in all cases I have noticed that the evidence is of that ignus fatuus quality known among physicians as absent treatment."

CAN DOGS SPEAK?

I only wish it might have been possible to have had every reader of these lines present to have heard Bill as he spoke to his dog, Mike, and to have seen Mike as he listened. Did he understand? I'll say he did. And I am sure he understood all the better because he listened very attentively and never butted in until his master was through with these striking remarks. Can dogs speak? If you are really looking for an answer to that question there is not anything I could say that would help you. If you are not sure now it is evident that you don't know dogs. Didn't somebody once say: "The more I see of some people the more I think of my dog?"

BILL SPEAKS AGAIN.

Patting Mike on the head, Bill said: "Love never dies, you have a mountain of that commodity to give away. Faithfulness, fidelity, never die. That's your double name, Mike. Truth never dies; you are supersensitive on that virtue. Joy, gladness, good-will, a gracious spirit never die. All are expressed in the one word, Mike. Charity, justice, abounding confidence; every one of them will be in heaven. That fixes your title clear, government sealed, divinely warranted, individually delivered; you bet.

"As an all-around dog, Mike, you are a star. You pulled me out of the river when I was drowning. You guided my drunken footsteps out of the ditch, and freezing cold, into warmth and comfort, again and again. You stood by me when wife and family and, even father, forsook me. And if there are bread and meat, and a warm place to sleep, and any sort of a heaven, or any other good thing for dogs, I'll work day and night to see that you get them one and all.

TRIED TO BUY HIM.

"Down where I worked last summer, they did not want me at first, because you were along. Then, little by little, they came to know your real worth as I know it. When we were ready to leave they wanted to keep you for good. Tried to buy you, Mike; said you were too high-class to be owned by a tramp—offered me one hundred dollars for you. ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS! Now what do you know about that? That is some money for a tramp. Think of a hobo selling a dog like you for one hundred plunks, and then sneaking off through the cornfield and you whining to go along, and can't, because you are tied with a rope. No, siree, not much. I'm some mean old man, but not mean enough for a stunt like that. No, Mike, we'll not separate for gold. Even liquor, bought with blood money like that, wouldn't taste good; a drunk on that sort of fire-water would burn a hole in a copper statue. No, sir, we hit the pike together. If we have much or little, we'll divide it and share it on the square. If we starve, we'll starve together, and when the rainbow touches the ground, and the stars shine out, and when the immortal throng, in the sweet red glow of the evening, mount the stairway of endless beauty, we will be together, and we'll go together, along with the crowd."

A GREAT GAME.

All through this talk the man and the dog seemed to be unconscious of the presence of any other soul. One could almost imagine that they were resting under the shade of some tree on a warm day in June as they enjoyed real communion with each other. Looking up for a moment, Bill seemed to include John and myself in the circle of his conversation. "Life is a great game," he said, "and it takes both brains and practice to always know who holds the winning hand. I've been both honest and crooked in my time, but after ten years of twisting, I know that an earned meal tastes the best, and even to a tramp, a good conscience is a good sleep producer. The man who is honest and industrious, does not need to brag about it. His neighbors know it better than they know him. They value him on the basis of what he is—not what he says he is. Thunder amounts to little. It takes lightning to do business. A rooster can cackle the loudest, but he lays no eggs. What I am trying to get at, all along, as I have told Mike again and again, is that under any form of human society, the prosperity and safety of the public depend on the industry, the economy, the morality and sobriety of the individual. We were brought into the world without our consent — ignorant and helpless. The world agrees that it owes us a living and an education. But it has also decreed that we must work for the one and study for the other.

"But, I have occupied the centre of the stage too long on my first acquaintance with a preacher—wasn't that what John said you were, sir? Forgive me. It is one of a whole lot of bad habits I have in common with a great multitude of my fellows. Thank God it is far from being the worst of my bad habits. I have been induced by my old friend here to stay around until the New Year comes in—so, if you and your folks are not too stuck up to have a man in as plain attire as mine, I'm coming to hear you preach on Sunday."

—Allan Fairbairn.

The Minister Remarks

—Some women are not only the best judges of women, but the best executioners as well.

—When you feel like saying mean things about anyone just talk to yourself.

—Some meetings I have had to attend have made me think I was at a convention of pall-bearers.

—To a lot of folks in the church, and out of it, illusions are more comfortable than the raw truth.

—I have noticed that people with lame tales frequently halt in the telling.

—Every time you worry you are paying interest on trouble before it becomes due.

Dear Old Santa Claus.

A minister friend of mine asked a sweet little lass, just after the third anniversary of her birthday, "Who is Santa Claus?" and without any hesitation, she answered, "He is the one who brings us toys and nuts and good things. He lives at the North Pole and comes to us at Christmas." To the minister, it was all very sweet. As he gazed into her big brown eyes and thought of her answer, he could not help wondering a bit whether she was romancing or declaring her faith. When such an answer comes from a little fairy you never can tell what lies back of it.

But who is Santa Claus?

Whoever he is I feel sure he must be someone very nice. Anyone so popular among the little folks as Santa Claus could not be anything else but nice. Of all the visitors who come to us through the year, no one receives a more royal welcome than the generous old gentleman who is supposed to come out of the Frozen North.

When did he first come into the lives of little children I haven't met anyone wise enough yet to answer that to my own satisfaction. We may search far back into history only to find that he is as elusive there as he is on Christmas morning. However, he has been with us so long that we simply cannot ignore him. I have known children who, if they had not found Santa Claus ready-made, would have invented one!

It is believed that his name comes from Holland. "Sankt Klaus" is the Dutch for Saint Nicholas, a greatly beloved bishop who was a friend to the children. I have read that the Germans and the Celts, from earliest times, held their yuletide feast at the time of the winter solstice in celebration of the turn of the sun in its course. And when these people were converted to Christianity many of their usages passed over to the celebration of Christ's birth. The more spiritual in the Church sought to counteract anything that was pagan among the old customs. So there was introduced the singing of carols and other things in keeping with the Scripture account. In all probability Santa Claus came in as the impersonation of this very kindly old bishop who lived long ago and was specially kind to the little folks. It may be that the minister's little friend was not so far wrong after all.

O! mystic solitude of night
Within this holy place,
The taper dim. . . .
The blessed star doth shed its light
To bathe my upturned face
In thoughts of Him. . . .

My Lord, that liest cradled there,
Thou who art yet divine
In cattle stall,
Thou who dost hear my foolish prayer:
What in this heart of mine
Doth sobbing call?

Those tender arms that circle Thee,
What gentle secret theirs
To guard and store?
This glory that the shepherds see,
This joy the Mother wears—
Blind, I adore.

O! Jesu, wond'rous Babe, could I
Discover even now
This mystery,
Would this that on my heart doth lie
Be sped? A holy vow
Remains to me.

From out the scented East, they say,
Three princes seeking came
With gifts so dear:
Accept, O! holy Babe, I pray,—
Lo! starting at Thy Name—
Thy maiden's tear.

A CORDIAL WELCOME TO ALL

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

IS there a child in any civilized corner of the earth who doesn't know that Christmas is near? I don't believe there can be. For weeks most children have been looking forward to the day that is associated with good cheer and gifts of one kind and another. Surely a Christmas story will be acceptable this week. Well, here is one that carries a real Christmas message. It is the story of a poor little street girl who was taken sick one Christmas and carried to the hospital. While there she heard the story of Jesus coming into the world to save us. One day she whispered to the nurse, "I am having real good times here—ever such good times! S'pose I'll have to 'way from here just as soon as I get well; but I'll take the good time along—some of it, anyhow. Did you know about Jesus bein' born?" "Yes," replied the nurse, "I know. Sh-sh-sh! Don't talk any more." "You did? I thought you looked as if you didn't, and I was going to tell you." "Why how did I look?" asked the nurse, forgetting her own order in her curiosity. "Oh, just like most o' folks—kind o' glum. I shouldn't think you'd ever look glum, if you know about Jesus bein' born."

I don't know all that was done for the nurse by the little girl's question and explanation, but I am sure she would be all the better for it. Let us carry the Christmas story in our faces. Why should we "look glum" when we know about Jesus being born?

If I cease to become better I shall soon cease to be good.—Cromwell.

Men who left their mark upon their day have been men of great and prompt decision.

Things That Count

DISPLAYS of moral excellence, truths set forth in living actions, are multiplied as they are shown. Men are won by what they approve. They are led to imitate what they admire. Laudable actions never stand alone. They go from eye to eye, from heart to heart, creating fresh copies of their immortal worth.

A CONTRACTED LIFE

THE professional broad-minded individual is usually living a very contracted life. A horizonless life is only a mirage. A defined boundary means at least that you are living in a real and not a phantom universe. A cubical personality has breadth, but at the same time it has length and height. It is evangelical in that it is as broad as truth and as basic as reality. Such a life recognizes that high thinking and deep thinking and long thinking and strong thinking are quite as important as broad thinking. If what is called broad-mindedness carried its proper label it would be weak-mindedness.—"The Seven Finalities of Faith," by A. Z. Conrad, Ph.D., D.D.

THE MUNICIPAL NOMINATIONS.

While the failure of some of those nominated to qualify will thin down the number of aspirants in the running for the City Council and Board of Education, there promises to be enough candidates left in the field to ensure the electors of a good choice.

This is a condition that is to be desired for more than one reason.

In the first place, a large number of candidates indicates a healthy interest in the municipal government and an equally healthy willingness to serve, without which no community can make much real progress.

Again, the presence in the field of numerous aspirants invariably has the effect of stimulating general interest in the campaign, and of bringing out a larger vote and consequently registering a more complete expression of public opinion.

This second development in particular is greatly to be desired; a community that makes good use of its franchise usually is alive, progressive and flourishing, and any condition that has the effect of exciting the electors to use their voting privileges is on that account welcome.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

The Brantford theatre manager who has given orders to his ushers to instruct any patrons who are coughing or sneezing promiscuously to go to the box-office and receive a refund on their tickets, is a public benefactor.

His plan, if carried out by theatre proprietors generally, would do much to check the spread of influenza, inasmuch as it would cause people who are suffering from the disease to remain away from entertainment places where their presence would be a menace to the public health.

Undoubtedly such epidemics as the present have no greater ally than the individual who tries to keep going under an attack of the "flu," and in doing so spreads infection to many of those with whom he comes into contact.

When these sufferers invade a crowded store, a picture show or a Christmas gathering, they are a source of danger, and the Brantford manager who has adopted the plan of asking all such people to leave deserves credit for his common sense as well as for his moral courage.

As a matter of fact, school teachers dread the Christmas holidays because of their knowledge of how their pupils run into infection, schools that have had a clean record in the matter of contagious diseases up to the holidays usually encountering cases when the next term gets under way.

From a health viewpoint, they believe that the children are safer in school than promiscuously mingling with crowds.

YESTERDAY'S ACCLAMATIONS.

The re-election by acclamation of His Worship Mayor Denne and of Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission, was an expected development of the nomination proceedings.

It has usually been the custom in Peterborough to accord the chief magistrate the compliment of a second term in office without a contest, and in the present instance the custom is thoroughly justified, inasmuch as Mr. Denne has been a hard-working and successful Mayor, devoting a great deal of his time and executive ability to the city's business.

There is no more enthusiastic believer in or booster for Peterborough than His Worship, who never loses an opportunity of telling outsiders of the manifold advantages enjoyed by the people of this city, or of planning something that he feels will make this an even better community in which to live.

It is said that a successful salesman must thoroughly believe in his product.

Mayor Denne, convinced that this is the best small city in Canada, believes that his task is to sell Peterborough not only to the world outside, but to its own citizens, many of whom he feels do not appreciate how much their home town has to offer.

He has made substantial progress in that direction, and his second year as Mayor should be marked by results that will amply repay the electors for the compliment paid him yesterday.

Mr. Matthews, although only three years in office, is not only the chairman but the dean of the Utilities Commission, the other two members of which have had but two and one year's experience, respectively.

His re-election without a contest is evidence of the community's satisfaction with the work that he has done and of their confidence that the experience he has gained during his first term will enable him to give even more valuable service during the next three years.

Mr. Matthews, one of the younger executives in Peterborough, is the type of citizen Premier Ferguson had in mind the other night when he called upon the youth of Canada to take more interest in municipal, Provincial and Federal politics.

Few men in Peterborough have done so much to promote sport, but not satisfied with that worth-while work, Mr. Matthews has shown a willingness to serve on the Utilities Commission and in other capacities, and yesterday's acclamation indicates that his fellow-citizens are grateful for his public spirit.

A FORGOTTEN CANADIAN POET.

The days of the "Dunciad," when poets waged perpetual war, and found a savage joy in flaying one another in virulent verse, are long since past. The tendency now is all the other way. Peace reigns in the temple of Apollo; the brethren of the muses dwell happily together in unity, and a spirit of mutual admiration, which freely manifests itself in the literary exercise known as log-rolling, has generally taken the place of the old indulgence in satire and invective.

There are, of course, still Shaws and Menckens, Douglasses and Noyses who rush in where more angelic critics fear to tread, to occasionally spoil the beautiful harmony which prevails among the modern Bays. Even in Canada, disturbers of the Parnassian peace are not unknown. It is not long since some of our poets were exchanging courtesies which would certainly have been declared out of order at a convention of the Authors' Association, and we recall a particular occasion when Mr. Wilson MacDonald ventured to express an opinion about another Canadian poet which was more courageous than polite.

But Mr. MacDonald, who is at present on a lecturing tour, takes the view that to be a poet does not necessarily disqualify one from being a critic. He claims, indeed, that "a poet's opinion of a poet is, after all, the most valuable opinion," and while critics, who are not poets, may take issue with him on that point, those who heard him speak will not deny that his judgment of other poets has at least the merit of frankness.

It may also be said of him that if he can courageously condemn, he can also handsomely praise. The other evening he surprised an audience at Peterborough with a glowing panegyric of a Canadian poet of whom, probably, few of those present had ever heard, and whom fewer still, perhaps, had not forgotten. Admiration of our living poets should not cause us to neglect the work of those who have gone before. It is well to remember that there were gifted singers in the land when those who charm us with their melodies to-day were lisping numbers "somewhat in the infantine." And in calling attention to the neglected work of Isabella Valancy Crawford, whose last verses were written in Toronto, 41 years ago, Mr. Wilson MacDonald rendered a service which lovers of true poetry should appreciate.

His tribute to the memory of Miss Crawford was none the less worthy because it happened to be inspired by local circumstances and was, in a sense, unpremeditated. Visiting a large school in the vicinity of Lakefield, where the young poetess from Dublin had her home for some years, and her rich fancy first found flight, Mr. MacDonald was shocked to discover that, among the pupils who knew anything about Canadian poetry, only fourteen had ever heard of Miss Crawford.

Perhaps it was the sudden reaction to this disconcerting discovery that led him into a strain of eulogy which, to many, must seem extravagant. To assert that Miss Crawford was a greater poet than Longfellow is to give rein to the language of hyperbole. It was equally well-meant, yet uncritical, laudation of her genius in an injudicious introduction to a posthumous collection of her poems that injured, rather than helped, the innocent author's reputation, and impeded due recognition of her undoubted worth.

That much of Miss Crawford's poetry was of a very high quality, all too little appreciated in these days, may with justice be claimed. But if comparisons, proverbially dangerous, are to be made, she suggests in many of her moods Emily Bronte rather than the author of "Hiawatha" and "Evangeline." If she lacked the strong introspective note of the English poetess, she had much of the latter's keen feminine intuition and sympathy, and a scarcely less penetrating insight into the soul of nature. Only, where Smily was persistently gloomy, Isabella was almost uniformly vivacious.

It is not by her more pretentious poems, such as "Old Spookse's Pass" and "Malcolm's Katie" that Miss Crawford makes her chief appeal. In the former, among the rough cowboys of the Rockies, she was clearly out of her element, and in her attempt to follow Tennyson in the idyl bearing the latter title she came closer to Longfellow than to the English master. But few Canadian poets have excelled her in the purely lyrical and romantic vein. "La Blanchisseuse," "Roses in Madrid" and "The Camp of Souls," to name only three of her shorter pieces, are gems which alone should preserve the name and perpetuate the memory of Isabella Valancy Crawford, whose death, at the early age of 36, deprived Canadian literature of a spirit rich in fulfilment and of still richer promise.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The electors have given both Mayor Denne and Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission, a neat Christmas box in the form of another term in office by acclamation.

There is no scarcity of nominations for the Board of Education, but the number of candidates may be reduced materially by to-night.

Ten witnesses in a Chicago case have disappeared. They may not like British books in the Windy City, but apparently they need some old-fashioned British methods of administering justice.

The Conservative candidate in Victoria has gained nine votes on a recount. A few more check-ups would at this rate give him a very respectable majority.

Mr. Ferguson has appointed two new Ministers without Portfolio, doubtless in the hope that it will be easier to get a quorum than it was the other day when the Premier was the only member of the Cabinet on the job.

Christmas toys are on such an elaborate scale nowadays that the children will be lucky if they get a chance to play with them within a week after Christmas.

The advice to treat every case of influenza seriously should be carefully followed. Such a course would do much to check the spread of the disease.

A Thought

INTERESTS

Every one would pursue his own inteerst if he knew what it was and, in fact, every one does pursue it, but generally totally mistakes it.

GOD'S MINUTE.

I have loved thee with an everlasting love.—Jer. 31:2.

Our Father in Heaven, we would praise and magnify Thy Holy name. Thy love watches over us, protecting us from every kind of danger, and provides for our every need. Thou dost never fail us. We trust in Thee.

We have sinned against Thee in thought and word and deed, but we come with contrite hearts, confessing our unworthiness, and pleading for Thy forgiveness, through the merits of the shed blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ.

We thank Thee for all Thy good gifts unto us, and we pray Thee to accept us and to use us as Thou canst. Bless each of us as we need Thy blessing. And, with us, bless all the ill, the sorrowing, the discouraged, the sinning, and all Thy needy ones. We would pray also for all those engaged in lowly or great tasks for the extension of Thy Kingdom in the hearts of men everywhere.

And now do Thou be with us in our daily task of hand or mind, May we be workmen in things material and spiritual of whom Thou needest not to be ashamed. Gathe us home after while, without one missing. We ask it in Jesus' name. Amen.

THE LUCKIEST LADY — BY RUBY M. AYRES

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS — the Little Flapper—always called her young adopted mother, MARNA PAGET, the Luckiest Lady, for she thought Marna had everything heart could wish—youth, beauty, wealth and the love of a devoted husband. But Marna was unhappy. She had married without loving GEORGE PEGET, and three months later had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. He had gone to China, but after years of separation they find that they love each other as much as ever. As the Little Flapper grows older she realizes something of the situation and worries about it. Hugh returns after five years, and is a guest of the Pagets. Another guest is Biddy's friend DOLLY BENSON, the Big Flapper. Biddy realizes that she is herself in love with Hugh.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XV—WHAT RENNY THOUGHT

Biddy heard the car come up the drive, and the sound of George Paget's voice in the hall; she heard the gong sound for lunch, but still she did not move.

Then she heard Marna's voice:

"Biddy! Biddy dear!"

The Little Flapper rose then and moved stiffly to the door, dragging it open with cold fingers.

"Coming, darling—just coming!"

Down in the hall, the Big Flapper stood at the foot of the stairs, talking to Hugh Hubbard.

Biddy heard her saying:

"I gave five and a half guineas for the beastly thing, and now I don't suppose I shall ever wear it."

And then Hugh in reply:

"Do you mean to say that a child like you is allowed to spend all that money on a sweater thing?"

So he treated the Big Flapper like a child, and she was several years older than Biddy!

"He must think I'm just a baby," the Little Flapper told herself humbly. "If he ever thinks about me at all!"

And then, as if her thought reached him, Hubbard raised his eyes and saw her coming down the stairs.

He was looking rather preoccupied, but he smiled as he met the Little Flapper's wistful gaze—smiled as a man might smile at a child who is anxious to make friends with him.

Biddy stood still. She felt as if something had turned in her heart, as the frightened knowledge came suddenly home to her.

"I do love him. Dolly was quite right. I do love him!"

Renny Martin put out a rather unsteady hand and refilled his glass with port. He was a very rugged-looking man, with rough, sandy-colored hair and deep-set eyes. There were more lines on his face than his age warranted, and he had a rather loose, sensual mouth.

"Why don't you chuck your job, Hubbard, and stay in England?" he asked.

Hugh laughed cynically.

"And starve, or live on my friends? Which do you suggest?"

Hugh Hubbard did not like Renny Martin any more than the Little Flapper liked him.

"You know there'd be no need for you to do either, old man," George Paget said. "I told you the other day that Tom Sawyer—head of Sawyer and Sons—promised me——"

Hubbard cut in almost rudely.

"I hate England. I've no wish to live in England."

Renny Martin chuckled.

"Perhaps it's a case of 'The girl he left behind him'—in China!" he suggested.

Hubbard made no answer, and Martin went on, after draining his glass:

"There's always a woman, bless 'em! Take my own life, for instance! Milestoned with petticoats. Been the ruin of me, petticoats have."

Paget cut in cheerily:

"Well, they don't wear 'em any longer, so you can cheer up! Young sinner, old saint, Martin! You've got lots of time to reform. Have some more port."

Martin pushed his glass across the table. He disliked George Paget, and despised him because he was apparently blind to most things that went on directly beneath his nose, and because he never seemed to see how he was sponged upon by most of his so-called friends, and because he was entirely unconscious of the tragedy being so silently endured by Marna and Hugh Hubbard.

Renny Martin knew all about it. He possessed a certain unpleasant shrewdness that easily put him wise to many things concerning people in whom he was interested. But it suited him for the moment to pretend complete ignorance; he felt that he could afford to sit on the fence and bide his time.

He knew how Marna had been tortured during dinner. When Hubbard mentioned his departure the apparent calmness and indifference had not deceived him, and in his heart he was hating Hubbard for having succeeded where so far he himself had failed, hating him most of all because he knew him to be an honorable man.

"What d'ye do with yourself in Shanghai, Hugh?" George Paget asked abruptly.

Hubbard started.

"What do I do? Oh, work."

"Yes, but when the work's done. What sort of enjoyment do you get out there? Recreations, don't you know."

"Oh, there's a club. We play bridge and poker. I read a good many books, too. The time passes quickly enough."

But there was a keen note of bitterness in Hubbard's voice as he recalled an infinity of torturous hours, during which he had sat with a disregarded book on his knees and an unlit pipe clenched between his teeth.

The past weeks had taught him that his love for Marna had grown a thousandfold with separation. He had come home, driven not only by his longing to see her again, but also by an almost childish curiosity in his own emotions, and the desire to discover if they were still as deep and sincere as he imagined. And his first glimpse of Marna's face had given him the answer.

There was no moment when she did not fill his thoughts; no moment when he could forget her.

George Paget was rattling on again cheerily.

"Should like to see Shanghai. Shouldn't be surprised if I don't take a trip out there some day, don'tcherknow."

Renny Martin looked at Hubbard with a sly smile in his deep-set eyes.

"Wonder you don't," he said. "Mrs. Paget would enjoy it immensely, I should think."

Hubbard frowned.

"It's not much of a climate," he interposed quickly. "Not worth the long journey just for a holiday."

"Mrs. Paget would probably disagree with you," Renny Martin murmured.

The two men looked at one another across the table, and Renny smiled—a slow, detestable smile of infinite meaning.

"Oh, Marna's a splendid traveller," George Paget broke in happily. "Better than I am! Takes the smooth with the rough without a word of complaint, bless her! Hallo! What's up now, little 'un?"

For the door had suddenly been burst open by the Little Flapper.

"Marna says you're to hurry up. Mrs. Blair's just rung through and asked us all out to Finchley to dance. Harnigan's getting both cars ready, and either you or Mr. Hubbard is to drive the two-seater, Uncle George."

She danced excitedly round to his chair and, bending, lightly kissed his cheek.

"Won't you serve us all alike?" Renny Martin inquired, with mock envy.

The Little Flapper haughtily ignored him, and turned again to the door.

"And hurry, hurry, hurry!" she admonished them all.

Paget drained his glass and pushed back his chair.

"No peace for the wicked," he grumbled, but he looked quite happy. "You can drive the two-seater, Hugh. I'm not keen on driving at night. Getting old and nervy."

"Nonsense!" Hugh protested. "You're the youngest of us all."

"Probably because he's the happiest," Martin said cynically.

When they went out into the hall, Marna was coming downstairs, a soft white fur wrap over her frock.

"I hope nobody minds," she apologized. "But Biddy and Dolly love dancing so much, I just hadn't the heart to refuse to go."

"Don't we all love dancing?" Renny Martin said. He made Marna a mock bow. "Fair lady, at your tiny feet——" he began melodramatically.

George Paget cuffed him good-humoredly aside.

"Hugh's going to drive the Renault," he told his wife. "Don't know who'll trust themselves to his tender care, but——"

"Oh, I will," Marna answered readily. "And I like the Renault. You and Renny can take the girls, George."

She spoke calmly enough, but she was not calm. Ever since that moment at dinner when Hubbard had announced his intended departure she had been on the verge of breaking down.

Renny Martin, watching her, saw how tightly her fingers were clenched on the folds of her white wrap, and how strained was the smile with which she greeted Biddy and the Big Flapper as they tumbled excitedly downstairs.

The Little Flapper danced up to Marna.

"How are we going, darling? And is Uncle George going to drive the Renault?"

"No, Mr. Hubbard will, and I am going with him. Harnigan will take the rest of you."

"Oh." The smallest shadow fell over the Little Flapper's face. For a moment she had hoped—almost dared to hope, as she looked across at Hubbard, that perhaps—perhaps——

The Big Flapper pirouetted to the front.

"I'd simply love to go in the Renault with Mr. Hubbard!" she declared, true as ever to her policy, that if you want a thing the best way is to be frank about it and say so; but Marna only smiled and shook her head.

"No, I'm going myself. Hurry up, all of you; we're wasting time. It's nine o'clock already."

She turned to the open door, the others crowding after her.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Adverse aspects are strong today, according to astrology, which finds the planetary government rather sinister for dwellers on the Earth.

Women may be especially sensitive to the influence of the stars which tends toward the sort of nervousness that encourages irritability.

Under this sway it is believed that both men and women rebel against conventions and desire liberty or even license in their avocations.

The churches may suffer from apathy or indifference on the part of congregations at this time when there will be a tendency toward extremes in amusement.

While this configuration prevails routine programs and regular paths of action may be deserted and a sense of general disorganization may be strong.

The seers counsel poise and patience during days when business matters necessarily suffer from Christmas excitement.

It is well to attune oneself to the spirit of the stars and to abandon serious pursuits as far as possible, for the stars seem to frown on serious effort in the business world.

This is a time to plan rather than to start any new project, for even with fine co-operation there may be much misjudgment while this sway continues.

The wise will not try to settle their own financial problems under this direction of the stars. It is well to ignore money questions if they can be forgotten until after the beginning of the new year, astrologers announce.

There is a good sign today for sociability. Visiting and entertaining should be attended with pleasure and profit.

Both men and women are to be vitally interested in a new international problem that will demonstrate national progress and supremacy, the seers declare.

World friendships and world enmities are to multiply in the new year which is bringing to the United States a thrilling chapter in its history.

Persons whose birthdate it is may find it necessary to exercise economy in the coming year which may cause them anxiety, but they may assure their own success by wise policies.

Children born on this day may be headstrong and difficult to manage. The subjects of Capricorn often have primitive instincts that puzzle parents, but they usually are excedeingly clever and able to win success.

Conflicting aspects are seen in today's horoscope, according to astrology, and the morning is the most auspicious time for any sort of important accomplishment.

Women again have the friendly stars on their side and they should find the day most favorable to domestic preparations, last minute shopping and social affairs.

There is a first rate sway for weddings and marriages today should be attended by prosperity.

There is a benefic aspect that promises aid to those who are engaged in any sort of philanthropic or charitable work.

Under this planetary government those who forget self in their solicitude for others are believed to benefit greatly.

In the business world the early morning hours are best today and should be employed in constructive plans or routine work.

There is a sign read as helpful to those who engage in occult studies or religious observances.

Caution is given to those who deal in oil or other liquids under this rule of the stars which is inimical to success.

While this rule prevails there may be a tendency to exaggerate and even to deceive. It is not a good time to buy real estate or to speculate.

Men should beware of designing women who play at love, for those who read the stars see perils to those who dabble in romance.

There is a good sign for intellectual or artistic interests. Much mental activity is encouraged while this configuration prevails.

The rule is conducive to tender memories and high resolutions which bring members of families into closer sympathy.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of success in financial affairs in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will have a distinct talent for constructive work. These subjects of Capricorn often combine practical ideals with artistic instincts. They generally make a success of life.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE HAVE QUEER DREAMS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

During sleep the major portion of the brain is inactive. But the brain is never wholly quiet, even in the deepest sleep. Dreams are nothing more than the normal activity of the brain centers such as go on during the waking state, except that the dream thoughts are less orderly because there is no unifying principle.

Many of the tiny brain cells which ordinarily connect up one idea with another and with the proper related ideas are inactive i n sleep. So that when some active portion starts functioning it has to go where it will. The connections are poor and frequently nothing comes of it and you do not even recall that the particular idea ever went through your mind.

A dream is an unconscious mental process and is accompanied by a feeble nervous impulse which has very little effect on the brain center through which it passes. Consequently the succeeding nervous impulses do not find it easy to follow the nervous path and the dream is poorly remembered or completely forgotten.

When we exercise the function of thinking we direct the process by means of attention, but in the dream there is no such directing force, so that the plot of the dream develops as by accident. It is an improvised affair. The nervous impulse that happens to be active goes into the path that offers the least resistance at the moment and often finds itself in very queer places. Here is where the fantastic dream originates. It is nothing but the wild ramblings of an untied colt in the pasture lot, or, better still, like a ship without rudder or anchor. It follows the path of least resistance.

And in so far as dreams represent our hidden fears and desires they are necessarily as queer and fantastic as these fears and desires themselves. And these are often very queer indeed. We have symbols for almost every one of our suppressed wishes. Even in our waking state we do not always call a spade a spade. We call it by a nickname but we know the code. In the dream however, we take these freakish symbols literally with the result that the dream appears outlandish and fantastic.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE PASSING SHOWER

What gives the rose its beauty? Not
The sun alone, alone the days
When every little garden spot
Is golden with his glittering rays.
Hearts can grow sick of too much praise,
And roses weary of the sun;
There surely must be other ways
To bring to beauty either one.

There was a need of raining there,
Aye, even need of wintry snows,
There must be other days than fair
To give such beauty to a rose.
Our griefs are hard enough, God knows,
And yet I hear in each bird's throat
A certain sadness when he goes
That gives his song a deeper note.

Roses, and birds, and human hearts,
Are sweeter for some solemn hour,
And, if your sun awhile departs,
'Twill make of life a fairer flow'r.
'Tis not our wealth, our pomp, our pow'r,
That makes us braver and more kind—
It was the passing of some show'r
That left some gentler thought behind.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

THE MAIL COLLECTOR.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: In Wednesday's issue of The Examiner I read with interest the article on the Christmas rush at our local post office and noticed this statement: "The mails are growing heavier and heavier, and within the next few days we will put on eighteen extra men, three inside and fifteen out, with the letter carriers. To-morrow another truck will be added to help with the delivery of parcels." These extra men will surely help to lighten the work of those concerned, but how about the mail collector? His work must of necessity increase the same as the other's, yet he is forced to continue to empty letter and parcel boxes from early morning to late at night, without extra assistance.

However, it is not that I object to a man doing a little extra work once a year, but irony of it is, whereas the mail carrier comes in contact with many generous people who show their appreciation for his services at Christmas, the mail collector who has been giving unfailing service at their corner post box goes unnoticed.

Myself, I'm for remembering the unobserved public servants like the mail collector and the garbage man, as well as the postman and paper boy.

Sincerely yours,
"A Citizen."

CHRISTMAS-TIDE

(By Mrs. A. F. Calder)

Comes the Merry Christmastide again
With all its glad and festal train
And joyous cheer—
Blest time, by youth and age, confessed
The happiest and the very best
Of all the year.

Then, for a while, we lay aside
Anger, and enmity, and pride,
All strife, and wrong;
And pause, 'mid earth's turmoil to hear
Around, above, in cadence clear
The Seraph's song.

At this Holy time, no thought unkind
May, in our hearts, a resting find
Grudge, or ill will;
But gratitude to God above,
To men below, brotherly love,
Our bosoms fill.

For why, at Yuletide, Christ resigned
The bliss of Heaven, that thus, mankind
Heaven's bliss might win.
He came to save us each and all,
And free us from the deadly thrall
Of guilt and sin.

To His great love for us we owe
All that of Yuletide joy we know;
Ours then to raise
To Him, the Babe, of Bethlehem's stall—
Our Saviour, King and Lord of all,
Glad songs of praise.

THE MUNICIPAL NOMINATIONS.

While the failure of some of those nominated to qualify will thin down the number of aspirants in the running for the City Council and Board of Education, there promises to be enough candidates left in the field to ensure the electors of a good choice.

This is a condition that is to be desired for more than one reason.

In the first place, a large number of candidates indicates a healthy interest in the municipal government and an equally healthy willingness to serve, without which no community can make much real progress.

Again, the presence in the field of numerous aspirants invariably has the effect of stimulating general interest in the campaign, and of bringing out a larger vote and consequently registering a more complete expression of public opinion.

This second development in particular is greatly to be desired; a community that makes good use of its franchise usually is alive, progressive and flourishing, and any condition that has the effect of exciting the electors to use their voting privileges is on that account welcome.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

The Brantford theatre manager who has given orders to his ushers to instruct any patrons who are coughing or sneezing promiscuously to go to the box-office and receive a refund on their tickets, is a public benefactor.

His plan, if carried out by theatre proprietors generally, would do much to check the spread of influenza, inasmuch as it would cause people who are suffering from the disease to remain away from entertainment places where their presence would be a menace to the public health.

Undoubtedly such epidemics as the present have no greater ally than the individual who tries to keep going under an attack of the "flu," and in doing so spreads infection to many of those with whom he comes into contact.

When these sufferers invade a crowded store, a picture show or a Christmas gathering, they are a source of danger, and the Brantford manager who has adopted the plan of asking all such people to leave deserves credit for his common sense as well as for his moral courage.

As a matter of fact, school teachers dread the Christmas holidays because of their knowledge of how their pupils run into infection, schools that have had a clean record in the matter of contagious diseases up to the holidays usually encountering cases when the next term gets under way.

From a health viewpoint, they believe that the children are safer in school than promiscuously mingling with crowds.

YESTERDAY'S ACCLAMATIONS.

The re-election by acclamation of His Worship Mayor Denne and of Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission, was an expected development of the nomination proceedings.

It has usually been the custom in Peterborough to accord the chief magistrate the compliment of a second term in office without a contest, and in the present instance the custom is thoroughly justified, inasmuch as Mr. Denne has been a hard-working and successful Mayor, devoting a great deal of his time and executive ability to the city's business.

There is no more enthusiastic believer in or booster for Peterborough than His Worship, who never loses an opportunity of telling outsiders of the manifold advantages enjoyed by the people of this city, or of planning something that he feels will make this an even better community in which to live.

It is said that a successful salesman must thoroughly believe in his product.

Mayor Denne, convinced that this is the best small city in Canada, believes that his task is to sell Peterborough not only to the world outside, but to its own citizens, many of whom he feels do not appreciate how much their home town has to offer.

He has made substantial progress in that direction, and his second year as Mayor should be marked by results that will amply repay the electors for the compliment paid him yesterday.

Mr. Matthews, although only three years in office, is not only the chairman but the dean of the Utilities Commission, the other two members of which have had but two and one year's experience, respectively.

His re-election without a contest is evidence of the community's satisfaction with the work that he has done and of their confidence that the experience he has gained during his first term will enable him to give even more valuable service during the next three years.

Mr. Matthews, one of the younger executives in Peterborough, is the type of citizen Premier Ferguson had in mind the other night when he called upon the youth of Canada to take more interest in municipal, Provincial and Federal politics.

Few men in Peterborough have done so much to promote sport, but not satisfied with that worth-while work, Mr. Matthews has shown a willingness to serve on the Utilities Commission and in other capacities, and yesterday's acclamation indicates that his fellow-citizens are grateful for his public spirit.

A FORGOTTEN CANADIAN POET.

The days of the "Dunciad," when poets waged perpetual war, and found a savage joy in flaying one another in virulent verse, are long since past. The tendency now is all the other way. Peace reigns in the temple of Apollo; the brethren of the muses dwell happily together in unity, and a spirit of mutual admiration, which freely manifests itself in the literary exercise known as log-rolling, has generally taken the place of the old indulgence in satire and invective.

There are, of course, still Shaws and Menckens, Douglasses and Noyses who rush in where more angelic critics fear to tread, to occasionally spoil the beautiful harmony which prevails among the modern Bays. Even in Canada, disturbers of the Parnassian peace are not unknown. It is not long since some of our poets were exchanging courtesies which would certainly have been declared out of order at a convention of the Authors' Association, and we recall a particular occasion when Mr. Wilson MacDonald ventured to express an opinion about another Canadian poet which was more courageous than polite.

But Mr. MacDonald, who is at present on a lecturing tour, takes the view that to be a poet does not necessarily disqualify one from being a critic. He claims, indeed, that "a poet's opinion of a poet is, after all, the most valuable opinion," and while critics, who are not poets, may take issue with him on that point, those who heard him speak will not deny that his judgment of other poets has at least the merit of frankness.

It may also be said of him that if he can courageously condemn, he can also handsomely praise. The other evening he surprised an audience at Peterborough with a glowing panegyric of a Canadian poet of whom, probably, few of those present had ever heard, and whom fewer still, perhaps, had not forgotten. Admiration of our living poets should not cause us to neglect the work of those who have gone before. It is well to remember that there were gifted singers in the land when those who charm us with their melodies to-day were lisping numbers "somewhat in the infantine." And in calling attention to the neglected work of Isabella Valancy Crawford, whose last verses were written in Toronto, 41 years ago, Mr. Wilson MacDonald rendered a service which lovers of true poetry should appreciate.

His tribute to the memory of Miss Crawford was none the less worthy because it happened to be inspired by local circumstances and was, in a sense, unpremeditated. Visiting a large school in the vicinity of Lakefield, where the young poetess from Dublin had her home for some years, and her rich fancy first found flight, Mr. MacDonald was shocked to discover that, among the pupils who knew anything about Canadian poetry, only fourteen had ever heard of Miss Crawford.

Perhaps it was the sudden reaction to this disconcerting discovery that led him into a strain of eulogy which, to many, must seem extravagant. To assert that Miss Crawford was a greater poet than Longfellow is to give rein to the language of hyperbole. It was equally well-meant, yet uncritical, laudation of her genius in an injudicious introduction to a posthumous collection of her poems that injured, rather than helped, the innocent author's reputation, and impeded due recognition of her undoubted worth.

That much of Miss Crawford's poetry was of a very high quality, all too little appreciated in these days, may with justice be claimed. But if comparisons, proverbially dagnerous, are to be made, she suggests in many of her moods Emily Bronte rather than the author of "Hiawatha" and "Evangeline." If she lacked the strong introspective note of the English poetess, she had much of the latter's keen feminine intuition and sympathy, and a scarcely less penetrating insight into the soul of nature. Only, where Smily was persistently gloomy, Isabella was almost uniformly vivacious.

It is not by her more pretentious poems, such as "Old Spookse's Pass" and "Malcolm's Katie" that Miss Crawford makes her chief appeal. In the former, among the rough cowboys of the Rockies, she was clearly out of her element, and in her attempt to follow Tennyson in the idyl bearing the latter title she came closer to Longfellow than to the English master. But few Canadian poets have excelled her in the purely lyrical and romantic vein. "La Blanchisseuse," "Roses in Madrid" and "The Camp of Souls," to name only three of her shorter pieces, are gems which alone should preserve the name and perpetuate the memory of Isabella Valancy Crawford, whose death, at the early age of 36, deprived Canadian literature of a spirit rich in fulfilment and of still richer promise.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The electors have given both Mayor Denne and Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission, a neat Christmas box in the form of another term in office by acclamation.

There is no scarcity of nominations for the Board of Education, but the number of candidates may be reduced materially by to-night.

Ten witnesses in a Chicago case have disappeared. They may not like British books in the Windy City, but apparently they need some old-fashioned British methods of administering justice.

The Conservative candidate in Victoria has gained nine votes on a recount. A few more check-ups would at this rate give him a very respectable majority.

Mr. Ferguson has appointed two new Ministers without Portfolio, doubtless in the hope that it will be easier to get a quorum than it was the other day when the Premier was the only member of the Cabinet on the job.

Christmas toys are on such an elaborate scale nowadays that the children will be lucky if they get a chance to play with them within a week after Christmas.

The advice to treat every case of influenza seriously should be carefully followed. Such a course would do much to check the spread of the disease.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS — the Little Flapper—always called her young adopted mother, MARNA PAGET, the Luckiest Lady, for she thought Marna had everything heart could wish—youth, beauty, wealth and the love of a devoted husband. But Marna was unhappy. She had married without loving GEORGE PEGET, and three months later had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. He had gone to China, but after years of separation they find that they love each other as much as ever. As the Little Flapper grows older she realizes something of the situation and worries about it. Hugh returns after five years, and is a guest of the Pagets. Another guest is Biddy's friend DOLLY BENSON, the Big Flapper. Biddy realizes that she is herself in love with Hugh.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XV—WHAT RENNY THOUGHT

Biddy heard the car come up the drive, and the sound of George Paget's voice in the hall; she heard the gong sound for lunch, but still she did not move.

Then she heard Marna's voice:

"Biddy! Biddy dear!"

The Little Flapper rose then and moved stiffly to the door, dragging it open with cold fingers.

"Coming, darling—just coming!"

Down in the hall, the Big Flapper stood at the foot of the stairs, talking to Hugh Hubbard.

Biddy heard her saying:

"I gave five and a half guineas for the beastly thing, and now I don't suppose I shall ever wear it."

And then Hugh in reply:

"Do you mean to say that a child like you is allowed to spend all that money on a sweater thing?"

So he treated the Big Flapper like a child, and she was several years older than Biddy!

"He must think I'm just a baby," the Little Flapper told herself humbly. "If he ever thinks about me at all!"

And then, as if her thought reached him, Hubbard raised his eyes and saw her coming down the stairs.

He was looking rather preoccupied, but he smiled as he met the Little Flapper's wistful gaze—smiled as a man might smile at a child who is anxious to make friends with him.

Biddy stood still. She felt as if something had turned in her heart, as the frightened knowledge came suddenly home to her.

"I do love him. Dolly was quite right. I do love him!"

Renny Martin put out a rather unsteady hand and refilled his glass with port. He was a very rugged-looking man, with rough, sandy-colored hair and deep-set eyes. There were more lines on his face than his age warranted, and he had a rather loose, sensual mouth.

"Why don't you chuck your job, Hubbard, and stay in England?" he asked.

Hugh laughed cynically.

"And starve, or live on my friends? Which do you suggest?"

Hugh Hubbard did not like Renny Martin any more than the Little Flapper liked him.

"You know there'd be no need for you to do either, old man," George Paget said. "I told you the other day that Tom Sawyer—head of Sawyer and Sons—promised me——"

Hubbard cut in almost rudely.

"I hate England. I've no wish to live in England."

Renny Martin chuckled.

"Perhaps it's a case of 'The girl he left behind him'—in China!" he suggested.

Hubbard made no answer, and Martin went on, after draining his glass:

"There's always a woman, bless 'em! Take my own life, for instance! Milestoned with petticoats. Been the ruin of me, petticoats have."

Paget cut in cheerily:

"Well, they don't wear 'em any longer, so you can cheer up! Young sinner, old saint, Martin! You've got lots of time to reform. Have some more port."

Martin pushed his glass across the table. He disliked George Paget, and despised him because he was apparently blind to most things that went on directly beneath his nose, and because he never seemed to see how he was sponged upon by most of his so-called friends, and because he was entirely unconscious of the tragedy being so silently endured by Marna and Hugh Hubbard.

Renny Martin knew all about it. He possessed a certain unpleasant shrewdness that easily put him wise to many things concerning people in whom he was interested. But it suited him for the moment to pretend complete ignorance; he felt that he could afford to sit on the fence and bide his time.

He knew how Marna had been tortured during dinner. When Hubbard mentioned his departure the apparent calmness and indifference had not deceived him, and in his heart he was hating Hubbard for having succeeded where so far he himself had failed, hating him most of all because he knew him to be an honorable man.

"What d'ye do with yourself in Shanghai, Hugh?" George Paget asked abruptly.

Hubbard started.

"What do I do? Oh, work."

"Yes, but when the work's done. What sort of enjoyment do you get out there? Recreations, don't you know."

"Oh, there's a club. We play bridge and poker. I read a good many books, too. The time passes quickly enough."

But there was a keen note of bitterness in Hubbard's voice as he recalled an infinity of torturous hours, during which he had sat with a disregarded book on his knees and an unlit pipe clenched between his teeth.

The past weeks had taught him that his love for Marna had grown a thousandfold with separation. He had come home, driven not only by his longing to see her again, but also by an almost childish curiosity in his own emotions, and the desire to discover if they were still as deep and sincere as he imagined. And his first glimpse of Marna's face had given him the answer.

There was no moment when she did not fill his thoughts; no moment when he could forget her.

George Paget was rattling on again cheerily.

"Should like to see Shanghai. Shouldn't be surprised if I don't take a trip out there some day, don'tcherknow."

Renny Martin looked at Hubbard with a sly smile in his deep-set eyes.

"Wonder you don't," he said. "Mrs. Paget would enjoy it immensely, I should think."

Hubbard frowned.

"It's not much of a climate," he interposed quickly. "Not worth the long journey just for a holiday."

"Mrs. Paget would probably disagree with you," Renny Martin murmured.

The two men looked at one another across the table, and Renny smiled—a slow, detestable smile of infinite meaning.

"Oh, Marna's a splendid traveller," George Paget broke in happily. "Better than I am! Takes the smooth with the rough without a word of complaint, bless her! Hallo! What's up now, little 'un?"

For the door had suddenly been burst open by the Little Flapper.

"Marna says you're to hurry up, Mrs. Blair's just rung through and asked us all out to Finchley to dance. Harnigan's getting both cars ready, and either you or Mr. Hubbard is to drive the two-seater, Uncle George."

She danced excitedly round to his chair and, bending, lightly kissed his cheek.

"Won't you serve us all alike?" Renny Martin inquired, with mock envy.

The Little Flapper haughtily ignored him, and turned again to the door.

"And hurry, hurry, hurry!" she admonished them all.

Paget drained his glass and pushed back his chair.

"No peace for the wicked," he grumbled, but he looked quite happy. "You can drive the two-seater, Hugh. I'm not keen on driving at night. Getting old and nervy."

"Nonsense!" Hugh protested. "You're the youngest of us all."

"Probably because he's the happiest," Martin said cynically.

When they went out into the hall, Marna was coming downstairs, a soft white fur wrap over her frock.

"I hope nobody minds," she apologized. "But Biddy and Dolly love dancing so much, I just hadn't the heart to refuse to go."

"Don't we all love dancing?" Renny Martin said. He made Marna a mock bow. "Fair lady, at your tiny feet——" he began melodramatically.

George Paget cuffed him good-humoredly aside.

"Hugh's going to drive the Renault," he told his wife. "Don't know who'll trust themselves to his tender care, but——"

"Oh, I will," Marna answered readily. "And I like the Renault. You and Renny can take the girls, George."

She spoke calmly enough, but she was not calm. Ever since that moment at dinner when Hubbard had announced his intended departure she had been on the verge of breaking down.

Renny Martin, watching her, saw how tightly her fingers were clenched on the folds of her white wrap, and how strained was the smile with which she greeted Biddy and the Big Flapper as they tumbled excitedly downstairs.

The Little Flapper danced up to Marna.

"How are we going, darling? And is Uncle George going to drive the Renault?"

"No, Mr. Hubbard will, and I am going with him. Harnigan will take the rest of you."

"Oh." The smallest shadow fell over the Little Flapper's face. For a moment she had hoped—almost dared to hope, as she looked across at Hubbard, that perhaps—perhaps——

The Big Flapper pirouetted to the front.

"I'd simply love to go in the Renault with Mr. Hubbard!" she declared, true as ever to her policy, that if you want a thing the best way is to be frank about it and say so; but Marna only smiled and shook her head.

"No, I'm going myself. Hurry up, all of you; we're wasting time. It's nine o'clock already."

She turned to the open door, the others crowding after her.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Adverse aspects are strong today, according to astrology, which finds the planetary government rather sinister for dwellers on the Earth.

Women may be especially sensitive to the influence of the stars which tends toward the sort of nervousness that encourages irritability.

Under this sway it is believed that both men and women rebel against conventions and desire liberty or even license in their avocations.

The churches may suffer from apathy or indifference on the part of congregations at this time when there will be a tendency toward extremes in amusement.

While this configuration prevails routine programs and regular paths of action may be deserted and a sense of general disorganization may be strong.

The seers counsel poise and patience during days when business matters necessarily suffer from Christmas excitement.

It is well to attune oneself to the spirit of the stars and to abandon serious pursuits as far as possible, for the stars seem to frown on serious effort in the business world.

This is a time to plan rather than to start any new project, for even with fine co-operation there may be much misjudgment while this sway continues.

The wise will not try to settle their own financial problems under this direction of the stars. It is well to ignore money questions if they can be forgotten until after the beginning of the new year, astrologers announce.

There is a good sign today for sociability. Visiting and entertaining should be attended with pleasure and profit.

Both men and women are to be vitally interested in a new international problem that will demonstrate national progress and supremacy, the seers declare.

World friendships and world enmities are to multiply in the new year which is bringing to the United States a thrilling chapter in its history.

Persons whose birthdate it is may find it necessary to exercise economy in the coming year which may cause them anxiety, but they may assure their own success by wise policies.

Children born on this day may be headstrong and difficult to manage. The subjects of Capricorn often have primitive instincts that puzzle parents, but they usually are exceedingly clever and able to win success.

Conflicting aspects are seen in today's horoscope, according to astrology, and the morning is the most auspicious time for any sort of important accomplishment.

Women again have the friendly stars on their side and they should find the day most favorable to domestic preparations, last minute shopping and social affairs.

There is a first rate sway for weddings and marriages today should be attended by prosperity.

There is a benefic aspect that promises aid to those who are engaged in any sort of philanthropic or charitable work.

Under this planetary government those who forget self in their solicitude for others are believed to benefit greatly.

In the business world the early morning hours are best today and should be employed in constructive plans or routine work.

There is a sign read as helpful to those who engage in occult studies or religious observances.

Caution is given to those who deal in oil or other liquids under this rule of the stars which is inimical to success.

While this rule prevails there may be a tendency to exaggerate and even to deceive. It is not a good time to buy real estate or to speculate.

Men should beware of designing women who play at love, for those who read the stars see perils to those who dabble in romance.

There is a good sign for intellectual or artistic interests. Much mental activity is encouraged while this configuration prevails.

The rule is conducive to tender memories and high resolutions which bring members of families into closer sympathy.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of success in financial affairs in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will have a distinct talent for constructive work. These subjects of Capricorn often combine practical ideals with artistic instincts. They generally make a success of life.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE HAVE QUEER DREAMS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

During sleep the major portion of the brain is inactive. But the brain is never wholly quiet, even in the deepest sleep. Dreams are nothing more than the normal activity of the brain centers such as go on during the waking state, except that the dream thoughts are less orderly because there is no unifying principle.

Many of the tiny brain cells which ordinarily connect up one idea with another and with the proper related ideas are inactive in sleep. So that when some active portion starts functioning it has to go where it will. The connections are poor and frequently nothing comes of it and you do not even recall that the particular idea ever went through your mind.

A dream is an unconscious mental process and is accompanied by a feeble nervous impulse which has very little effect on the brain center through which it passes. Consequently the succeeding nervous impulses do not find it easy to follow the nervous path and the dream is poorly remembered or completely forgotten.

When we exercise the function of thinking we direct the process by means of attention, but in the dream there is no such directing force, so that the plot of the dream develops as by accident. It is an improvised affair. The nervous impulse that happens to be active goes into the path that offers the least resistance at the moment and often finds itself in very queer places. Here is where the fantastic dream originates. It is nothing but the wild ramblings of an untied colt in the pasture lot, or, better still, like a ship without rudder or anchor. It follows the path of least resistance.

And in so far as dreams represent our hidden fears and desires they are necessarily as queer and fantastic as these fears and desires themselves. And these are often very queer indeed. We have symbols for almost every one of our suppressed wishes. Even in our waking state we do not always call a spade a spade. We call it by a nickname but we know the code. In the dream however, we take these freakish symbols literally with the result that the dream appears outlandish and fantastic.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE PASSING SHOWER

What gives the rose its beauty? Not
The sun alone, alone the days
When every little garden spot
Is golden with his glittering rays.
Hearts can grow sick of too much praise,
And roses weary of the sun;
There surely must be other ways
To bring to beauty either one.

There was a need of raining there,
Aye, even need of wintry snows,
There must be other days than fair
To give such beauty to a rose.
Our griefs are hard enough, God knows,
And yet I hear in each bird's throat
A certain sadness when he goes
That gives his song a deeper note.

Roses, and birds, and human hearts,
Are sweeter for some solemn hour,
And, if your sun awhile departs,
'Twill make of life a fairer flow'r.
'Tis not our wealth, our pomp, our pow'r,
That makes us braver and more kind—
It was the passing of some show'r
That left some gentler thought behind.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

THE MAIL COLLECTOR.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: In Wednesday's issue of The Examiner I read with interest the article on the Christmas rush at our local post office and noticed this statement: "The mails are growing heavier and heavier, and within the next few days we will put on eighteen extra men, three inside and fifteen out, with the letter carriers. To-morrow another truck will be added to help with the delivery of parcels." These extra men will surely help to lighten the work of those concerned, but how about the mail collector? His work must of necessity increase the same as the other's, yet he is forced to continue to empty letter and parcel boxes from early morning to late at night, without extra assistance.

However, it is not that I object to a man doing a little extra work once a year, but irony of it is, whereas the mail carrier comes in contact with many generous people who show their appreciation for his services at Christmas, the mail collector who has been giving unfailing service at their corner post box goes unnoticed.

Myself, I'm for remembering the unobserved public servants like the mail collector and the garbage man, as well as the postman and paper boy.

Sincerely yours,
"A Citizen."

CHRISTMAS-TIDE

(By Mrs. A. F. Calder)

Comes the Merry Christmastide again
With all its glad and festal train
And joyous cheer—
Blest time, by youth and age, confessed
The happiest and the very best
Of all the year.

Then, for a while, we lay aside
Anger, and enmity, and pride,
All strife, and wrong;
And pause, 'mid earth's turmoil to hear
Around, above, in cadence clear
The Seraph's song.

At this Holy time, no thought unkind
May, in our hearts, a resting find
Grudge, or ill will;
But gratitude to God above,
To men below, brotherly love,
Our bosoms fill.

For why, at Yuletide, Christ resigned
The bliss of Heaven, that thus, mankind
Heaven's bliss might win.
He came to save us each and all,
And free us from the deadly thrall
Of guilt and sin.

To His great love for us we owe
All that of Yuletide joy we know;
Ours then to raise
To Him, the Babe, of Bethlehem's stall—
Our Saviour, King and Lord of all,
Glad songs of praise.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Not only are International Nickel Company and Mond Nickel Company adding 50 per cent. to their nickel reducing plants at Sudbury, but a large copper concentrator and a 4,000 ton copper smelter with an adequate copper refinery at Port Colborne, Ontario. The 50 per cent. increase mentioned above should add at least $1.00 per share to the earnings of the Mond-International Consolidation when completed, bringing earnings on the new stock (with Mond's portion added) to $3.00 per share. What will the copper smelter add? This smelter will be in operation by 1930.

A 4,000-ton smelter working at capacity on ore averaging, say, $50 per ton, would represent a gross revenue of $73,000,000, of which net profits of, say, $50,000,000 would be made. International Nickel share combined with the Mond shareholders proportion would make a total of 16,746,000 shares. Hence, a profit of $3.00 per share would be indicated. The above average of $5 is made up of 6 per cent. copper, 2½ per cent. nickel, and $7.50 in precious metals per ton. This is a conservative estimate, in view of the fact that 15 to 17 per cent. copper, 2½ per cent. nickel, and very high values in precious metals are reported in the deep workings at the Frood Extension properties. Earnings of $6.00 per share appear to be quite within reason, after present plans are consummated.

Lower Output for British Empire Steel.

Glace Bay — The output from the collieries of the British Empire Steel Corporation for the year 1928 will be about 275,000 tons less than the amount hoisted in the previous year.

According to an official statement from the officials of the Dominion Coal Company, the total hoist from the collieries of the corporatin for 1928 is estimated at 5,412,897, as compared with 5,687,970 tons hoisted during 1927.

Acotia and Springhill Collieries showed increased production this year over 1927. Dominion Coal and Acadia Collieries were below last year's figures. The outlook for banking coal in 1929 is considerably better than in 1928, it is announced.

Prices Irregular On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, N.Y., December 22 (Canadian Press). — Heavy week-end profit-taking and sporadic bear selling turned the course of prices irregular to-day after an early outburst of strength. Some of the selling is believed to have been inspired by fears of a "money squeeze" next week when corporations and banks withdraw large sums from the market in connection with the year-end settlements.

Except for a couple of favorable dividend announcements, and cheerful reports of holiday trade, there was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement. Schulte Retail Stores was hammered down to a new low.

Radio turned heavy, selling down nearly 7 points. Woolworth and Greene Cananea each fell more than 2 points while Montgomery-Ward, General Motors and U.S. Steel Common were among the many issues to sell a point or more below yesterday's final quotations.

Anaconda Copper, American International, Goodyear Rubber, International Cement, and Pierce Arrow Common and Preferred touched new high levels for the year, the gains ranging from 1 to nearly 6 points.

MINE PROSPECTORS REPORTED MISSING

Left Montreal On November 18 For White River—Not Seen Since.

MONTREAL, Que., December 22 (Canadian Press). — Montreal Detective Headquarters was requested yesterday to lend its assistance in the search for James Allan, who has not been heard of since November 18, when he left his home here to stake a mining claim near White River, Ontario. Another Montreal man of the name of O'Donohue, who accompanied Allan, is also missing. The men carried provisions for only two weeks, as their expressed intention was to be away only ten or twelve days.

FIRMER TONE FEATURES MINES

Trading On Standard Exchange Light, With Slight General Advaince.

AMULET MAKES GAIN.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—A decidedly steady tone marked the week-end market on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Trading was light, and there was a slight general advance in prices. Noranda closed at 62.90 for a 65 cent gain, after mounting the board to 65.00 during the morning.

Amulet gained 3 at 3.00; Dunkin 4 at 18; Goodfish 1 at 18; Granada Rouyn 1½ at 19; Howey Gold 2 at 1.02; Lake Shore 40 at 17.75; McDougall 1 at 47; Sudbury Basin 15 at 7.65; Vipond 2 at 71, and Wright-Hargreaves 1 at 1.52. Aconda dropped ¾ to 11½; Ajax Oil ½ to 48; Amity ¾ to 24¼; Bathurst 1½ to 36; Bedford 1 to 44; Hollinger Consolidated 15 to 8.10; Kirkland Lake 2 to 1.25; Macassa 1 to 21; Sherritt-Gordon 5 to 6.30; Siscoe 1 to 86, and Towagmac 5 to 3.30.

Abana made a good recovery, and lead both listed and unlisted securities to advance 25 cents at 3.05, with more than 38,000 shares changing hands. Hudson Bay gained 10 at 19.10, and Pend Orelille 10 at 9.60. Falconbridge was down 10 to 4.90. Mandy 4 to 1.20, Jackson Manion 2 to 17, Central Manitoba 2 to 65, and Big Missouri 1 to 67.

CITY DAIRY AGAIN FEATURES SESSION

Toronto Stock Exchange Dull With Exception of One Or Two Issues.

TORONTO, Ont., December 22 (Canadian Press). — With the exception of one or two issues the market was not active on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. City Dairy was the centre of heavy buying throughout the morning session, and moved upwards steadily at a high of 81½, but closed at noon at 80¼ for a net gain of 5½ points.

Famous Players was strong and closed at 33¼ for a gain of one point. Weston, which had made high gains during the week dropped 4 to 91, while Loblaw, another feature, was down one to 97. Abitibi gained 1¼ at 40¾; Canadian Canners First 1½ to 90½. Northern Mexico Light and Power added one point to the 22 gained yesterday, and closed at 121.

Trading was lighter in New International Nickel, and the issue dropped 1½ to 42⅛. Blue Ribbon revived the upward movement of several weeks ago, and gained 5½ points to close at 48½. Oils were steady.

CHICAGO WHEAT AVERAGES LOWER

Corn Prices Higher, While Provision Market Remains Steady.

CHICAGO, Ills., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Wheat prices averaged a little lower early to-day and corn a little higher, but in both cases the changes in trading was confined largely to pit operators trying to capture small profits from quick in and out dealings. Opening unchanged to 3-8 cents off, wheat afterward held near to the initial figures. Corn started unchanged to 3-8 cents higher, and subsequently showed slight advances all around. Oats were firm. Provisions kept about steady.

Direct communications with Afghanistan has now been restored. They were intercepted on Wednesday when the rebels damaged the electrical works 30 miles north of the city. While communications were being restored messages were relayed by way of Russia.

HALF BREED BOY SAVES PROSPECTORS

white husky gulped it before they could reach it. Otherwise Togo's conduct was heroic.

At Amos, an hour and a quarter's flight away, Pilski, a pilot of the General Airways, and Jack Dunlop were anxiously waiting with a plane loaded on the ice of the Hurricane River, ready to make a dash in as soon as there was sufficient snow and cold weather. They had been there was sufficient snow and cold weather. They had been there for a week and knew that the situation at the Mettagami camp must be getting serious. It was one of the ironies of the episode that the day the men reached Amos, flying was possible.

Broke Camp December 10

Breaking camp early in December 10, the prospectors started out from the south shore of the Mattagami Lake. Two dogs teams, three dogs to a team, were hitched to light toboggans. Tarpaulins, blankets, a pail, frying pan and a axe made up the load. Each man carried a fifty to sixty pound pack. The dogs were half starved Indian huskies, bred of long generations of patient and badly used sleigh dogs, who had pulled along many a hard northern trail.

Only the two big huskies could understand commands in French or English. This was rather hard on whoever was mushing. The other dogs were bare-boned mongrels. One of them couldn't keep up the pace and had to be let run loose. He followed the party to Amos. There was a tragedy connected with the little black one. She had destroyed her pups, perhaps to save them from a life such as she had had.

IN POLICE COURT

William Boyce, of Elmvale, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving a motor car while intoxicated, and was this morning sentenced to seven days in the common jail.

Boyce was driving north on George Street last night at about 8 o'clock, and near the corner of George and Dalhousie Streets, struck another car, resulting in considerable damage to it. An officer investigated the accident and Boyce was arrested.

POULTRY SHOW PRIZE LIST

The prize list for the Twenty-first Annual Exhibition of the Peterborough Poultry Association is off the press and ready for distribution, and may be had at the store of President Frank H. Dawson, Flour and Feed, Water street, or will be mailed out on request. The list of special prizes is a good one and the directors are sure this year's show will be one of the best in the history of the organization.

Every family in the city and district consumes eggs and it is surprising that there is not more visitors to this fine show to see the different breeds of fowl. Some are bred for laying, others because they are the best table fowl.

To those attending the show the Superintendent, Mr. Paxman, and other directors, will describe the different classes and breeds and their purposes.

LITTLE ENTHUSIASM SHOWN BY CITIZENS

E. MELVILLE TURNER, Heating Engineer,
Proposed by Harry C. Huffman, seconded by J. J. Craig.

Would Give Assistance

In the absence of Alberman Lowe Mr. Holland was the first of the nominees to speak. He thanked his mover and seconder and stated that since he had gathered, from press remarks, that there was a lack of aldermanic help, (indicated by lack of interest referred to) he had considered allowing his name to go before the meeting. He had not declined regarding qualifying but would announce his intentions in good time.

Others proposed but not present were Messrs. McKone, Tuggey, McIntyre, Crowe, Greene, Turner and Crowe.

City Progressing

In announcing his intention of leaving "his hat in the ring" Mr. McNabb stated that it was not through any fault finding spirit, as the present council had been very capable, but as a response to Mayor Denne's contention that the younger men of the city should offer their services.

He referred to the progress that the city of Peterborough has made and was in favor of attracting more and larger industries Peterborough-ward. It was not his intention of asking any one to vote for him, but he would endeavor to give good service to the city.

Has Small Surplus

Alderman Nagle Phelan, who had had nine years of experience in the council, eight of which had been spent as chairman of the Finance committee, thanked his nominators. He left it was not the right thing for a candidate to make radical promises, but that pleasure should be felt that the year had been finished by his committee, with a small surplus on hand. In referring to Toronto's boast that 74 per cent. of that city's taxes had been collected by November 1, the speaker pointed out that in Peterborough 94 per cent. of the taxes had been collected by the same date with more since, so that nearly 100 per cent. of the taxes would be collected by the end of the year. He concluded by wishing all the compliments of the season and a respectful solicitation of their support.

Gaining in Experience

The last to speak, and to announce his intention of allowing his name to stand, was Mr. Huffman, who referred to the splendid spirit that had featured last year's contests, and to the harmonious workings of the council. He felt that in his first year, he had "just nicely got his legs under the table" and that with a more extensive program mapped out for 1929, he could be of service to the city. The speaker paid complimentary reference to Mayore Denne and to the city clerk, Mr. Armstrong and concluded by extending the season's greetings.

The Mayor Speaks

Prior to the close of the meeting, Mayor Roland Denne spoke, thanking his mover and seconder of the morning meeting at which he was acclaimed Mayor of the city for a second year. The chief Magistrate referred to the year's record of his council, which had closely adhered to an economical manner of operation and pointed out that with a more extensive program for the coming year, and with the Old Home Week and Centennial Celebration, Peterborough must progress. To City Clerk Armstrong, he paid particular compliment, for his faithfulness to duty and unfailing courtesy.

LARGE CROWD

A lady who possessed a large husband and a small son was thinking of purchasing it. They like turkey meat in that house.

A companion to this large turkey was one weighing 17½ pounds, quoted at 40 cents a pound, while a third in a trio laid side by side, in gradlated sizes, weighed 15½ pounds and cost 42 cents a pound. A general quotation for hen turkeys was 45 cents a pound, while several choice specimens were priced at 48 cetns a pound.

Geese, also very large and very fat in many instances, were priced at 24 to 29 cents a pound, ducks were 28 and 30 cents and chickens from 28 to 35 cetns a pound, with hens at 25 cents.

Eggs were fairly scarce and so was butter. The former might be bought in the basket section for 50 to 60 cents a dozen and pure white eggs, downstairs on the open market, were quoted at 50 cents. Butter was 40 to 45 cents a pound.

Large, beautifully colored artificial flowers were a feature in the sales of the basket section this morning, as was Christmas cake. One lady had the latter, ice dheavily with almond paste and decorated with colored carraway seeds, at 60 cents a pound and Scotch shortbread at 40 cents. An iced fruit layer cake was 45 cents a pound.

A pair of pure-bred Chinclla rabbits, "grown for their fur," as their owner remarked, were $5 apiece.

There was little produce on the open section of the market, the ordinary vegetables, meat and fish being the main supplies.

Potatoes were $1 a bag this morning. Christmas trees for the table were 25 cents and larger specimens were 35 to 50 cents each.

CHRISTMAS MUSICALE IS HELD BY CLUB

Rev. Dr. Blagrave Delivers Christmas Message To Music Club.

HALL IS DECORATED.

Speaker Emphasizes Idea of Love in Coming To Earth of Christ Child.

A "Christmas Party" was the title given by the president, Miss Mabel Clarry, to the Christmas Musicale of the Women's Music Club, held yesterday afternoon in the hall of the Conservatory of Music. The program was appropriate to Christmas in every number, a "Christmas Message" was brought to the members by the Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, and refreshments and decorations were carried out in the traditional Yuletide manner. Carols expressing the reaction of many different countries to the great festival of the Nativity comprised the musical entertainment of the afternoon, which was followed by the service of afternoon tea.

The arrangement and decorations of the hall and stage were notable and merited all the complimentary things said about them by the members present, numbering about a hundred and twenty-five ladies.

The stage, which was arranged under the expert supervision of Wilfred Derry, was beautiful with draperies of black and silver, surmounted by two lighted lanterns of green glass and with festoons of silver tinsel depending from above to the fringe of the hangings, which were crested by artificial snow. The same fleecy snow hung on the branches of two evergreen trees, also placed on the stage, while a large illuminated Star of the East was placed high up on the back drop, with rays of silver extending to the edge of the curtain, which it adorned. Two large lamps bearing shades resembling the Crusaders' shields of old were placed near the front of the stage, with fringes of silver tinsel.

The hall, which was decorated by Mrs. N. B. Buchanan, Mrs. T. H. Gillespie and Miss Laura Belleghem, was bright with red and green. Christmas trees were placed at intervals and the windows were curtained with green. On the walls were decorative streamers of red chenille, with motifs of large red bells and branches of evergreen. Immortelle wreaths in bright red, with boughs of holly, filled in the wall spaces. The whole interior presented a beautiful appearance.

A Christmas Message.

The Christmas Message voiced so eloquently by the Rev. Dr. Blagrave, emphasized the idea of love, as exemplified in the coming to earth of the Christ Child and the celebration down down through the ages of the birth of the Infant Redeemer.

The speaker referred to music as the only effective setting for such a wonderful subject.

"Music, being an art, appeals to the whole personality of man," he said, "and in this way, is nearer in a sense to the idea of religion than is science. So St. Francis of Assisi commenced commenced the dramatization of the Saviour's birth in the form of a pageant, in order to appeal to the imagination and impress the stolid nature of mankind.

"The love of humans, which has its manifestation in so many different type of affection, is but a shadow of the Divine Love which sent a Son of God to dwell among men. Love is characterized in three ways: the love of that which is above us, the love for that which is on an equality with us, and the love for that which is beneath us, spoken of as "pity love." At Christmas time, we try to show the love we feel for each other by being good-hearted, good-natured, kindly, benevolent and forgiving, exchanging gifts with one another. For a short time, we try to live up to the essence of love, which is figured for us by Christ at Christmas time and might be a practicability and a possibility the whole year through.

"We all believe in love theoretically and as an ideal. We say it is the greatest thing in the world, but nobody has ever believed in it as our Saviour did, when He came to us at Christmas to incite in us an emulation of the Love which is about us everywhere, and all the time."

The Rev. Dr. Blagrave closed his address with a reference to a lonely isle of the Pacific, where centuries ago bloody sacrifices were offered. Today on the brow of a hill there, a lighted cross sends out rays to ships at sea, a symbol of the love of God for His children.

An expression of appreciation of of the address was voiced by Miss Clarry, the president of the Music Club, who also made the announcements for the program.

Sing Christmas Carols.

Singing in unison, the audience and the carol singers joined in the rendition of several favorite Christmas carols, including "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," and "The First Nowell."

A group of Carol Singers on the stage, dressed in black choir gowns and hats, gave some beautiful carols of old-time type. They sang, as an introduction, behind the stage, "Silent Night, Holy Night," and then came out to sing "Good King Wenceslas," and an old Welsh carol, "Deck the Hall with Laurel and Holly." Other

Firemen Wait Hour For Fire To Arrive

WOODSTOCK, Ont, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)— The Woodstock Fire Department had the somewhat unusual experience yesterday of being called to a fire and then waiting an hour for the fire to arrive before setting about the business of extinguishing it.

The call came from the Canadian National Railway station and eventually the Montreal-Chicago express pulled in with the dining car on fire. Trainmen had kept the flames under control with chemicals during the run to Woodstock. The fire started in the stove-pipe of the car.

VAST CHANGE IS SHOWN IN YEAR'S CHEESE

Factories in Peterborough District Have Averaged Almost 98 p.c. First Grade.

FURTHER IMPROVEMENT.

Four Factories Had 100 Per Cent. Special and First Cheese.

A report received from the Dominion government authorities at Ottawa by Dairy Instructor W. J. Moore of Peterborough, shows that there has been a wonderful improvement this year in the quality of the cheese manufactured in the Peterborough district, including part of Victoria County. All the cheese sold for export has to be graded by Dominion Government officials before it is exported. A record is kept of how all the cheese from each section grades. This year the factories in this district have averaged almost 98 per cent. special and first grade. In 1926 the Peterborough district made a very unfavorable showing, standing about 27th out of the approximately thirty-four dairy districts in Ontario. Last year there was a marked improvement as the Peterborough district stood 14th. The standing for this year is not known yet, but is likely to show a further improvement as the average grade last year was only 89 per cent., as compared with almost 98 per cent. this year.

Four factories in the Peterborough district had 100 per cent. special and first cheese. This was a very fine showing. One factory had 16.1 per cent. of specials, another 14.3, and a third 9.1.

Will Hold Banquet.

"We are giving some seven or eight prizes this year," said Mr. Moore to The Examiner, "to the cheese makers who have made the best showing. These prizes will be presented at a dinner to be held in Peterborough on Friday, December 28. When we came to check up who should get the prizes we found that all the prize winners had averaged over 99 per cent. specials and first. A couple of years ago there were no specials made in this district."

When asked by The Examiner to what he attributed the big improvement in the quality of cheese, Mr. Moore said that the cheese makers have been taking a great interest in their work. In this connection they have been holding meetings at one another's factories, and this has encouraged the makers to keep their factories in the best possible condition and to have high class cheese on their factory shelves. The way in which the cheese makers have taken hold of the work has been very encouraging. Last year some factories in the Peterborough district averaged as low as 52 firsts and specials. This helped to pull down the average for the whole district. As all the factories have shown good work this year the average grade for the county has improved accordingly." Those who know say that much of the credit for the improvement is due to the good work that has been accomplished in this district by Dairy Instructor Moore.

Developments in Canada since the war, he said, were made possible by the efforts of those who died.

FLYER KILLED IN PLANE CRASH PILOT INJURED

An Enthusiast Meets Instant Death Near Bigham, Quebec.

FRACTURED LEG.

Engine Stops When Pilot Is Looking For Safe Landing Place.

GRANBY, Que., December 22 (Canadian Press). — Marcel Fortier, 18-year-old flying enthusiast of Sherbrooke, Que., met instant death, and Pilot E. O. Champagne, 40 years of age, of Holt Avenue, Rosemount, Quebec, escaped with a fractured leg when their plane, a Hisso-Swallow, crashed to the ground on a farm at Brigham, Quebec, yesterday afternoon. Brigham is the first station east of Farnham, on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The body of Fortier was removed to Farnham Centre, and Champagne was taken to the Sweetsburg Hospital, where his condition is not reported as serious.

From information obtained by Coroner Dr. J. W. Runnels, of Granby, Que., who held the inquest last night, at which a verdict of accidental death was rendered, the men were flying from Sherbrooke to Montreal, when they lost their way near Brigham, Que., owing to poor visibility, while flying into a blinding snow-blizzard.

While following the C.P.R. track, looking for a place to land, Pilot Champagne brought his plane down to a very low altitude, within one hundred feet of the earth, when suddenly the engine stopped. The plane went into a spin and crashed to the ground, being completely wrecked in the fall.

The plane crashed on the farm of J. R. Lane, of Brigham, and the owner of the farm and C. Hobbs, his employee, witnessed the fall and ran to the flyers' assistance. Fortier was apparently dead upon their arrival, and Champagne had to be cut out of the machine.

Pilot Champagne is connected with International Airways Limited.

An official court of inquiry will be convened to investigate the circumstances surrounding this casualty, but the date has not yet been fixed.

PLAN MAY BE DISREGARDED

Brewers Are Said To Not Be So Enthusiastic About Forming Association.

COMMITTEE CHOSEN.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Brewers here talk as though they intended to give up their plan for a protective association now that Hon. W. H. Price, Ontario Attorney-General has issued an ultimatum saying that if the Brewers cannot stop short-circuiting he will cancel charters for those whose goods find their way into bootlegging channels in the province.

Although the scene of the meeting at which the final details of the association were to have been finished yesterday was supposed to have been transfered to Toronto, it was learned that the brewers are not very keen about the association unless they can have, by arrangement with the government, power to discipline members and exporters who break the law by allowing short-circuiting.

There is also a hint that W. E. Gundy, who has been offered the position of chairman of the proposed commission, would not accept the post unless punitive powers were granted.

It became known yesterday, however, that the executive committee, has been chosen to complete plans for the organization consists of representatives of the British-American and Walkerville brewers of the border Cities, of the Carling Breweries

NEWARK, Dec. 21.—"I'm well and strong and can hold my own with the younger people," Mrs. Nettie West, 80 years old, said in explaining her liking for factory work. "I wouldn't live a month out of the factory."

Since the founding of the Bicomer Brothers plant for the manufacture of paper novelties and boxes, Mrs. West has been employed there. The factory was started in the early 90's and she was the first woman to fold a box there.

Mrs. West has charge of two machines and works nine hours every day.

"I don't expect to retire and stay home because I'd think too much, she explained. She might have referred to the tragic end of her two sons who were killed on the railroad within three months of each other in 1891. Her husband died in 1916 but for three years before his death he was unable to work.

FEAR TRAWLER CREW IS LOST

Dead Body in Lifeboat Is the Only Evidence of Catastrophe.

ANOTHER BOAT WRECKED.

HALIFAX, Dec. 22 (Canadian Press)—A special cable from St. Pierre says that Le Morue Francaise, owners of the trawler Pacifique, the name of which, the cable says, was marked on a lifeboat containing a dead body, found at Ship Cove, Placentia Bay yesterday, tried vainly to communicate with the trawler after she sailed from France on December 14. The cable says it is now feared the Pacifique went down with all hands in a storm off Cape St. Mary on the night following her sailing.

The 600-ton schooner Gertrude Parsons, it was learned here yesterday, is a total wreck on the south coast on Minas Basin, two miles from Ellena Cape, Hants County, where she was blown ashore on Tuesday night after loading pilny for New York. Both ship and cargo are beyond salvage.

(Examiner Correspondence).

MORGANSTON, Dec. 22. — At the annual meeting of the Morganston Cheese Company, held on Saturday, December 15, the following resolution was passed: "That patrons must not feed turnips while sending milk to Morganston Factory."

During 1928 there were delivered to the factory, 1,713,967 pounds of milk from which 145,547 pounds of cheese were manufactured, selling at an average price of 21.36 cents. The total value of the cheese was $31,087.65. There were 3,271 pounds of whey fat which was sold for $1,087.39, an average price of 33¼ cents a pound.

The total manufacturing expenses were $2,547.05, and the total cash paid to patrons was $24,552. In 1927, 45,000 more pounds of cheese were made than in 1928.

E. Demorest, who has made cheese in this factory for the past thirteen years, has resigned and C. Palmateer, who has been making at Norham for several years, has been engaged for next year.

SALVATION ARMY

Council then will appoint his successor. Commander Booth has not put herself in command.

Sailing Unheralded

Commander Booth sailed secretly with her personal staff to avoid publicity. She appeared on the passenger list under a different name, and she and her companions wore civilian clothes instead of Salvation Army uniform. News of her departure to attend the High Council meeting, however, was obtained by The New York Times and was confirmed by George W. Wickersham, attorney for the Salvation Army in the United States.

The meeting of the High Council will be the first ever held, although similar action to meet such a crisis as now exists was provided for by the founder when he revised the constitution twenty-four years ago. Under the 1904 constitution, the High Council can perform only two functions—adjudicate on the question whether the General is unfit and should be removed, which can be done by three-quarters vote of all the members present and voting, and appoint a successor, which can be done by a two-thirds vote. With the choice of a new General the High Council automatically dissolves.

High Council Called

The call for the High Council meeting was cabled throughout the world on Nov. 15 by Commissioner Edward J. Higgins, the International Chief of Staff in London, following a written demand for such action, signed, in accordance with the provisions of the constitution, by seven Commissioners.

Sixty-three Commissioners and territorial leaders in command of the Salvation Army forces in eighty-three countries and colonies are now travelling or preparing to travel to London from every quarter of the globe to participate in the decision.

Deloro Boy Scout News

MARMORA Dec. 21.—(Examiner Correspondence)—The Deloro troop is travelling right ahead with preparations for a display, the month of December being devoted to practice. Owing to Christmas and New Year's day falling on the weekly meeting night, the boys are practising on their own on Saturday, December 29th at 2 p.m. There will be a treasure hunt for all the scouts in the troop. Sealed instructions with directions to find the first clue will be given each scout and from then on it will be quite exciting to see who gets ahead. There are a number of messages hidden in different spots, all hard to decipher, and the scout who knows his work the best will come to the last message ahead of the rest. Books can be consulted at home but not carried, nor can outside help be accepted. There will be a treasure for each scout finishing according to the position he finishes in. The weekly meeting will be held at the scoutmaster's house on Thursday, January 3, when the prizes will be distributed and games played for the evening.

ONE HUNDRED MEN ARE SEEKING WORK

Labor Conditions Are Reported Better Than During Christmas 1927.

Although unemployment is not reaching serious proportions in the city, so far, yet there will be over a hundred men out of work over Christmas, men who are looking for and anxious to secure some kind of a job, as long as it gives them an opportunity to earn money.

A sign in the window of the local branch of the Ontario Employment Bureau gives a new outlook on the meaning of Christmas spirit. It states: "The real Christmas spirit is the spirit of giving. Why not make your Christmas slogan "Give somebody a job" and use this as a clearing house for your gifts."

Labour conditions are reported to be much better now than they were at the same time in 1927. There were 137 more names on the books as being unemployed this time last year than there is now. That means that there are less than half as many out of work this year than last. Too, it is reported, that the unemployment is not in that same crucial state as were some cases last year when the men were absolutely up against it through long months of unemployment and lack of funds.

N.O.H. CANCELS ANNUAL PLAY

New Year's Concert is Postponed On Account of Prevalence of Flu.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURE.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 22 (Examiner Correspondence)—At the request of the Medical Health Officer, Dr. H. A. Turner, the entertainment, "The Dream of Queen Esther," which was in course of preparation by the United Church Sunday School, and which takes at least fifty characters, has been postponed until a later date than New eYar's evening, as originally intended, because of the prevalence of flu and other diseases in the vicinity at the present time.

Any public gathering, or practices where a large number would be in attendance, the medical health officer regards are unwise for the next week or ten days, when Dr. Turner expects that probably the worst of the illness will have passed. This is a precautionary measure, rather than that a serious situation exists.

SPECIAL MUSIC IS BEING PREPARED

St. James Church Will Follow Unique Order of Worship On Sunday.

Extensive and beautiful in its thoroughness and appointment, the Christmas Sunday music and order of service, prepared for St. JaJmes' United Church will be one of inspiration.

The music will be of a special nature, in keeping with the high order of the services.

Meanwhile, A. H. Dalziel, collector of customs at the port of Windsor, had little to say about the designation of the 10 Border City docks which will be allowed to carry on export activities.

Mr. Dalziel said he was not yet in a position to give out details as to how the new plans will be worked.

Each of the 10 approved docks will be a recognized point for clearance of liquor cargoes. Anyone legally engaged in the business of export may use the docks.

Christmas Messages From Ministers Of City

All Clergymen in the City were invited to contribute to this Annual Page.

By Rev. William McDonald, B.D.)

Christmas customs are extending their influences in this land. Most of a month in the business section of the city is given over to fostering the Christmas trade; this has become a very profitable season, and it is becoming more so. Great skill is shown in clever advertising and greater ingenuity is seen in the invention of ever new features to attract the eye and impluse of the child. In many ways one observes that the real reason for Christmas has been lost sight of in the fascination of toyland for the children; the dazzling display of attractive gifts for the adults tends chiefly to promote a natural vanity that takes pleasure in something ornamental. In all this there is a diversion of interests and resources that serious people regret.

The giving of gifts is the human response to the Divine Gift. It ought to serve the good purpose of expressing in some way the design of the original Gift. "On earth Peace, Goodwill toward men." The coming of the Christ Child meant happiness of the highest and hollest kind. All too few are the reminders of this truth in the profusion of gifts for the season. Even cards of greeting convey abundant good wishes for hilarity and happiness with seldom a word about the real way to happiness. One feels disposed to insert such a remonstrance at the risk of being misunderstood, to direct the mind of many away from prevailing customs to others that are more worthy and that ensure a more abiding blessing.

For there are signs of a better order of things. Greetings, kindly and sincere, conveyed in person or by post, are taking the place of gifts. This is a better way. It puts in words the feelings and affections that are often imperfectly represented by things. We are so ready to judge of values by the price tags. Find a place for the simple Gospel message of the season. "For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given," and the greeting will uplift the heart with true gladness. The sacred offering of our "White Gifts for the King" to be distributed among our less fortunate neighbors is slowly gaining ground over the old time tree loaded with toys and trinkets for those already gifted with more of such than was for their good. Serious-minded men are giving thought to a situation that will be found in every community. It is their earnest desire that none should lack the simple luxuries of the season that help to cheer the loneliness of those who cannot honestly secure these for themselves. Thus in sharing one another's burdens the Law of Christ is fulfilled

The best custom of the season is that of Christian worship. The Wise Men when they found The Babe fell down and worshipped Him first before they opened their treasures and presented their gifts. Worship opens the heart to God before our parcels are opened for God. Where His love enters there goodwill must abide.

'Tis not enough that Christ was born
Beneath the Star that shone,
And earth was set that morn
Within a golden zone.
He must be born within the heart
Before He finds His throne.
And brings the day of love and good—
The reign of Christlike brotherhood.

(By Rev. James L. Harton)

Acts 20: 35, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Let us be perfectly honest. We all confess the joy of receiving. It is blessed to receive. There is joy and pleasure, and marvelous happiness in receiving. Watch the faces of little children and learn of life. But these soul-stirring words of Jesus open to us only as we get the meaning of this word so often upon his lips, "blessed." What does it mean? Suppose for today we substitute for this difficult and highly-colored word, a simpler one. Suppose we say, "There is more life in giving than in receiving."

Life, as you know, may be broad and expansive, or it may be narrow and limited. Herbert Spencer defines life as "correspondence with environment." The wider the touch with the world, the fuller life will be.

Life exists in relationships. The broader the relationship, the deeper life will be.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters, and thou shalt find it after many days." Life takes on new value with new investments, and has a new meaning when larger interests fill the mind. This is the message of the Master. Giving enlarges and develops life. The climax of the merely receptive is the miser, giving purifies the soul.

"What I spent, I saved;
What I kept, I lost;
What I gave, I kept."

Let us remember, we can "be to other souls the cup of strength in some great agony." We can "beget the smiles that have no cruelty." We can, out of love and Christlike friendliness give good gifts to man.

(By His Lordship Bishop O'Brien)

The outstanding feature of Christmas Day should be the worthy commemoration of the birth of Jesus Christ the Saviour of the world: "For this day is born to you a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord in the city of David." (Luke ii, 11).

Foretold by God Himself after the fall of man, prophesied in minute detail by various inspired writers in the old dispensation, longed for and sighed for by priest, patriarch and people for four thousand years, Christ came "in the fulness of time," after the seventy weeks of years foretold by Daniel the Prophet. He came in the manner described by Isaias, "A virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and his name shall be called Emmanuel." (Is vii, 14), and He was born in the little town predicted by Micheas (v. 2), and quoted in Matt. II. 6, "And thou Bethlehem the land of Juda art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come forth the Captain, that shall rule my people Israel."

On that first Christmas night God fulfilled His promise of sending a Redeemer; the Heavens stooped down to earth; man was elevated to the dignity of co-heirs with Christ from the fact that the Eternal Word had assumed human nature, and the Redemption of mankind was announced to be at hand.

In all preparations for, and in the celebration of this splendid festival, the spiritual should have the highest place, for its real object is essentially spiritual and supernatural. It tells us of the infinite love of God for man's salvation, as Christ Himself expressed it later on, "I am come that they may have life and may have it more abundantly." (John x. 10). It should therefore bestir in man fervent acts of highest love and of real affection for the Saviour of the world. Who came as a tiny babe that He might the more readily win the hearts and attract the love of man; it should strengthen man's hope of eternal happiness, for as St. John the Apostle says (I., 12), "As many as received Him, He gave them power to be made the sons of God," and it should spread abroad among men that Christlike spirit of Charity, which is the test and proof of man's love for God.

With the joy that animated the angelic hosts, with the faith that illumined the shepherds, and with the love that filled the heart of Christ's sweet Mother Mary on first Christmas night, let us worthily celebrate the coming anniversary of this great mystery of divine love and ask for ourselves and for all humanity a full measure of the graces and blessing that Christ will pour out upon the world on this splendid festival of Emmanuel,—God with us.

THE SAVIOUR'S BIRTHDAY AND ITS MESSAGE

(By Ensign E. H. Green)

No season of the year creates such a spirit of goodwill, involves such expenditures of unselfish thought, breathes out like messages freighted with love and cheer, spells itself in long and lavish preparation, leads us to forget self and remember others by practical giving, covers the whole range of human life from the cradle to old age, finds so many people homeward bound by ancient and modern modes of transit, as Christmas.

Naturally in making such an assertion I must answer the query that might arise—Why? On what account? For what reason do the peoples of the civilized world act in such unity at the same time of course allowing for change in some countries according to longitude and latitude) in the same manner, with the same spirit.

Here we have the answer couched in a few yet all important words, nothing less than the fulfillment of prophecy, John 1. 14. "And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us." What a wonderful event, haloed with glory which transcends every other which has yet passed under the review of either our descendants or ourselves: The Eternal God veiled, yet manifested Himself in human likeness. The King of Glory is found in the inn at Bethlehem as a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger. The angelic anthem reaches the ears of the shepherds carrying out their nightly vigil of the flocks on the plains below, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, goodwill toward men." Following the lights, the stars of God, we visualise that company of Wise Men tramping over the mountain side, and they do not cease their journey until guided to the Sun of Righteousness, and then unfolding their gifts of gold, and franklincense and myrrh, pay their homage to "the Desire of all nations."

Christmas is the Festival of the Home

It is the time for scattered members of countless families uniting once more. The old will grow young again in the joy of the children. Let us see that it is not merely a secular holiday crowded with noisy pleasurers, which are unappropriate for the Christmas season, but let us on Christ's birthday, within our homes, live out His standards of pleaures, which are unappropriate for the Christmas season, but let us on Christ's birthday, within our homes, live out His standards of purity and love, and let our festivities be marked by worship.

Christmas is the Festival of Reconciliation

"God and sinners reconciled." "Glory to God—and on earth Peace." He was the Prince of Peace. That Was His distinct mission to fight with and destroy sin—to redeem the race steeped in a terrible heritage of evil. Reconciliation brings peace. Such a season calls for cementing together the broken fragments of friendship, putting an end to all quarrels, and passing death on differences that would lead to strife, dissension and weakness in the Church of Christ.

Christmas is the Festival of Joy

It is a season of joy to us because we have parents and brothers and sister and friends who remember us and fulfill our expectations with all kinds of good things. Just so the joy that Jesus had, so distinctly personal, that He speaks of it as "His—My Joy," is to be ours. Not another kind of joy but the identical joy of Jesus. That is what Christianity means. Professor Drummond knew that for in "The Programme of Christianity" he says, "The contribution of Christianity to the joy of living, perhaps even more the joy of thinking, is unspeakable. The joyful life is the life of the larger mission, the disinterested life, the life of the overflow from self, the 'more abundant life' which comes from following Christ. And the joy of thinking is the larger thinking, the thinking of the man who holds in his hands some programme for humanity. The Christian is the only man who has any programme at all. Let us at this season drink from the secret spring of His joy, and thus the spirit of His courage, faith and strength will be ours.

CHRISTMAS IS ALSO THE FESTIVAL OF THANGSGIVING.

I venture to say that "Thankyou" will be the most widely expressed or written word at this season in return for suitable gifts given and received. May our thanks to God for His unspeakable gift to mankind, Jesus, be lived out not only during the birthday period, but every day during the coming year. In closing permit me to make on behalf of our beloved General, our esteemed Territorial Commander Commissioner W. Maxwell, the local officers and soldiers of the Temple Corps, together with Mrs. Green and myself, the citizens of Peterborough and district for their unstinted support spiritually, morally and financially of the Salvation Army's endeavours to carry into effect in some measure the mission of our Saviour's birth. Peace on Eearth and good will towards all.

(By Rev. J. E. Todd, B.A.)

Last evening I heard a choir singing over the radio some Christmas songs. They sang, among others, "Silent Night," and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," and as I listened I wondered whatever there was about the Christmas ason that had such a power over men and women.

I am aware that the sceptic and the cynic will have their word about Christmas, the same as Easter, becoming commercialised; and I know there is a great danger of turning the day into a real orgy of giving and receiving gifts (which is quite delightful if not overdone). But in spite of our prophets of gloom, wherein abides the thrill that most of us still find in the Christmas time?

Is it not just here: All of us who have thought at all seriously about the question, recognize that humanity has made a rather sad blunder in the art of living. We see that man's relationship to man, taken nationally and internationally, or as individuals, is far from being what it should be. We see that man has tried everything that promised an easy road to the desired "Summum Bonum"; but there is no Easy Way: at least we have discovered that.

And it is because, deep down within us, we recognize that the Babe of Bethlehem offers to us the only Way to the Larger Life, and not an easy way, either; that we find a responsive thrill in our hearts once again, when we hear the choirs singing, "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing, Glory to the New-Born King."

(By Rev. A. E. Thornley.)

Before the coming of Christ, good in its conflict with evil was fighting a losing battle. Under Herod Israel's moral sun was setting with no promise of a brighter day. If God's chosen people perished, there was no hope for the Gentile.

But man's extremity was God's opportunity. His eye looked down in pity, and His arm reached down to save. The shepherds of Bethlehem heard the angel song, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour."

He came to destroy the works of the devil. With his coming the tide of battle turned and defeat was changed to victory. Paul, the chief of the apostles, took up the angelic refrain, "Blessed be God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Victory through apparent defeat. He was born in a manger that we might be born into a kingdom. He agonized in a garden that we might rejoice forever. He died on a cross that we might live. He rose from the grave that we might behold an empty tomb, and preach Christ and the resurrection, and say, with Paul, "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I but Christ liveth in me and the life which I now live I live by faith in the Son of God who loveth me and gave Himself for me."

He was lifted up on a cross and changed it from an instrument of death to a sign of life and victory. In that sign we conquer. God has given Him a name which is above every name, at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that He is Christ to the Glory of God the Father. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Never did so many knees bow as now. Never has so great effort been made to tell the world of His love.

This is the message of Christmas, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish." Every gift at Christmas time is inspired directly or indirectly by God's gift of His Son to the world.

(By Rev. C. V. McLean, M.A., B.D.)

Once more the Christmas season has come round and our innate desires for beauty in the material world and for good will in the social world are permitted to express themselves. December, the month of the winter solstice, would indeed be dreary in these northern latitudes were it not that the Christmas spirit decorates our home, our shops and our streets with gay colors which rival the springtime. Moreover, it quickens our entire being with a religious impulse whose force is not spent for months.

It is a Jackob's ladder which elevates us above the common pursuits and interests. During the year we think of profits; at this season, of presents. The centre of attraction shifts from getting to giving, from self to service, from personal gain to friendly greeting. Therefore, we see life in a truer perspective during Christmas week than at any other season. The tourist agencies of Paris insist that one has not seen Paris until he has ascended the Eiffel Tower and surveyed the city from that lofty elevation. Similarly, we must climb higher than the walls of our homes if we are to behold the world's life from the standpoint of its Creator.

Again Yuletide serves us as does the mirage on our western plains. It brings near what had seemed to be far distant. The conditions of modern life break up the family circle all too soon, driving some members eastward and some westward. The passing of time and the weight of the daily burden dissolve something of the sacredness of kith and kin. But to retard that subtle process comes this celebration of the birth of Christ, when those far from us are brought nearer by means of gifts and greetings, and when those reasonably near gather with us to awaken sweet memories and strengthen golden threads of friendship which have been strained or frayed.

Indeed, the fact that our generation enters into this celebration with such heartiness shows that we instinctively feel the need of it. Christmas is a return to the native habitat of the human heart. The Indians, who live near our Manitoba marshes, being in close touch with nature, claim to detect a difference between the cry of the waterfowl, migrating northland in the spring; and its complaint when fleeing southward in autumn. In the spring its note is a glad one; it is coming home to make its nest and rear its young. In the autumn it strikes a plaintive note; the approaching frost is driving it into exile for a season. The native habitat of man is not strife, but service; not war, but worship; not fear, but friendship. Therefore, the shepherds of Bethlehem, unittered though they were, responded as readily and as fully to the angels' song as any generation has ever done.

The Roman poet advised his friend to "pluck the day." It came, redolent of beauty, like the flower, but soon faded. Christmas comes with a sweet fragrance of memory and fellowship and worship. Let us pluck it!

THE CHALLENGE OF CHRISTMAS

(By Rev. David Wren, M.A., B.D.)

Another Yuletide is upon us, with its legacies of past memories and blessings, and we are once again asked to write a short note with reference to the Day of Days, the King of Kings, and the message imperial which has brought so much of joy, happiness and peace to the millions of mankind. Of all the picturesque and beautiful incidents connected with the Christmas story there is nothing more fascinating than the part the shepherds played.

Around the cradle of the new born Babe were gathered an interesting group: Herod the King, the scribes and the chief priests, the wise men from the East, and Mary, the mother of the Messiah Child. These were to be represented in the life and ministry of the Son of God, as the years widened into centuries, and men sought to make possible the establishment of the Kingdom of God. But the Syrian shepherds to whom the angels sang the first Christmas anthem must not be forgotten, for their names have gone into the art and the poetry and the romance of the world as no other group of men since the world began. It is so full of meaning, and so in harmony with everything else associated with the Christmas time, that God should have sent his first Christmas anthem with the angels to these simple-minded shepherds. One has recently rightly written: "If the news is good enough you need not put it in the columns of the daily press to give it world-wide prominence; you have only to breathe it out on the air and the little birds will catch it up and carry it to the ends of the earth. If the vein of gold is rich enough, you may stow it away a thousand feet underneath the mountainside and only leave a little jutting point of the quartz at the surface to hint its presence, and the miner will dig down into the secret places to find it." It wasn't necessary for God to tell the good news of the Saviour's birth to kings and nobles in the great centres of the earth! The news was so precious that it was only necessary to let the angels sing it to the shepherds out on the hills and ere long the world would sing the anthem.

At this time of the year we covet for all mankind the joy of standing once again with the shepherds of the hills of the long ago and hear the angels sing their anthem, "Peace on earth to men of good will." This earth is full of voices, there is much music which we may hear. The sweetest notes that can come to us are those born out of the Christmas message and the christmas joy. The Kingdom of God will come, peace on earth will come, joy will leap like a babbling brook from the souls of men if they will only be still and listen to the song of the angel choir. Never was there a day like unto ours, never was jealousy and strife, envy and hate, so very manifestly present, and yet never were so many earnest, reverent, and sincere souls, toiling, struggling, yearning for the peace of the whole world. Only one voice can triumph, and that is love. It was a manifestation of that love that was revealed to all mankind when God sent forth His Son to bring redemption and peace to the world. The challenge of the Christmas time is to turn again towards Bethlehem.

"O come, all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant,
Come ye, O come ye, to Bethlehem:
Come and behold Him,
Born the King of Angels;
O come let us adore Him, Christ the Lord."

THE MESSAGE OF THE MANGER. (Luke 2:11)

(By Rev. David McKee)

Christianity was ushered in with joy. The first message was preached by the Angel Gabriel from the aerial heaven just over the Judean hills, and when he had finished his message there appeared a multitude of angels praising God, and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." This was the first testimony meeting held in the Christian era for an earthly audience. And the first to proclaim the good news on earth were these shepherds who had received the good tidings from the angelic host. "And when they had seen the child Jesus" they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the Child. "As it was told them by the angelic host in Luke 2, 10-14. "Then they returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them."

Again, we have another message in Matthew 2, 11: "Behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem." Those wise men did not start for Bethlehem, but for Jerusalem, that great city of King Solomon's historic splendor. Most any one would go there, expecting something wonderful to happen. God lets most searching parties for Christ start for Jerusalem, but they end up at some little place, some humble and humiliating experience before they find Him. There is generally a manger, step farther down in the lowly way to Him. He is wrapped in swaddling clothes. Many of the educated of our day will have no Christmas this year, because they will expect to find Him in the cities of the mighty, in the palaces of science, wrapped about with argument and philosophic phrases. He will be in swaddling clothes this Christmas also, for He says: "I am meek and lowly in heart." Be sure to go to the little Bethlehem this year, if you want a real Christmas with a real Christ. I am sure the wise men in the stable, kneeling about the Lord, forgot the star, wonderful as it was. What real Christmas each one would have, if we forget the ritual, building, Christmas tree, dinner, presents, and "come to worship Him," "born King of the Jews," not king of the Church. It took the cross and resurrection to make Him Head of the Church. He was born King of the Jews, and as such He can take His throne any hour. He is already king. Then, why doesn't He come and reign? He is waiting for His Body, His Bride, His Church, to be gathered out from among every nation, tongue, and people. Shall we be in that number? Shall we be like Him?

THE STORY THAT IS ALWAYS NEW.

(By Rev. James H. Dudgeon)

There is one story that never grows old. And there is no story that has stirred the heart of humanity like this one. The story of the birth, life and labors of Jesus Christ, born of the Virgin Mary in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the Great. The story has been told oftener than any other and yet it is still full of charm and men call for it in all lands and joy over it as if it were an event of yesterday. It is new at every Christmas and the whole world lays aside the cares and its labors to listen to it once again.

Why has this story such a hold upon the world? The Hero of this story was a Babe. The babyhood of heroes is usually thought unworthy of recording. But the babyhood of Jesus has a significance which sacred historians think worthy of mention for in this baby was The Incarnation of God in human form.

The Hero of this story this baby is a King. He had no royal trappings, He lived in no royal palace. He died the death with Malefactor's but still He is a King—anointed King but not yet Crowned.—that is still to come, for He will be King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and "and every king shall bow and confess it."

He was a perfect example. He challenged men to convict Him of sin, but they were silent.

He was a perfect friend. Our own gracious sovereign, King George has Even subjects of other nations been a wonderful friend to humanity, who need aid or disaster has overtaken him. The helping hand has been extended—he is a friend of all. So with this Hero and Friend. He loved men. He lived with them. He never forsook those who needed Him. The world is still singing, "What a friend we have in Jesus."

But He was and is still more—A Saviour. He gave hope to the hopeless; No Sinner was beyond redemption who came to Him for cleansing. The witnesses of His Scouring power are everywhere in the world to-day. The invitation of Salvation is borne on every breeze, to every land—"Look unto me and be ye saved all ye ends of the earth."

"Sweetest note in Seraph song,
Sweetest name on Mortal tongue;
Sweetest carol ever sung:
Jesus blessed Jesus."

The world is just as much in need of Him to-day as when He came on that first Christmas night. The sin and darkness is still great in the world. Not education, legislation or reformation can remake the world—the Power of Regeneration coming from the Christ of Bethlehem's manger and Calvary's Cross alone, is sufficient. This is the only hope for a sin ruined world, and thank God. He can perform the miracle of transformation.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC IN CITY CHURCHES

With G. F. Liddle organist and choir leader having had a wide experience in the preparation of Christmas music, it is not surprising that an unusually appropriate and full program has been arranged for Christmas Sunday morning and evening services at George street United Church. Mr. Liddle's success along this line of endeavor was emphasized last year and at Lindsay, and Midland where he was organist in churches previous to coming to Peterborough.

The morning anthem which he has chosen is Newton's "First Christmas Morn" while Ronald Fortune will be heard in a solo number "Noel" (Adam). In addition, Mrs. C. H. Saunders and Mrs. Liddle will sing the beautiful "Christmas."

Mr. Liddle has prepared three particularly pleasing organ numbers for the morning service, "Hosanna (Wachs) Pastorale (Kuhlau) and "Christmas March" (Merkel).

The musical part of the evening service, briefly, will be as follows:

6.45 p.m.—The choir will present a program of Christmas Carols, French "At Midnight a Summons Came", "Bring a Torch Jeannette Isabella," "When at Christmas Christ was Born."

Soprano solo—Mrs. C. H. Saunders, "Night of Nights" (Van de Water) Three old Bohemian carols —"Hail, all hail the Glorious morn" "The Angels and the Shepherds" "Let all Men sing God's Praises".

Contralto solo—"How shall I sing that Majesty."

Anthem—"A, Come All ye Faithful" (Novello).

Male Chorus with Tenor solo by Ronald Fortune "Soft Sabbath Calm" (Barnley).

Baritone solo—Douglas Carlisle "All Our Grief" (Rossini)

Anthem—Christmas Hymn (Hugo Junst) with quartette echo in the distance, Mrs. Saunders, Mrs. Liddle, Messrs. Fortune and Carlisle.

Ladies' Chorus—"Lo, How a Rose e'er Blooming (Spohr).

John Crane, organist and choirmaster of St. Andrew's United church has an enviable reputation in the city as a musical director, his leadership of the Scottish Rite Octette which performed so splendidly on the occasion of the formal opening of the new Collegiate wing, bringing to him fresh laurels. Mr. Crane has been organist in several Peterborough churches during the past twenty or thirty years and the program which he has arranged for Christmas Sunday at St. Andrew's United church, promises to be a good one.

ST. ANDREW'S UNITED CHURCH.

The choir will be assisted, as guest soloist, by Mr. J. L. Bebb, tenor soloist for the Royal Welch Singers. Mr. Bebb will sing at both services, his numbers are recit and aria, 'Ye People Rend Your Hearts' and 'If With All Your Hearts' from Handel's Elijah. 'Just As I Am' by Price, 'The Star of Bethlehem,' Adams, and 'God's Message' by Gray Mrs. Doig will sing 'O Babe Divine' by Hamblen, together with incidental solos in the anthems. Mrs. Ford Turner will sing Neidlinger's 'Birthday of a King' and, besides the usual Christmas hymns, the choir will sing Fletcher's 'Ring Out Wild Bells,' Tours' 'Sing O Heavens' with incidental solo by Mrs. Richmond. 'The Marvellous Work' from Haydn's Creation, Mrs. Doig taking the Obligato. Adams' 'O Holy Night' and an unaccompanied 'Carol' by Dale. The organ numbers will be in keeping with the occasion. At the evening service a song service will be held at 6.45, when a number of Christmas hymns will be sung.

Peterborough music lovers recall with pleasure, the work of the St. John's choir, and boys' choir during the concert given by that organization almost a year ago now. And in the Made-in-Canada fair competitions, Frederic G. Mann, A.Mus., organist and choir master, conducted them to further triumph.

Sunday next, Dec. 23, is the fourth Sunday in Advent and Christmas celebrations in St. John's church will not commence until Christmas Day. They will be continued on the following Sunday. Special music for Christmas day service at 10 a.m. will include the introit "Immanuel" composed by Frederic G. Mann, A. Mus., the organist and choirmaster, specially for this service. Festival Holy Communion Service in key of F by Adlam and anthem, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear" by Sir Arthur Sullivan, with appropriate hymns and organ voluntaries. Other special music for the Sunday services following Christmas include Choral Te Deum by Prior in the key of A flat, Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in key of D major by Smart, and the anthems, Glory to God in the Highest by Coke. Sing O Heavens by Sullivan, O Thou That Tellest from Handel's Messiah and Nazareth by Gounod At Evensong on Sunday, Dec. 29th some of the Christmas carols will be rendered, among which will be included an old English carol, "What Soul Inspiring Music," harmonized by Sir John Stainer.

SACRED HEART CHURCH

The only organist that the Sacred Hearth church has ever had since it was built nineteen or more years ago, John L. Armstrong has prepared the music to be sung at Christmas time with great care.

With the singing of the Mass of St. Michael's, together with the Gregorian Chant, the Midnight Mass to be held in Sacred Heart church promises to be a most impressively beautiful one, from a musical standpoint.

In addition, the sisters of Sacred Heart school have prepared Christmas carols, to be sung by a choir of thirty girls and fifty surpliced boys at the crib, and they will also sing hymns following the midnight mass.

There will be a sala, "Holy Night," with violin accompaniment, in addition to the choir singing.

Miss Mabel Clarry's identification with the choir of Trinity United church has been marked by more than usual success as an organist and choir leader, and she has kept alive the custom of the Trinity choir of singing Christmas music on the two Sundays before Christmas.

Trinity Church.

Last Sunday evening the service was fully choral when music from Handel's "Messiah" was sung, the solos being taken by Mrs. Hohner, Mrs. Williamson, Miss Blanchard, Miss Wolstenholm and Mr. M. Park.

On Sunday next the program will be continued, when the following music will be sung. The evening service will take the form of a carol service and the old traditions and familiar carols will be sung.

ST. PAUL'S

Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., has been organist and choir leader at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church for over seven years. Starting in at twelve years on his musical career he received his early training in England and he became an Associate of the College of Organists. He was organist at Cornell University previous to coming to Peterborough.

The Carols to be sung at St. Paul's on Sunday are selected from a collection of over 500 compiled, edited and arranged by Ralph Sunstan, Mus.Doc. Cantab., one of the greatest authorities on Christmas music. The preface of the book from which the Carols are taken reads:

My own collection has been accumulating for over fifty years. As a lad of ten, I was a member of the choir of a village chapel near Truro, and played successively, the piccolo, clarinet, euphonium and bassoon. Here I had accss to all the treasured musical MSS. of the leading musicians of the neighborhood; and as Christmas was a very special musical season, I was soon familiar with all the Christmas music popular in the district ranging from Truro to Falmouth, Helston, Redruth and Cambourne at that time; with its numerous Chapels and miners' choirs, undoubtedly the most musical part of the West of England. In later years I have copied most of the early printed and M.S. Carols in the British Musum, whilst musical friends all over the country have sent me local "treasures" which have been duly added to my store.

Since about the year 1860, very few Carols have been written or composed which have any distinctive merit or marked individuality. In the older Carols, every historical and legendary incident connected with Christ's Birth and Infancy had been exhaustively- and often inimitably-told; and nothing was left to later writers except what may be called "variations on well-known themes," and although many Christmas hymns with pleasing tune have had an evanescent popularity during the past 30 or 40 years, nine-tenths of them are already forgotten, and there is an increasing tendency on every hand to return to the more robust and characteristic carols of earlier times.

It remains to be said that several of the old carols, like most of the secular ballads, had no special music written for them, but were sung to any well-known tune of similar metre. In some cases, no associated music is known to exist; therefore, it has been necessary to provide new settings, or adapt old ones, in order to include the carols in this collection.

Ralph Dunstan, Mus. Doc.

At the morning service the music will be:

Prelude, "Pastorale," Selby.
Carol, "Lo, the Eastern Sages Rise," Traditional.
Solo—"O, Song Divine," Temple. Mrs. Grace Byers (obligato). Male voices.
Anthem, "Behold I Bring You Good Tidings," Churchill. Quartette, Daisy Davidson, Bertha Hill, Wm. Grieves, Harry Flowers.
Postlude, "March on Christmas Themes," Andrews.

At the evening the splendid musical festival will be:

Organ Recial, 6.45 "Allegretto Grazioso," West; "Carillon," Delamarter; "March of the Migi Kings," Dubois.
Carol, Old Cornish., "Arise and Hail," Traditional.
Anthem, "O, Holy Night," Adams.
Excerpts from Carols of the 15th Century; words and melody traditional, by Dr. Dunstan.—"The Dilly Carol," Choir. "Sir Christmas," Choir; "Bye-Bye, Lullaby," Daisy Davidson. "I Saw Three Ships," Harold Coulson. A Scottish Carol, "To You I Come From Heav'n," Jessie Pattison. The Old "Waits," Male Voices. Soloists, Daisy Davidson, Harold Coulson, Jessie Pattison.
Quartette, "Across the Snow" (modern Carol), Dr. Bridge. Mrs. Grace Byers, Miss Olive Cullen, John Anderson, George East.
Anthem, "Ring Out, Wild Bells," Fletcher.
"Hallelujah Chorus," Handel.

KNOX UNITED

R. J. Devey has been choir master and organist at Knox United Church for nearly three years and before that time for seventeen years he held the same office at St. John's Anglican Church. Mr. Devey received his musical education in England and before coming to Canada he was organist and in charge of the music at St. Mary's Church, Stony Stratford, England. He has always been to the front in the interpretation of the old musical masters and he was in charge of one of the greatest musical events in the history of the city, the singing of the great cantata, "The Messiah," sung by united choirs of the city assisted by the Symphony Orchestra of Toronto at the Grand Opera House in 1913 and followed by the oratorio, "Maccabeus," by Handel.

MARK STREET

V. H. L. Boorman, organist and choir leader at Mark Street United Church has natural talent toward music and he received most of his musical training in the city. POEMS OF ISABELL CALDER

(By JEANETTE)

"The Poems of Sarah Isabell Lowry Calder" is the title of a very attractive volume of verse which represents the contribution of a Peterborough poetess to the wealth of Canadian literature which is slowly gaining for the Dominion a place in the foremost ranks of poetry and prose.

As Mrs. A. F. Calder, the poetical compositions of this talented citizen have become well-known to the majority of the readers of The Examiner, in whose columns many of her poems have first seen the light of day. This book, dedicated "To my friends who have made the publication of this volume possible", contains poems, numbering one hundred and twenty-five, on many different subjects.

A perusal of the volume gives an idea of a pleasing attribute to all the poems, which is an atmosphere of naturalness and freedom from affectation. Mrs. Calder, in her verses, speaks from the heart, sincerely and unaffectedly, and she speaks mainly of the "homely" matters of life, the little things that make up the daily round. Instead of making the mistake of many grandiloquent writers and venturing far afield for a subject, Mrs. Calder stays right at home and puts into pleasing musical rhythm the thoughts inspired by scenes and people near at hand. It is a fine and sincere tribute to the loveliness of her own city and its environs and to the interest of its people that Mrs. Calder pays when she weaves so many of her sweet little poems about scenes that are close at hand and men and women who live and move and have their being in our own home city.

"To the Reader," a poem which forms the opening selection in the book, is an ingenuous little bit that has a great deal of truth in it. The first verse says:

"With those who chance, this, my first book, to read,
For leniency would I sincerely plead.
If far below the ideals of your mind.
When by that balance weighed, the work you find,
Refrain from adverse judgment, ponder well
If, with all its faults, you could the work excel."

There must be a good deal of comfort to those left behind in reading such verses as those inscribed "In Loving Memory of Mrs. Michael Sullivan":

"The sands of time run out, set is life's sun,
Reached is the journey's end, the great goal won,
Folded her hands, upon her gentle breast,
Her toil is finished, Mother is at rest,
To weary ones, at length, comes sweet release,
After the storms of life, eterna. peace."

Many of the poems deal with the Great War and its aftermath. "Socks of Gray" is the soliloquy of a woman thinking of "the gallant lad, whoe'er he be", who will wear "these socks of gray", and breathing a prayer to the Almighty as "the busy needles flit."

"The Fallen Hero" is inscribed to the memory of the late Lieutenant Arthur Ackerman, there is a poem written to "The Boys of the Ninety-Third" with the tune of the "March of the Cameron Men," and "Requiescat in Pace" is dedicated to the memory of Major G. Bennett and his boys who fell at St. Julien.

"A Mother's Meditation" is a bit of the agony of war time for its women:

"My body is in Canada,
Dear land so good and fair,
But, oh, my heart's in Flanders
Since my boy went over there.."

The "bounding Otonabee" that offers so much inspiration to writers makes the subject of one song, and "To a Caged Canary" is a little poem of comfort for the tiny warbler:

"Does your neat little home but a barred prison seem,
And of green fields and forests and freedom you dream?"

"The Sister's of St. Joseph" is a tribute to the "gentle Sisters" who "patient go, Fulfilling Mercy's high behest", and there is an exquisite little dreamy bit entitled "A Bouquet of Wild Lilies", written around the water-lilies of the Otonabee River.

"A Steed's Soliliquy" is the silent plaint of a "city-bred steed" that has fallen on evil times, and later is "By misfortune's harsh hand now reluctantly led, In rude drudgery drooping his uncurried head", while "The Bells of St. John" is a musical bit of verse immortalizing the memory of the chimes "from sacred tower that crowns yon hill."

"Some Violinist" has a different tempo and commemorates in rhyme the reactions to the music of an amateur fiddler:

"How that ill-fated fiddle wails!
As he runs the gamut of the scales.
Sometimes so sharp and shrill the tones
'Twould pierce the marrow in the bones,
Then mournful low the uncanny strain
Like the lost souls moan of hopeless pain,
But we encore and praise, in sooth,
With a secret apology to the truth."

Again, there is an entertaining little bit of satire in "The Fine Arts" which speaks of the encouragement given to the arts of music and painting and writing, and ends thus:

"Brilliant all these, yet pales their light,
Eclipsed by arts more dazzling bright,
Nor may they for a moment hope
With far superior art to cope
Even such fine arts as carving slices
At social fetes, from zero ices,
Or this, of loftier degree,
The master art of pouring tea!"

The volume ends with a little poem enttiled "Mother's Day", with an opening verse:

"To-day a snow-white flower we wear
In memory of the loving care
That blessed our earliest years;
Hushed us at eve to sweet repose,
Soothed all our childish fears and woes
And kissed our tears away."

GAS PLANT PURCHASE

The offer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to accept the city's 4¾%, 30-Year Debentures in payment of the purchase price of $335,000.00 for the Gas Plant is of considerable advantage to Peterborough.

In the first place, the rate of interest is low, 5% is about the best rate that would be obtained on a debenture issue of this class if placed on the open market.

There will be no brokerage charges to pay in connection with the marketing of these debentures.

The annual charges will average approximately $21,000.00 per annum

The Gas Plant operating surplus while under the control of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission has been more than ample to meet these charges and provide a surplus over and above this amount.

	Operating Cost.	Revenue.	Operating Surplus.
1926. . . .	$62,452.88	$94,965.55	$32,512.67
1927. . . .	61,036.27	91,689.12	30,652.85
1928. . . .	59,348.64	92,639.39	33,290.75

There is, therefore, no possibility of the acquisition of the Gas Plant increasing the tax rate.

The ordinary revenue of the plant will meet all expenses including the debenture charges and the plant as purchased will be paid for in 30 years.

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—Corn made brisk upturns in price yesterday imparting strength to values of every other kind of grain. Houses with foreign and seaboard connections were conspicuous buyers of corn future deliveries, whereas actual arrivals of corn from rural sources suggested that farmers were selling only enough to get Christmas money.

Closing quotations on corn were firm, ¾ to 1¾ cents a bushel net higher at about the day's top level, with wheat unchanged to ¼ to ⅜c up, oats ⅛ to ⅜c advance, and provisions unchanged to 5c down.

Nothwithstanding that weather suited to hasten the movement of corn crop was general receipts of corn in Chicago yesterday totalled but 167 cars, against 535 cars a week ago and 282 cars on the corresponding day last year. Taking the country as a whole, yesterday's primary arrivals of corn amounted to 954,000 bushels compared with 1,919,000 bushels one week back and 1,674,000 bushels the same day in 1927. With evidence at hand also of at least a fair export inquiry, the market began soon to swing upward, and previous speculative sellers went rather unanimously to the buying side of the market.

Word that Secretary Jardine of the Department of Agriculture is formally recommending congressional action on farm relief measures be expedited in order to make them applicable to crops raised during 1929 tended further to encouraged traders friendly to higher prices for corn and other cereals as well. Talk was likewise current that Argentina corn shipments had dropped off, and there were assertions that considering the United States corn crop has to be stretched over fourteen months because of extra early use, the supply is in practical effect a good deal short of last year's crop.

Wheat, rye and oats acted in harmony with the behaviour of corn. Besides, Liverpool reported absence of selling pressure in the wheat markets abroad, and Australia was shown to be a persistent large shipper to non-European countries, India in particular.

An official statement placed the combined wheat crops of Russia at 128,000,000 less than last year.

Provisions averaged easier owing to setbacks in the value of hogs.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 22 (Canadiana Press).—A feature of the local grain trade yesterday was the good demand for American corn and sales of fifty cars were made for nearby shipment from Chicago. Apart from this the market was quiet, but the feeling was firm and prices showed no change.

The trade in spring wheat flour on spot showed no improvement but prices were unchanged. There was no change in the condition of the market for winter wheat flour, prices being steady with a small trade passing.

The feature of the millfeed trade was the weaker feeling that developed for shorts and middlings, and millers general reduced prices $2 per ton. A fair trade was done in rolled oats.

An active business was done in eggs and prices were firm. Receipts were 311 cases.

Almost holiday quietness was reported in connection with the wholesale potato situation. Few sales were made as the trade has already stocked up for the holiday season. Prince Edward Island Whites were offering at 75c, and P.E.I. Green Mountains at 80c per 90 lbs. in bags. New Brunswick Green Mountains were offering at 60c per 90 lbs. in bulk.

A moderate trade was passing in beans and peas. Canadian beans were selling at $5.25 per bushel and choice boiling peas at $3.50 per bushel, wholesale.

There was no further developments in the local butter situation, but the undertone remained strong and the general impression in the trade was that prices would reach a higher level before the close of the year if the present demand for supplies continued. Receipts were 94 packages.

A feature of the cheese trade was the demand for matured cheese for export account and a sale of a fair-sized lot of Western August made No. 1 colored was put through at 23½c per lb. Apart from this the market was very quiet with Western fodder made No. 1 white and colored quoted at 18c to 18¼c per lb. Receipts were 581 boxes.

PRODUCE MARKETS

OTTAWA, Dec. 22. —(Canadian Press).—The general situation on Canadian egg markets is still easy and unchanged yesterday.

MONTREAL. This egg market is dull and declining. B.C. eggs are offered on spot here at extras 54c, firsts 46c, pullet extras, 44c. The demand on both fresh and storage eggs is slow.

ST. JOHN—This egg market is weak yesterday. Receipts are increasing and the stocks on hand are now more than sufficient for the local demand, and as a result some small shipments are made to outside points. Prices to retailers are:—extras 65 to 48c, firsts 56 to 60c, seconds 48c. The demand for turkeys is active and prices are from 3c to 5c below last year.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—In a wholesale and jobbing way the butter market is marking time. The movement of butter from wholesale to retail hand has been only moderately active, with prices generally at a firm level and showing a tendency to rise in spots under immediate inquiry. The quotable range on spot at from 41¼c to 41¾c per pound for finest creamery solids is fractionally higher than at a week ago. Dealers do not expect any great improvement in business until after the holidays; when the supply from New Zealand is due to make a first appearance on local markets. Storage withdrawals have been light this week.

There is nothing to commend the market for cheese just now. Inquiry from all local and outside sources is limited, and prices remain unchanged. Dullness has prevailed all week, and dealers near the close were quoting a nominal range of from 21¼c. to 21¾c. per pound for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government-graded, delivered.

The egg market during the past week has been subject to the influences of one condition, over which no one has control, namely, the weather. It has been a week of mild temperatures over all parts of the country which might normally at this season expect winter conditions, and in consequence fresh egg production has increased faster than the market, at the present levels, can absorb them without break in prices. From the standpoint of the producer the mild weather and heavy production may seem beneficial, but such is really not the case. Normal conditions of production, which can be foreseen and allowed for in market quotations, are of far more benefit to every one in the the long run than heavy, unseasonal production and sudden market declines.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind.
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

WARSAW.

A few days ago the remark was made by one of the Warsaw Institute members that she was so glad she belonged to the Institute and had worked in it, she loved it and felt it had broadened her life. Once she had thought there was nothing in a little country village, but she has found that city people's lives are very narrow; they think because their lives are among the things of men, they are full, but they are not. It would seem that the remark held a very great deal of truth. In the large cities we often do not know our next door neighbors; we are not necessarily on bowing terms with the people in the apartment across the hall. In the country everybody knows a little about everybody else, sometimes, we grant, more than is true, but there is a kindliness and neighborliness in the country that cannot exist in cities, large ones especially.

Institute life does broaden one. At the recent convention one Institute branch sent in a resolution wishing the annual departmental delegates discontinued, and the money spent on roads. For one thing, the bit of money would not go very far on roads, for delegates' salaries are not princely.

But the main thing is that those delegates are generally such splendid women, that they bring a bit of outside freshness to our Institute. It is possible, but not likely, they may tell us nothing we did not know, but it does refresh our memories, and it does bring us something from somewhere else; it does help take us out of ourselves.

The gathering together of the women of all denominations in a community to listen to and meet some one else from some other community must and does do much good. They meet at these meetings as they can in no other way.

True, the city has advantages, and statistics show us that city school children's health is now often better than rural. Women's Institutes are doing their best to bring these sanitary, hygienic and health conditions in the rural districts up. The rural districts have the better natural conditions, but in the cities, health conditions are being enforced. There is medical and dental school inspection, sanitary conditions are strictly enforced, children are drilled in school at cleaning their teeth, proper positions are drilled into them. There are also the general public health regulations.

However, the women of the country are going ahead with these things. Probably as many, proportionately, women in rural districts as in urban, have tried to inculcate these principles in their own homes, and quietly among their neighbors, but the Institute has gotten to work, and in many places there are school nurses, dental and medical inspection, and necessary treatment advised, which is at times financed by the Institute. Health talks are given by the members, and the preparation of these talks is a great help. Health talks are also given by the doctors, not only to the Institutes, but to the general public.

Some great advances that have been made in recent years is the greater consumption of vegetables, and less of meat, also more fresh air and sunshine is in the houses.

Parlors are being turned into living-rooms.

WARSAW.

Bearing on the Institute motto of "Home and Country" comes the question of finances. Institute women, who are rarely among the extremely wealthy, feel that in using the family purse, they must make the money go as far as possible, and do not consider, because it has never been brought home, anything further. When money is paid for home or Canadian manufactured goods, it helps the home people, when paid for imported goods, it helps outsiders and tends to weaken our own. Naturally, we want the best value, and if we cannot get it at home we must go elsewhere. Sometimes, however, some Canadian or British made goods would suit the purpose just as well, or better, if we knew of it, sometimes it is both better and cheaper.

Quite recently Mrs. Cameron (Elizabeth Cameron) gave of her time to address Warsaw Institute and spoke along the line of buying at home practically everything.

At the convention in Toronto Major Hallam gave a talk on the textile industry of Canada. Practically every kind of textile is manufactured in the country. He had on exhibition samples of infants' finest woollen garments, of coarser knit woollen, such as lumbermen use, and all the grades between, haircloth, sheer knitted silk and artificial silk garments, woollen knit dresses, sweaters, everything of any quality and any weight knitted. Then there were ginghams and other cotton goods, tweeds, broad silks, woollen flannels and dress goods, beautiful tapestries and exquisite brocades.

He had a sample of the cotton and of the pulp from which artificial silk is made, and noted that the artificial silk had even greater sheen than the real, and was much less expensive.

Made-in-Canada textiles are finished and dyed in Canada, while many of those made in France and Japan are sent to Canada to be finished and dyed. He had some interesting statistics which it might help Canadian home-makers to know.

There are 286 mills in Canada in 140 municipalities. Sixty per cent. of these mills are in towns of under 10,000 population. Seventy-five per cent. of the products of these mills are made of wool. The textile industry alone employs 88,000 workers, of whom 60,000 are women. These women are paid from two to four times as much as the same workers in Europe. This does tend to make the products a little dearer, but is it not better to pay it, and give these women work, than to pay taxes to care for idle, discouraged women? Ninety-four per cent. of the capital is Canadian.

The textile and clothing industries together employ 120,000 workers, of whom 72,000 are women. The silk mills number 42. They use cocoon and artificial silk.

The gross production amounts to $79,805,024.00. Canadian mills produce the finest quality of woollen and worsted cloths, blankets, sweaters, tapestry and furniture stuff, hosiery, felts, yarn, gloves, mittens, carpets and rugs.

Some of the towns in Ontario having mills are Toronto, Hamilton, Peterborough, Cobourg, Woodstock, Preston, Hespeler, Kitchener, Paris, Campbellford.

LAKEFIELD.

As the Christmas season approaches the Women's Institute feels the obligation of community service more, perhaps, than at any season of the year. With the County House of Refuge situated in close proximity to the village, there is opportunity for bringing Christmas cheer to the old people. Last year a visit was paid by about twenty-five members of the Institute during the holiday week and a social hour or two spent in music and conversation. Mrs. John Nortney at the piano, played for several of the old men who sang, and one or two danced, showing surprising agility. Each man and woman was given a bag containing an individual treat. A few parcels were distributed in the village also to homes where sickness had made a Christmas celebration an unattainable luxury.

This year the members of the Junior Institute are giving an individual gift to each inmate of the House of Refuge, and the Women's Institute is also going to personally visit the Home and take gifts.

Probably there will be parcels for the aged and lonely people of the village also, and as year by year goes by an increasing interest will be shown in this truly Christ-like way of celebrating the festive season.

CAVAN

"Some Thoughts of the W. I. of To-day."

The Women's Institute movement is of very great proportions in the world to-day. In Ontario we are perhaps accustomed to think of it as something of our very own, and it is quite true, and not so very long ago, that we had a corner in Women's Institutes. But that is no longer the case.

Now, wherever the English language is the national tongue, and in many foreign countries, the Women's Institute is well known and well regarded.

A brief survey of the status of the work among rural women in the world may be of interest.

There are in the different provinces of Canada, and all following the example of Ontario, about 2,200 Women's Institutes. Begium, learning how from Ontario, has over 700; England, getting hers by way of British Columbia, has 4,000; Scotland, starting directly from England but always keeping in touch with Ontario, has 500. The oldest organization in Europe is probably that of Germany. According to the latest report the first Countrywoman's Association was formed on the First of February, 1898. It is called the Landwirtschaftlichen Hausfrauen-Vereine, and has 1,313 local associations. Ireland has 21 district organizations of the United Irishwomen, started from Ontario's example. France has a few Women's Institutes started from Belgium, but the centre for rural women is the women's section of the Society of Agriculture, which also runs the successful Rural Weeks, rather like the American Institutes for Farm Women. In Poland, there are now some 900 circles of United Countrywomen. The Martha societies of Finland, very like Women's Institutes, now number 399. In Czecho-Slovakia, there is a widespread movement among rural women.

In all the Dominions, there are now unions of rural women. South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Natal, each have a few W. I's. New Zealand took its initiative from England and has now 12 institutes.

Australia Countrywomen's Associations exist in several states, and for the most part have followed the Ontario model.

Queensland has 40 branches; New South Wales, 50. Victoria's W. I's. are formed by the Victoria League. India has 150 Mahila Samitis inspired by the example of England. It is difficult to estimate the number of American societies. The country-wide organization of Home Bureaus reaches literally millions of women and is a purely rural movement. Other organizations such as the Housewive's Associations in Sweden and Holland, for both town and country women are in somewhat a different class. Congresses have been held of these societies existing in Northern European countries such as the one at Oslo two years ago.

All Ontario members must feel a thrill at belonging to se great a sisterhood and one which the Ontario W. I. pioneers had so large a part in making.

Besides our numerical strength, we have won the approbation of the different countries in which we operate. Each Provincial Government of Canada has generously supported with educational and departmental facilities and with money the W. I's. within its border. In the United States immense sums of money, running into millions of dollars have been spent by Federal and State Government and Universities on the Home Bureau Work. Their public men and women and educationists and agriculturists all unite to praise the work of organized rural women.

When every other department of the government in Belgium after the war had its appropriation cut down, that for the Cercles de Fermieres was doubled. In all the European countries mentioned their unions of rural women have government approval and support. England voted ten thousand pounds a year for W. I. work and this was the first time an English government had undertaken the responsibility of a women's organization.

But outside of state approval there is much more. In England, the heads of all the church have spoken warmly of the work. All sections of the community, great nobles, humble peasants, the Queen and the maid, the learned and the unlearned, speak with affection of the W. I.

Perhaps the humblest of English country-women, the wife of the agricultural laborer, who has to bring up her family and keep a home together on less than ten dollars a week, gets the most out of her Institute. It is her recreation, her education and all the glimpse she gets of the wider life which just makes the whole difference between living and existing.

The Institute has succeeded, and grown, because it was organized on sound lines and founded on fine principles, and because it put an ideal in our daily lives.

MOUNT PLEASANT

In the Mount Pleasant branch of Women's Institute it has been customary to use the printed programs during the meetings. Although at the annual meeting some branches claim they do not use these, but most branches do use them and find them very beneficial. The numerous subjects throughout the different months of the year have proven very interesting subjects, and many helpful papers have been prepared on these.

The new programs for the following year were distributed to the members at the December meeting and included the place of meeting along with the subjects for discussion, also the names of the members responsible for the programe and lunch of each meeting.

For the benefit of any who do not happen to use the program a copy of the one which will be used in the Mount Pleasant branch during the coming years is as follows:

On the front page is written: Program of the East Durham Women's Institute. Motto, "For Home and Country."

Institute Ode (Tune—"Auld Lang Syne.")

A goodly thing it is to meet
In friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light.

No envy sour the mind.
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office

"Dear Marion:

Yours of the seventh inst. received. Your idea is a very good one. I know there are a lot of young girls who need advice, and I would be glad to help some of them if possible.

Bobbie's letter last night interested me very much. I had to smile at her troubles with one child 1½ years old. I remember very well how I felt myself. Now I have five children, the oldest 11 years, the youngest 2, and the three in between 5, 8, and 9. Well, I have a problem for sure. You know where there are older children they pet and spoil a baby and that makes it much harder to correct or punish the wee one. I really think it is much better to ignore some of the little one's michievousness, for really that is all it is, and teasing. It seems they are born mischievous and know how to tease and will tease mother as well as anyone else. For instance, when one is setting table and cooking dinner at the same time, the little one has a good chance to tease mother. Mine was just awful a few months ago. I did mostly everything to stop her. At last one day she took some of her own silver when my back was turned. I pretended not to notice and next she had her plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon all on a chair. I let her go, she was watching me too. Next, she put them all on the floor. She had forgotten to take anything else off the table or pull the cloth, so I let her go and when she wasn't looking I set her place with a cup and plate and a spoon (not pretty ones) and put her up to the table. Then she wanted her plate. I explained that it was on the floor, and dirty. This I had to explain about ten times during dinner, but next day when she started, I explained again that if she played with the dishes, they would be dirty. She left them without crying and has been scarcely any bother when setting the table since. I think a lot of things that the little ones do can be handled in this way. Their minds are always busy; why not teach them little lessons instead of 'stop' and 'don't' all the time?

Hoping this will help 'Bobbie' and that I haven't been too long. I am going to close by asking a favor; please send me the helps I have marked, for which I enclose stamps, oblige.

Yours sincerely,
Nellie Bly II

Campbellford."

Your system seems good, "Nellie Bly II" and your hint may prove useful to "Bobbie." Children learn early to get into mischief, and these letters from neighbors should be of help to others worried the same way as "Bobbie."

Best wishes to you and your five mischief-makers. I guess they ARE a handful—but you must be very happy with them, too.

"Dear Marion:

No need to tell you how much we are enjoying your page, especially your discussions. They prove very interesting. I an enclosing a coupon and hope you do not feel I am asking for too much.

I am also enclosing a coupel of recipes which I saw someone ask for, and which I have found very good. Hoping to receive the helps. I remain

Gwen.

I hope my pen-name hasn't been used before. This icing is very hard, as our neighbor mentioned."

Thanks for the recipes, "Gwen," which I hope to use to-day, and for your kind words. Your pen-name has been booked for you—I hope you use it often!

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy your page very much. The helps are wonderful, too; I have twelve now and am sending for more, but please don't call me greedy.

If you find your cream is slightly sour, put it into a dish with the juice of a lemon and a tablespoonful of sugar and beat until stiff. It is then delicious to serve with puddings, etc.

When icing a cake dust it lightly with cornstarch and the icing will not run.

Before putting the upper crust on your berry pie add a pinch of soda and it will not run over.

Hoping some of the neighbors will find these hints useful. I am,

Yours sincerely,
Margaretta."

Birdsalls.

Thanks very much for your hints, "Margaretta," and for the cake and candy receipts which I expect to use to-day.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Having enjoyed your pages very much I thiught I should like to tell you so in this, my first letter to you.

I was much interested in 'Bobbie's' letter, as I have similar problems. I shall look forward to other neighbors' practical means of training children.

Here are some recipes which my children enjoy. Wishing your page every success, I remain,

Yours truly,
Goldie-locks."
Ida.

I am very pleased to know you like our page, "Goldie-locks," and I am sure you will enjoy the discussion started by "Bobbie."

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

WHEN talking with an office manager the other day I took advantage of the opportunity to ask him how girls compare in business with young men—I thought the neighbors might be interested, in view of recent controversial letters.

• • • • • • •

"As a general rule," he said, "girls are just as efficient, and in many cases they show more interest. If there is anything I detest in a worker it is the habit of watching the clock, and I find the young ladies prone to that—but no more so perhaps than the boys are when they have a 'date' for which they wish to dress up."

• • • • • • •

"Of course," he added, "there are always exceptions. I know one young lady, for instance, who can sit for hours doing nothing but playing with her hair. Now, if she had any ambition, when her work was caught up she would try to make more, so as to build herself into the organization and make her services worth more to us."

• • • • • • •

"When we had more boys in the office, in the old days of long-hand book-keeping, they used to bring in dime novels and read them under cover of the ledgers, which is just as bad as the girl who sits and stares into vacancy, so I suppose it's fifty-fifty."

• • • • • • •

To this man I suggested that he must find some advantage in having girls employed in the office, or he would not have changed from the old system. "Well," he replied, "I think we have just drifted into the system since the war. A smart girl is better than a dull boy, and a clever boy is more use to us than a dull girl. I don't think either has a monopoly of the intelligence of the world."

• • • • • • •

"Then," I suggested, "if a girl showed the necessary qualities you would have no hesitation in advancing her to executive duties?" To which he replied: "I would be glad to, but she would have to show the qualities of interest, imagination and devotion to our firm, as well as ability in her stenography or book-keeping."

• • • • • • •

And there you are! I think that is the reasonable attitude to take between the sexes—how different it is from some we have seen in print just recently!

• • • • • • •

If one has equality of opportunity, one has no reason for objection if one fails, because then success is only limited by one's capacity for achievement.

• • • • • • •

Thank all you neighbors who have been so kind as to send me Christmas cards, etc.; I assure you I appreciate every one, and will treasure them all.

• • • • • • •

Last night I worked to all hours, trying to get all your letters answered, but I'm afraid I will have more to do to-night. Space has been short recently, too, and the machines have been so busy that not all our page material has been set in type.

• • • • • • •

However, once the holiday season is over and we get down to normalcy again, I hope to do better—in the meantime I must ask for an overflow of that goodwill which is the keynote of this season.

• • • • • • •

Many, many parcels have come in for the Santa's Pals plan, and will be distributed early on Monday to the organizations which handle the distribution. If there are any more neighbors with parcels, please phone to-night, and if there are any organizations that have not placed their names on the list for a share of the parcels, will they please do so without delay?

• • • • • • •

If you have not yet received your help on Christmas decorating, and desire a copy, call in the office when uptown to-night. I will have a supply left at the counter.

• • • • • • •

And now, neighbors, just one last word of warning before Christmas. There is a great deal of influenza in the city, but not as much as elsewhere, nor is it a serious type. It would be terrible to be laid up at Christmas, and I just wish to tell you all to be doubly careful on the two intervening days.

If you are out shopping in a crowd, or if you are at church, gargle with some good disinfectant immediately on your return, before eating. This, a local doctor told me yesterday, will go a long way toward preventing your contracting the malady.

All of us are too much inclined to be off-handed about our health, and take it for granted that if we are to "get" a certain thing we can't avoid it. As a matter of fact we owe it to ourselves and to our families to be a little more careful.

Especially designed as a Christmas and New Year present for the Chinese residents of the city are the decorative calendars which Mrs. J. H. Bettes has been distributing to the various Oriental establishments this week.

Sergeant Mrs. Bettes is a senior and indefatigable worker in the cause of the Salvation Army and she centers her attention about the Chinese people who are interested in the Christian religion. Aided by an old friend who prefers to remain anonymous, a quantity of these calendars were purchased and distributed among Mrs. Bettes' foreign friends, along with tracts which are also written in Chinese and little bits of Scriptural verse which are done up in a novel and extraordinary way as chewing gum, with wrappers that bear the words: "The flavor lasts."

During the past year, Mrs. Bettes also purchased, with the asisstance of the same friend, Bibles and catechisms for her Chinese friends, placing one of the former in each of the Oriental establishments of the city. These calendars are her Christmas boxes to those who are seldom remembered by the people among whom they live and move and make their living. Several of the youthful Chinese of the city are Sunday school pupils of Mrs. Bettes.

The calendars are very interesting. Published by the Christian Book Room of 3 Quinsan Gardens, Shanghai, they are bought through the Christian missions in Toronto. With twelve separate pages, they bear, in black and red ink, Chinese characters in the sign writing which is the way in which those of the Celestial Kingdom express their thoughts.

The name of the month and year and the days of the week are written in both English and Chinese characters. Everything else is in the letter language, with the oddly-formed signs running up and down the pages. Asked for an explanation of the sign following the English characters for "January, 1929," a local Chinaman explained that the symbols following this stood for the first month of the eighteenth year of the Chinese Republic, time being reckoned in this manner now in China.

The Chinese character for "life," which resembles a short-handled, narrow-bladed hatchet, done in heavy black ink, and encircled by a black ring, appears on the first page, along with the red cross of Christianity and a red circle emblazoned with white hieroglyphics which mean "God."

The all-seeing eye of Jehovah, as it appears on so many of the pages of the Old Testament, is used in several places, there is a portrayal of a cemetery with black and red circles beneath it which depict the life of a bad and good man. This idea of black for the evil one and red for the virtuous person appears again and again, and the symbol of a black heart does much to convey the meaning of a bad-hearted person.

For the July page, a graphic picture has been made depicting the wicked men who drown in the river of sin and the Christian convert turning for refuge to the cross of redemption, which does not, in any of its representations, bear upon it the figure of the Crucified One. The face of the first president of the Chinest Republic, Sun Yat Sen, appears on the September page, along with the "ten cash" equalling one cent, money of the Republic and the older Chinese coin of two centuries back.

November's pictures show the sealed and the open tomb which waits at death, and the final page of this "Light of Love and Gospel" calendar, as it is called, shows the red cross with, on one side, appealing hands stretched toward it, and, on the other side, angry, clenched fists and spears raised against it.

On each page appears a verse from the Gospel and the border line is a variation of the "Greek key" design, done in black.

Sergeant Mrs. Bettes, who makes this Oriental work a specialty, has been made the subject of a charming little bit of verse from the pen of Mrs. A. F. Calder, published in a volume of poems printed this year and containing much of the latter's work. It is entitled "The Teacher" and is dedicated to "Mrs. J. H. Bettes, Teacher of a Class of Chinese." The last verse runs thus:

"Ungrudgingly she spent her time and talent doing good,
And well of her it may be said she hath done what she could;
Aye, she shall find fulfilled at last
the promise all divine,
They that turn many to the Lord bright as the stars shall shine."

WHAT IS CORRECT?

PAYING VISITS

Mrs. G.—Between three and half-past four in the afternoon are the hours for formal visits, while from four to seven are the usual hours stated on a reception card. One should stay from fifteen to twenty minutes.

And, my dear, one does not "make calls"—one pays "visits." It is not correct to use the expression "At Home." Even the most formal reception is spoken of as a "tea."

CHRISTMAS TOYS' BALL

Are you thinking of giving a party or dance for the young folks who are home during the holiday season? Why not call it "A Christmas Toys' Ball"? Invitations are very cunning if made in the nature of a baseball. Cut the white cardboard about the size of a baseball, marking the stitches in with black ink. It can be made double with the invitation written inside such as:

Come to the Ball, the Christmas Toys' Ball
And dance to the Christmas Tree Band
And the candle light of a holiday night
In jolly old Let's-Pretend-Land.

Decorations are made as of Christmas toys, cut from colored cardboard such as Jumping Jacks, Dolls, Drums, Engines, etc. At one end of the room or wherever it is most convenient to have the orchestra, place a Christmas Tree which is covered with colored electric bulbs and colored balls. The members of the orchestra should wear paper hats trimmed with some Christmas decoration. The favors may also be placed on the tree. For the candle light place tall cylinders of red cardboard over all the lights.

Make at least every other dance an unusual one, this will keep up the merriment and break the monopoly of the steady dancing. Here's one which sounds good, "Christmas Choo Choo Blue" dance. Give out green railways tickets, each two to a different place. One set going to the boys and the other to the girls and they dance with the person going to the same destination. The tickets could read: To Topsy Turvy Land, Never Never Land, Fairyland Banbury Cross, Treasure Island, etc. Or if real cities are desired they could be called out in turn by a conductor or leader of the orchestra and the couple left on the floor at the end receiving a prize. Whistles and bells could be used by the orchestra during this dance.

The "Noah's Ark" dance is quite ordinary, the partners being chosen by animal crackers. For the "Rag Doll" dance everyone dance as limply as possible, after the fashion of the famous Raggedy Ann dance. Then there's the "Ladies' Choice" which is always popular—and it will be more so just now as Leap Year is almost ended. Small rubber balls with elastics attached are distributed among the girls, and they are thrown at the boy with whom they desire to dance. These may also be used during the dance serving as a sort of tag, if they succeed in hitting any other girl's partner with their balls, he must leave her and dance with them. A "Building Block" dance with letters cut from bright cardboard or paper to be hung around the neck would also prove amusing.

Ice cream which can be purchased in many animal characters would add to the evening. Or if the ice cream is cut in slices from a brick, a cookie cut like one of the Christmas toys, set on the top, or animal crackers set in ice cream would also be unique.

A HOME AT CHRISTMASTIME.

This poem, by Anne Sutherland, is sent to me by "Ariadne," one of our neighborly circle.—M.

A store at Chhristmastime is so ecstatically gay
With color, perfume voices, that it takes your breath away;
It's like a lanterned fairyland new-blossomed in the street,
A store at Christmastime is gay—but, oh! a home is sweet!

A church at Christmastime is so divinely bright and fair,
With candles on the altar and a carol in the air,
And sunshine on the church steps where the friendly people meet,
A church at Christmastime is fair—but, oh! a home is sweet!

I think God smiles at Christmastime indulgently upon
A store; I think His spirit fills a church at Christmas dawn;
But when He looks into a home all snug and warm and neat
(And Mary found in Bethlehem no threshold for her feet),
I think His eyes fill up with tears—for, oh! a home is sweet!

OLD DADDY JOE

We went down to the railroad station on Friday afternoon, right after school, to meet the twins, Oliver and Harold, who came home from their fancy school in Massachusetts for their regular Christmas vacation. Their school let out on Wednesday, but by Jinks!ours kept up till the regular closing time Friday—makes no difference what day Christmas falls on, our school is always the last to quit for vacation. Jerry Moore was mad about it—he said he was going to tell our teacher he didn't think it was right, but I told him he'd better keep his thoughts to himself—and anyway, the more you go to school, the more you learn.

Every year we go down to the station to meet the twins when they come home. They are nice fellows, too, and it's a shame they can't be in our clubhouse all the year round, but then again I guess it's a good thing they can't, because whenever they are here, there's always a lot of excitement. Not that the twins do it—only one twin starts the trouble—I mean Harold. His brother Oliver is a nice, easy going kid, but you ought to see Harold. Oh, boy! He just can't sit still long enough to eat his meals, it seems—his daddy always said he was too fidgety to get anywhere, but Harold says you can't get anywhere sitting still. I knew what he would say, the first thing, when he stepped off that train—

"Well, Hawkins, any excitement going on around this old river bank?"

"No," I said, "and what's more, there ain't goin' to be any. You understand that, Harold. The last time you got us kids in bad was the last. Now, don't you go stirring up anything—"

"Say!" he broke in. "Everytime I got you kids in bad, I got in worse myself, didn't I?"

"Yeah, but we don't want you to get in bad yourself—"

"Nah! Nah! Everytime we got in again?"

"That ain't it, Harold. What we're aiming to do is to steer clear of trouble and excitement."

"No fun without excitement—you've just got to have some. Where's Jerry Moore—here, you great big hippopatamus, come over here and shake hands, you!"

I knew it was all off then. Let Jerry and Harold get together—

"I been doin' some trappin' lately, Hal," says Jerry; "Shadow Loomis an' me, we're partners."

"How many things have you trapped?" asked Harold.

"Oh, nothin' but a rabbit, yet," answered Jerry. "You see, Hal, we ain't had the traps but a week. You want to go along now and see if we caught anything? We got the traps set around in the woods."

Of course Harold wanted to go. All the other boys said they would go, too. So we went down to the clubhouse and held our meeting. The twins had to go home first to kiss their mama, so we waited for them. Seemed like old times to have them back again. There were eleven boys around the table at that meeting, and such a lot of noise as they talked—our captain had to hit the table ten times with his wooden hammer, before we could get the meeting started.

There wasn't much to talk about, except our plans for Christmas celebration, and Jerry Moore and Lew Hunter were appointed to cut a Christmas tree and bring it to the clubhouse. They said they would get it when they were on their rounds to the traps, and with that, then, they went out, leaving me to write the minutes, and Perry Stokes to clean up the clubhouse.

"Look here, Perry," I said, "didn't you buy another bottle of ink—"

"Certainly, sir," answered Perry. "You remember it was there—why, it's there now, isn't it?"

"Look for yourself," I told him.

Perry came into my writing room and gazed at my desk. The inkbottle was there, but there was no ink in it. There was something else in it, however—plain water. And out of the bottle there peeped a little sprig of mistletoe.

"Of all things!" exclaimed Perry. "What does that mean, sir—"

"It means that somebody's sneaking into this clubhouse every day while we are at school," I told him. "The first time he upset our bottle, and blotted up the desk. The second time, after you bought a new bottle of ink, he comes in and takes the stopper and smears double B in big letters on our new blotter. Now he has sneaked in again and emptied the ink and filled the bottle with water and left that little bouquet for us."

"Who could it be, sir?" asked Perry, after a pause. "You don't think any of our own boys—"

"Forget it!" I said. "None of our boys is doin' it. It's not worryin' me so much who it is that does it. What I'd like to know is how he gets in. You and I are the only ones who have a key to this clubhouse. The windows are locked, you say."

"Every time I leave, I lock them on the inside, sir. And never have I found them unlocked."

"Well, then, somebody else has a key to this place."

"Where could he have got it, sir?"

"Yeah, ask me a hard one. If I knew that—but look here, Perry, keep still about this, now. If that fidgety Harold twin finds out about it, he will think it's his duty to find the fellow who sneaks in, and the first thing we know we'll be having another fight on our hands. We had enough to do to smooth over that last fight we had with the red-headed gang—old Judge Granbery won't be so easy with us again."

The boys came back within an hour, bringing back a nice Christmas tree for our clubhouse. They reported, however, that not one of the traps had caught anything.

"It's not the traps' fault, though," said Shadow, as we all sat around while Lew Hunter started to fix up the tree in a corner. "I know those traps are all right, because I bought 'em myself. Three of 'em were sprung. Somebody's going around and taking out the rabbits we catch, and eating them. Don't tell me any different."

"I'd like to catch him, whoever it is," growled Jerry Moore.

"Well, why not?" chirped Harold the twin; "now, that's an idea for excitement. Find the fellow who's stealing the catch of the traps."

"Listen," I said to him, "if you can do that, go ahead; but remember, don't get our club in any more trouble."

There was to be singing practice that night, and so we adjourned till seven o'clock.

Perry Stokes called for me at my house at quarter of seven, and we walked down the river path together. We were the only two with keys, so we wanted to arrive early and have the clubhouse open and the fire going in the little stove before the others got there. Just as we came in sight of the clubhouse, Perry caught my arm and stopped.

"Look, sir!" he said.

I looked, and saw a dim light through one of the windows in the clubhouse. Both of us knew that nobody else in our club had a key; and we knew we had locked up tight when we left.

"Somebody's in there, Perry," I said, "so let's go slow."

We hurried, however. Only when we started up the steps of the clubhouse did we go cautiously on tiptoe. The door stood partly open. In the lock there was a long, wire key that looked more like a shoe button-hook. We tiptoed up and stood in surprise at what we saw within. The lamp in my writing room had been lighted; and in its glow we could see a strange little figure moving about. He was a ragged little fellow, oddly dressed in a greenish-looking overcoat that was patched here and there, and one sleeve was completely ripped up to the shoulder and flapped about him like a wounded wing. He wore no hat, his straggly locks hanging like so much straw from his topknot. He seemed to flit from place to place, first to the Christmas tree that Lew Hunter had set up in a corner, giving it the once over, then over to my desk where he peered into the open book that lay atop it, and then his gaze fell upon the empty ink bottle, in which we had found the sprig of mistletoe that afternoon, but which I had dumped out. He now seized upon the bottle and turned it upside down, as though to assure himself it was empty. Then from somewhere inside that greenish long coat he produced a small milk bottle, with an immense cork in it. He took out the cork and slowly poured water from the milk bottle into the ink bottle, and set the latter back on my desk. Then he corked his milk bottle again and stowed it away in the folds of that long coat. Then he drew from another pocket a bunch of mistletoe; and picking off a sprig, he stuck it in the ink bottle. He put it on one side of my desk and turned his head to one side to look at it; but was not pleased, it seemed, with its looks, so he adjusted the sprig again and placed it on the other side. Then he gave a little jig while he whistled a tune, and turned to go, and found us watching him—

"Oh, boy!" he exclaimed. And then he whistled. "Gee! You nearly scar't me to death, you guys—why don't you let a guy know yer comin' in—"

"Why don't you let us know when you're coming in?" I said, sharply. "Seems like you been takin' your time comin' and goin' here with your little button-hook for a key—don't you know what that means, boy? Breakin' into peoples' houses with a skeleton key—"

"Who's breakin' into who's house?" he cried in a shrill voice. "This ain't no peoples' house—this little ol' shack, here—this ain't nothin' but a shanty—"

"You have no business here, sir," spoke up Perry. "Your mama wouldn't like to know you're doing anything like this—"

"Mama who?" he snapped, his eyes afire, staring up into Perry's kindly face. "Say, what you tryin' to do, make me feel bad? I never had no mama—let me out o' here—I'll not come in again—I just thought that fat guy over there would like for me to come here and bring him some Christmas greens—believe me, I got the best greens in the market this year—I sell lots—"

"If you will please hush a minute," I said, with a grin, "I'll tell you how much I did like that mistletoe, buddy. But before I do that, I want to tell you how much I did NOT like the way you spilled my ink all over my desk—"

"It was an accident," he broke in. "I see you boys meetin' here ever' day, and I fought I'd come an' take a peek around—get I'd like to be in this shack with you, too—"

"It's not a shack!" broke in Perry. "Please call it clubhouse, will you?"

"You keep still till somebody talks to you!" he snapped. "I don't like you. I come here to see this fat feller—"

There came a step on the porch, and we turned our heads to see Shadow coming in. The little stranger took that chance and ducked—was gone before we could say "Scat!" Almost knocking over Shadow Loomis as he passed him in the doorway.

"Whew! Who was that?" asked Shadow.

"Search me!" I said, and I walked over to the door and took out the long wire hook. "He forgot his buttonhook, though, so I guess he won't break into our clubhouse again. You understand, Shadow, it was the little kid who's been upsetting things in here the last few days. And it won't do to tell Harold about it, of course."

Shadow understood. In a little while the other boys came in, and Lew Hunter got out the music sheets and handed each of us one, and then he sat down at the organ and began to play. Boy! How those Christmas songs do get a fellow! Dick Ferris with his tenor voice started the old hymn which was the first we were to sing on Christmas morning in the choir:

"O Holy Night! the stars are brightly shining,
It is the night of our dear Saviour's birth."

If ever there was a voice that could make you sit and listen, it was Dick's—and in the next line, when Lew joined with his soft alto, it sounded beautiful. Then came the part where we all joined in—

"Fall on your knees!
Oh, hear the angel voices,
Noel, Noel—"

Something didn't suit Lew, the way we sang, and he held up his hand for us to stop. And then suddenly we knew that somebody else was singing outside—it sounded far away, yet it was clear as a bell—a silvery voice rang out those words again—

"Fall on your knees!"

It made us all sit and wait for more. Lew Hunter sat like a statue, staring through the frosted windows out into the dark night where, somewhere there was a voice that he knew could sing it better than any of us. But it ended suddenly, and though we waited, we did not hear it again.

"Who could that have been?" asked Lew quietly. "Not the Pelham boys, surely—"

"Ha! Let's go!" cried Harold, the twin. "Let's find the singer fellows. Chance for some excitement—"

"No!" I said. "It doesn't make any difference who it was. We've got to get along with this singing practice. Come on, Lew, strike it up again, and maybe we can do better for you this time."

But Lew didn't seem in any hurry, as he slowly turned back to the organ. I knew he was thinking of that silvery voice outside somewhere—Lew would have liked to have that voice in his choir. But he finally started up the organ and we got to singing again, and this time we got through with it very nicely. I didn't sing much myself—I was thinking of that silvery voice—wondering if it wasn't that same little rascal who had come sneaking into our clubhouse with a button-hook, emptying our ink bottle and filling it with water to keep a sprig of mistletoe in it. We had started another song, it was the old Shepherd Song we boys all liked about the best of our Christmas hymns, because it wasn't an easy one to sing. There are three different parts to it, and we divide up the fellows into three groups, with high voice, middle voice and low voice, you see. Then another reason we like it is because it's about shepherds—I guess every boy likes people who look after sheep or any kind of little animals like that—anyway, we had just got into the second part of it, when there came a soft knock at the door. Perry and I were the only ones who heard it, and we started to go towards the door when the knock came louder, and all the boys stopped singing and turned as we pulled open the door.

A man stood on the threshold. He was a dilapidated looking man—looked just like a tramp—his beard had not been shaved, and his clothes were old and wrinkled. But somehow or other he didn't frighten us boys. No, sir! There was a look on his face that would tell a fellow you didn't have to be afraid of him—and he smiled as he took off his hat and came in.

"I'm sorry for stoppin' the singin'," he says, as he moved drom one foot to another and looked down at us. "It's purty good—that singin' is—but that's jest what made me come here 'specially. Let me look ya' over, once."

We all stared at him in silence, as he gazed from one to the other of us, and shook his head.

"I might 'a' known," he said, "that he wouldn't 'a' been here. I just come to see, that's all. You know, he liked singin' hisself, and I kind o' thought mebbe he would be here if he heard this singin' goin' on, so I jest come to look. No harm done, I reckon. Thank ya' little men. I'll not be botherin' o' you fellers again. Goodnight—thank ya'."

"Wait!" spoke up our captain. "Who was it you were lookin' for, Mister?"

"Little Gil—you don't happen to know him, do ya'? He ain't been 'round yere long, but he makes friends quick, Gil does—the kid's been gone two days now, and I can't find the little beggar, nowhere."

"Is he your boy?" I asked, suddenly. He gave me a searching look; and after a moment or two:

"Yeah, he's my little kid, Gil is," he said. "But he run away from me now, so—"

"Do you whip him?" asked our captain.

"I whipped him a little—but he needed it fer his own good," answered the man with a sad smile; "but it don't do to whip Gil—he's got a strong mind for hisself. I wisht I hadn't whipped him, though, now. It don't jest seem the same without Gil and me bein' together—the little tike. Seems like I jest need him, somehow."

He stood with his head bent, swinging his worn old hat with one hand while with the other he slowly pulled open the door.

"If you boys see him—" he began, but I cut him short.

"How should we know him? We never heard of him before."

"You'll know him, if you ever see him," said the man with a smile. "No mistakin' about that—if you boys see a raggedy little scamp and he answers to the name o'Gil, you just tell him—won't you?—tell him his old Daddy Joe is mighty lonesome fer him—waitin' fer him—an' there won't be no more whippin' goin' on in our camp no time, no matter what. You see, Little Gil, he ain't like most boys—he's a kind you get to like better'n most kids—an' I'm just plum put out by his runnin' off. Well, goodnight, thank ya'."

The door closed slowly as old Daddy Joe went out. Poor old tramp! I felt sorry for him—worrying his heart out like that around Christmas time—just the time when he ought to have his little boy with him—and I felt sure that the kid we had caught in our clubhouse beforesinging practice started was none other than little Gil. So I up and told all the boys about it—and to Harold I said:

"You can have some excitement, now. We've got to find this little kid for old Daddy Joe."

Which we did.

Dear Seck:

How are you feeling. My sister and I and my brother have a long way to go to school. To night I had some Geography and some Spelling.

We are going up town to-night. My mother is sewing, and my brother Jack is also going up town. I am in Senior First class, and I am seven years old. My teacher's name is Miss Huffman.

Yours fair and square,

FORGET YOURSELF

Now as Christmas time draws nigh
Are we thinking—you and I
Of ourselves, or of some others
Who have neither pals nor brothers,
Not a soul to even care,
Clothes—why not enough to wear
Little children, raggy, cold;
Grandma, who is growing old,
Father, he just can't get work
Mother sick. We must not shirk.
God meant us to care for these
And what'er we do He sees
So let's forget ourselves this year
And spread to these folk Christmas Cheer.

—H. G.

Dear Seck:

LOST IN THE BACKWOODS

Once three children went out to find an axe handle and when they got in the forest a big fire started. They ran in the opposite direction to their home. After the fire was put out they found they had lost their way. Finally they found a dog and the dog found plenty of food for them.

After a couple of years a man saw them and he knew who they were. He said for them to come down to the river till he talked with the Indians. When they reached home their mother was overcome with joy.

Yours fair and square,
Joe Lucano.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office

"Dear Marion:

I am 'tickled pink' as the children say to learn that I am the winner in your story contest with my story, 'A Christmas Thought.' I surely did not expect a prize especially the first, and still more especially after reading the other stories. They were all interesting and some were quite clever, I thought. It must have been very hard to decide on My little effort.

I submitted two, Marion. I am sure I did not expect both to be printed, but sent the two expecting you to choose one, the best—if either were good enough to appear in print. Thank you so much for printing both and for indulging me with the first award. The second story was entitled "Two Spruce Trees," and appeared over the initials V. B. in the paper. I notice you have not the full name and address of either, Mrs. J. B. or V. B. I enjoyed writing the stories and would have felt repaid in pleasure had I not received any remuneration. The latter is very generous, indeed, for 'unskilled labor.'

Our household still reads your page and enjoys it. We have read a similar paper—or at least a women's page in . . . . . for years and years, and enjoyed it. I often make mental comparison between the two and find 'our page' comparing very favorably with the other. I like ours better in this way, the head of the department writes at greater length in reply to the letters. I suppose that is possible because of more available space.

I love that oration—or rather that extract from an oration of Cicero. I have been foolish enough to dread old age, although I am still quite young—not far past thirty. might never have read it had it not been for you, dear Marion. The idea of printing these bits of the classics is—in my little opinion—a very good one. I hope it is never discontinued.

Thank you again, dear Marion. I should like to tell you what I have planned to buy with my prize money, if you would be interested, but perhaps I had better wait and see if I can find what I have in mind.

We wish you again a very happy and merry Christmas and the best of all the good things Santa carries in his pack.

Very sincerely yours,
V. F. B.

City.

I'm very glad to have your name and address, "V.F.B.," and hope you obtained what you wanted with your prize money.

Thanks for all the nice things you write about our page. I scored out the name of the other paper, because I don't think printing it would be ethical. I'm glad to know you like the Daily Deading.

I'm quite sure we would all enjoy learning what you bought with the first prize cheque. I know I would!

"Dear Marion:

I have been reading the letters written to you all fall and think they are just splendid. Some people are perplexed as to whether you are a man or woman. In my idea no common man could possibly deal with the many questions you have so wisely.

I am only eighteen years of age. For the last three years I attended high school, aiming to be a school marm some day, but my health failed me in August. From nervous trouble it developed into slight lung trouble, so I am having a rest this year.

My time is not being wasted, though, as I belong to a large family and can find plenty of work to do. Since I have been feeling stronger I save all the recipes from your page and paste them in a book and when convenient, try some. Nearly always I have good luck. Won't I make a good cook for someone some day, mayqbe? I also sew and embroider and read a great deal.

Isn't it scaring to think Christmas is so close? I hope Santa Claus is very thoughful of you.

Marion, why do so many young girls ask such silly questions? I cannot fancy them not knowing better. Imagine any one really being in love before they are twenty anyway.

Can you please send me the help I have checked? Wishing you and all the members a Merry Christmas.

Just Me Too"

Havelock.

I'm sorry, "Just Me Too," you will have to change your name a little—we already have a "Just Me." I don't like names too much alike, because one is so likely to get them mixed, but the above suits me, if you are satisfied.

I am glad to learn that you are "on the menu" and hope your ambitions will not be thwarted. It's good to know the recipes turn out well.

Let me assure you, "Just Me Too," that I am NOT a man. Some silly person started the story and during the past week or so I heard it several times. At first I got mad, but then I saw the joke. I'm sure the neighbors know better.

Many of the letters to which you refer are not really silly, "Just Me Too." Remember, many girls are not as fortunate as you in their environment and training. Let's help when we can. Read "M.B.'s" opinion today.

"Dear Marion:

Thank you very much for the helps you sent. I am enclosing a coupon for other helps with a couple of stamps for postage.

Your very nice letter came a few days ago, in which you spoke of a "Big Sister" column. Young girls often do seem like ships without a rudder and a few words will often make a great difference. If I can help, I will be very glad to. I have four children, the oldest is just seven, and my baby is nearly three. Only one is a daughter, and I hope there will always be a helping hand for her when she needs it. It must be tragedy to the mother when something happens to ruin her daughter's girlhood, when perhaps a little more tolerance and sympathy would have prevented it.

I enjoyed the letter from 'Quid Est' in to-day's Examiner, but that one from 'Another Thinker' made me angry. It's a good thing the majority of men nowadays have more sense than he shows, or life would certainly be a sorry business for women.

I must close this or it will be in the waste basket. I always take time after the youngsters have had supper to read your page, and it is always interesting.

Sincerely,
M. B."

Marmora.

I'm very pleased to know that you will help with the "Big Sister" column, "M.B." I like your attitude toward the plan.

I don't know when I received a compliment for our pages that I liked as much as yours—it sound so neighborly, somehow—you finding time "after the youngsters have had supper" to read what we have written. Best wishes to you and to them.

"Dear Marion:

For Bobbie: Our baby is eighteen months and dishes are most attractive. Counter attarctions and changing the subject have been the most helpful with this little one. A distinct 'No' is sometimes good, but often too wounding to put into practice even at this early age. Giving reasons and explaining has happy results, but we need constant help from One who has promised to give wisdom. To forbid something often makes the child want to do it and possess it all the more. Good wishes from

Lorraine."

Thanks, "Lorraine'," for your helpful letter, which I'm sure will be appreciated by "Bobbie" and other neighbors. Write again, please.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Will you please send me the Christmas helps I have checked on the enclosed coupon? I am a daily reader of your page and enjoy it very much.

I was especially interested in reading Bobbie's letter about the trouble she was having with her baby, for I seem to be having the same trouble, although my young son is older—three and a half years. We got along fine until this last couple of months; he seems to have got very stubborn and obstinate and it seem to me I'm scolding him most of the time, but goodness me, you have to have obedience from a child of that age. I agree with Bobbie, it certainly is a problem to know just which is the right way to go about it and I, too, would welcome letters from neighbors on the subject.

Wishing your page every success, I am, Yours truly,

"Molly Bawn."

City.

The neighbors are writing, "Molly Bawn," and I'm sure you will agree the letters are fine. Best wishes.

"Dear Marion:

I again take pleasure in writing you my thoughts and am glad to be able to say that I have really enjoyed your own and other criticisms on my last letter.

Now in to-night's paper 'Quid East' writes a beautiful letter. A woman, by my thinking, not masculine, so place my letter beside 'Quid Est's,' compare the inner meaning, and you will see the man's way of expression.

You went after 'Another Thinker' as you did me, because we are men not gifted in flattery or smoothing oil as women are, but we know what we mean and lack that fineness of woman. Man is coarser built, coarser voiced and naturally coarser of thought. As you admit 'Man built the world through Woman.' He doesn't like to see the Woman grow away from the old way and try stepping out for herself, because through my way of thinking, if Women start that, they will eventually become a rival to man and then when that happens things will not be as they have been.

Now, by your criticisms of 'Quid Est's' letter, I don't consider for a moment that you have gained one iota on downing my statements, which I hope I have made clear in this letter. I also wish to thank 'Another Thinker' for his masculine views, also some of your female critics for theirs. All I can say is, I or no other man likes a woman half man; he still loves that which is Woman. I remain,

Yours truly,
Thinker."

The only part of your letter I'll answer, 'Thinker,' is the last. A man may love a woman, but I think he likes one who is able to stand on her own feet. That is what women are learning to do.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Many thanks for the helps and in return I am sending some recipes requested by Mrs. A. R. I sure enjoy the Woman's Page and wish you every success.

Mrs. E. F."

Thanks for your neighborly help, "Mrs. E. F." I'm using your contributions to-day.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Here comes still another to join your circle. How I love the women's pages now. How did we get along without you for so long? But now that we have you, we must be very careful and not to be too much of a bother.

I am enclosing the coupon for helps which I have marked. If I haven't time to make them up for Christmas, why there are always birthdays coming along and they are almost as much of a puzzle as Christmas just to know what to give.

Well for my first time in writing you I won't say very much. Perhaps another time I will drop a line. Wishing you all success and a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Sincerely yours,
Amor."

I'm glad you have joined our circle, "Amor," and I certainly hope you write soon and often. That, you know, is what makes our page so neighborly. Thanks for the nice things you write.

"Dear Marion:

I have been reading your pages for quite a long time but have never gained courage to write before. You must be a very wonderful person, Marion, to conduct such a fine women's corner. My first rush home in the evening takes me at once to the paper and your columns. It was such fun, too, to write the Christmas stories and some did such excellent work it was a real pleasure to read their stories.

Yours very sincerely,
Norwood. Pansy."

Thank you, "Pansy." I hope you do not halt, now that you have started writing.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I just want to say 'thank you' for the lovely box of stationery which I received as third prize in the recent story competition, also for the monetary reward. It really was one of the nicest things that ever happened to me.

In view of the fact that so many stories were entered, I feel quite proud of winning a place 'in the sun,' to quote a misguided man correspondent of our page. Some of the glory of course 'lies in the struggle, not the prize,' but I think the prize is not without its thrill, don't you? Anyway I was delighted with mine (both thrill and prize). I intend to invest the money I earned in a lasting souvenir of the event. A memento of 'what I did in the great war,' as it were.

Wouldn't it be interesting to have a competition with the neighbors as judges? That is, which ever article seemed to be most liked by the greatest number would win the prize? It would relieve you of the task also. I was pleased to receive your letter regarding the 'Big Sister' column.

Yours sincerely,
Adastia."

I thought of running a competition in which readers would be judges, "Adastia," but when I asked some of the men editors here they told me it had been tried before, and failed because readers wouldn't send in their votes. I remarked "The neighbors are different," but thought it a little, risky with a competition as big as the Christmas story contest. Maybe next time.

Thank you for your letter, "Adastia," and I hope you write soon again

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I wish to thank you for the splendid help I get through the women's page. I have tried a lot of the recipes and find them real good. The Whatnot also is wonderful.

I am sending recipes for taffy for Mrs. R. E. D. Hope they are the kind she wants.

Yours truly,
Lucinda."

City.

It's nice to know our page is so appreciated, "Lucinda." Thanks for the recipes which I'll try to use today in the Neighborly Help column.

"Dear Marion:

This is my third leter, but I got cold feet and destroyed the other two. I am going to send this before I have time to think twice.

Please do not spoil the woman's page by allowing any man on it. The nice ones will not write; and the not so nice will only be sarcastic.

"Another Thinker" ought to know that choirs have to wear the uniform that the church can afford and not what they like. Your page seems so friendly and gossipy about everything interesting that it is with a happy sigh of satisfaction that I sit down to read every little bit of it.

Wishing you a better and bigger success in the New Year,

I am, 'Unknown'."

What a terrible thing to do, "Unknown", tearing up perfectly good letters! Don't you do it again, because the neighbors would like to read every one. Mail your letters quickly, before the urge to destroy them wins.

Dear Marion:

May I through the widely read pages at this time make a plea for our patient, four footed, faithful friends, the horses? At this time of year, we neighbors may help by ordering early—having occasion to-day to note a young lad who was over-driving an already tired horse. I asked the proprietor about it and his answer was to the effect that 'woman, gentle woman' was the indirect cause—orders phoned late in the day, in many cases the driver and horse having to go to the house two and even three times in a day. I find by keeping a pencil and pad in the kitchen and jotting down an item just before it is all used that I save not only myself but both horse and driver—most of us can order our meats and groceries the night before for the a.m. delivery.

Will you, dear Marion, with your clever brain help? "Blessed are the merciful for they shall receive mercy."

I happened in a store at 5 o'clock on a Saturday night (not to shop but to leave a parcel to be called for by a friend) and you can scarcely credit it but one of our sex was actually asking that a box of strawberries be sent, and at that hour—absolute thoughtlessness, of course. She evidently was not a lover of horses or she would have thought.

I just know you'll do something worthwhile.

Yours truly,
An Admirer.

Marion.

LITTLE SONGS OF LOVE

A WIFE'S SOLILOQUY.
(Contributed by "Sheila")

When I am gone and you sit here alone,
Deep in your chair beside our dear hearthstone;
Your pipe alight—your book upon your knee,
Oh! tell me, will you sometimes think of me.
"Alone" I said, but then per chance not so,
Mayhap within the curve of my chair low,
One fairer far will sit, and smile most sweet,
With you (a slave adoring) at her feet.
When winter winds go howling o'er the lake,
And logs are burning brightly in the grate
Will you sit then and plan as now we do
Of Daffodils, red Roses, Larkspur blue,
And when fair Spring is come and snow is gone
If you dig and plant and sing your song,
My heart, which loved you much in my short life,
Will know that you are well pleased with your wife.
My troubled spirit then will surely rest
In knowing well whatever is, is best.

Falls and Bisons Battle to a Scoreless Draw

TEAMS PLAY GOOD HOCKEY

Windsor Bulldogs Outplay the Hamilton Squad To Blank Them 5-0.

GOALIES GOOD.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Niagara Falls and Buffalo battled to a scoreless tie in a Canpro fixture here last night. A crowd of 2,000 fans witnessed the tilt, which was no more exciting or thrilling than the score, or rather the lack of it, would indicate. Both teams played strong defensive hockey and the respective goalers, Farrell and Taugher, were given good protection in the matter of close-in scoring chances, although both men were equal to the call on a few likely situations. Both teams worked real hard and there were no outstanding stars.

BLANK BENGALS 5-0.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Outsmarting a Hamilton squad that came here without its influenza-stricken playing manager, Bernie Morris, the Windsor Bulldogs chewed up the Bengal tribe here last night and skated off the ice with their most decisive victory of the winter so far, 5 to 0.

Galt and Preston Teams May Have Ice For Monday

PRESTON, Dec. 22.—If the cold weather continues the O.H.A. teams of both Galt and Preston will take the ice on Monday night for their first real workout of the season. If ice is not available on the Galt Arena on Monday the intermediates, known as the "Combines," will have a workout at the Preston Arena. It is expected that the local seniors as well as the juniors will practice at the Lowther Street Arena Monday.

On Thursday night the Combines will play their first league game at Kitchener, and the same evening at the Preston Arena the South Waterloo Rural Hockey League will open its schedule with three games. Friday night the Guelph juniors will oppose the Preston kids in the first junior O.H.A. game of group No. 14.

The local seniors will play their first game at home on Wednesday, January 2. St. Michael's of Toronto will be their guests.

SENATORS MEET LES CANADIENS

Break Expected in Existing Third Place Tie in N.H.L. Standings.

MAROONS IDLE.

MONTREAL, Dec 22.— A break in the existing third period tie in the international section standing of the National Hockey League will be in prospect when Ottawa Senators meet the Canadiens on Forum ice here Saturday night. The Habitants have a moral edge over the Capital's puck chasers for the berth in the standing for the locals have played fewer games than the Senators, but a win for the Canadiens to-night would give them undisputed possession of the third position in the hectic race.

The Canadiens returned yesterday from Detroit where the Cougars buried them under an avalanche of goals but they were little crest-fallen by their defeat. They came out of the game unscathed and will be at fulll strength for the tussle against their ancient rivals from Ottawa.

The Maroons are idle tonight, their next scheduled engagement being against the Leafs in Toronto on Tuesday next.

O'KELLY DRAWS WITH MALONEY

Griffiths Gets Decision Over Belanger in Ten Round Semi-final.

CLOSE BATTLES.

NEW YORK, N.Y., December 22 (Canadian Press). — Rallying desperately in the closing rounds Con O'Kelly, fresh from County Mayo, slugged his way to a draw last night with Jimmy Maloney of the Boston Maloneys, in a ten-round heavyweight battle of the Irish that drew a houseful of their countrymen to the Garden. Maloney weighed 199½, O'Kelly 193¼.

Although it was a different Maloney than the heavyweight Tom Heeney knocked out here in a round in Jim's last previous Garden appearance, the Boston giant could not discourage O'Kelly, a clever boxer, but a weak puncher. Maloney slugged the moon-faced Irish lad with everything he had in ever round, but could neither slow O'Kelly nor force him to give ground.

O'Kelly came with a rush after Maloney tired at the close of the fifth round. He rifled left hand shots into Jimmy's head and body spoiled Maloney's marksmanship and managed to stop many of the hefty shots that had threatened to puncture his midriff in the early rounds.

The decision was far from popular. It appeared to ringsiders that the Boston Irishman had at least a shade over the most recent importation from the Old Country. Maloney, however, was warned several times for low punches, and failed to catch the favor of the crowd.

Griffiths Beats Belanger.

Tuffy Griffiths, the Sioux City socker, whose debut was wrecked by James J. Braddock, has redeemed himself. He was awarded the decision over Charley Belonger, the Canadian light-heavyweight, in their ten-round semi-final. It was a hard-fought contest and close enough to cause the crowd to yelp for Belanger over the decision. Griffiths won through aggressiveness. The winner weighed 177½ to Belanger's 175½.

CHANGED ROSTERS.

READING, Pa., Dec. 22.—After two weeks of hectic trading, buying and selling of baseball players which started at the Toronto meeting and drew to a close in Chicago, at the session of the major leaguers, some drastic changes have shaken up the rosters of the eight clubs of the International loop with Manager Harry S. Hinchman, of the Reading Keystones, probably more active than most of his rival leaders who will pilot teams in the 1929 John Conway Toole circuit chase.

One glancing over the list of players of the Reading Club, two weeks ago, noticed that Hinchman's bunch of fighting "Keys" was more or less riddled as the result of the graduation of his leading stars. Pitcher Harry "Socks" Seibold, Catcher Dr. Lewis Leggett, and Outfielder John J. Moore, to the major leaguers. With a recent deal taking Pitcher Edward C. Lautenbacher to the Chicago Nationals, reduced the "Pretzeltown" squad, but the acquisition of players, new faces in the International loop, whom "Skipper" Hinchman has gathered together for the 1929 campaign, shows that the Keystone roster today numbers 21 players—eight pitchers, three catchers, six infielders and four outfielders—which shows the Reading Club nearly set for the coming season. With two or three pitchers, whom the Keystone pilot has his eye on and will be bought outright from the "big show," and another hard-hitting outfielder, who is to be included in a deal that was started at the Toronto meeting, and will likely be announced in a week or ten days, will complete the "Keys" when they assemble at Richmond, Va., in March for their spring training.

New Reading Players.

The purchase of Third Baseman John J. Wight from the Springfield Eastern League Club, for two players, Infielder Thomas J. Sewell and Outfielder Neil Dougherty, and cash, appears to baseball magnates, especially Major League scouts who have seen the youngsters, a sensation during the two years he has played in the eastern loop, as a real buy. Hinchman will use Wight as a utility infielder and pinch-hitter, and looks upon the former Brown College star, who hit .303 in 1927 after graduating from college, and batted .321 in his 151 league games, this year, as another find from the Eastern League.

For Pitcher Joseph G. Zubris, whom "Skipper" Hinchman secured from the New Haven team of the Eastern League, for Shortstop James T. Dalrymple and cash, the sale means a home-coming for the ever-popular Zubris from the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania, as it was in this city in 1925 that the New Philadelphia youngster, then a section hand on the Reading railroad, picked up by Manager Spencer A. Abbott, of the Keystones, made his debut in professional baseball. When the original Reading International franchise was sold to the Newark syndicate, headed by Charles H. Davids for $85,000 in cash, Zubris was included among the players figuring in the deal and last year was sold by Walter Johnson, manager of the Newark "Bears," to George W. Weiss, president of the New Haven Club, and as the mainstay of the 'Professors,' winning ten straight games, aided the New Haven team in winning the Eastern League pennant. As Hinchman has the same opinion as Spence Abbott, "that Joe Zubris is a Major League prospect, discounting Walter Johnson's belief that the coal-cracker is not class AA material," he has added the right-hander to the bunch of "Keys" and looks for Zubris to be among his best pitchers for next season.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

The story of the game that never was played should have a place in these annals of Peterborough hockey inasmuch as it involves a new development in amateur sporting circles.

In 1904 the Peterborough team as has already been described in a previous article was beaten for the intermediate group championship by the Belleville team.

The Bay of Quinte management in building up its team that winter had painted such alluring pictures of Belleville in the mind of one "Reddy" McMillan of Cornwall that that dashing defence man suddenly decided that he could be happy no other place. If he had gone to Belleville before the residence rule came into effect and remained there Mr. McMillan would probably have been all right. Apparently, as it was discovered when the O.H.A. investigated his movements, he merely stayed a few days in Belleville, returned to his home for some weeks and then went back to Belleville again. And when this all came out after several long and heated sessions of the O.H.A. executive the Belleville team was tossed out of the running and McMillan was suspended.

By this time Belleville had already played one game of the semi-finals with Midland. That game was thrown out and Peterborough declared winners of their group were ordered to play home and home games with Midland, the first game scheduled for Peterborough on the night of Tuesday, March 1st.

Naturally the sudden development caused excitement in Peterborough and everybody was ready for the battle. Unfortunately the biggest blizzard in years developed, the Midland team was storm-bound in Orillia and the fixture was postponed until the following night.

But it was never played.

Belleville introduced some new hockey tactics by going to the courts for assistance.

A solicitor appeared before Judge Fralick of Belleville and obtained an injunction prohibiting the Ontario Hockey Association and its officers from enforcing or carrying outs its resolutions in regard to the McMillan case.

The injunction held good until the following Monday, effectually blocking the Midland-Peterborough play off and eventually the series was finished without the Peterborough team being given a chance to participate in the series again.

It was the first appearance of Old Man Law in a championship race and the Petes had to admit that he carried quite a punch.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, I suppose the customers will be so busy Sat. picking out Christmas presents or municipal candidates that they won't have no time to read these random lines. It's a great time, this here Christmas season, and I don't intend to cut in on the enjoyment with any solemn note, but I can't help thinking, Mac, that when Sir Henry Drayton made that explanation that it is illegal not only to give but to receive a bottle of oh-be-joyful as a Christmas gift, he just naturally ruined the Yuletide for some folks I might mention. They didn't mind it being against the law for any one to donate a crock—they was willing to let George do it—but when it come to ruling that nobody could take one, well, that was much too much.

In local sports circles, Mac, they is little to get excited over this week. Our puckchasers is watchfully waiting for a chance to get going, the City League has been organized, and everything is ready but the ice for plenty of hockey. They may not be any championships picked off, but anyway they should be a bagful of excitement, and outa all the fuss we should develop some material that'll be useful for future campaigns.

Meanwhile we got to be satisfied following the pro race, and that brings out the thought that while we've all had a laugh or 2 at some of the suggestions what has been made to speed up the scoring in the pro hockey games, Mac, you gotta admit that neither the hockey magnates nor the hockey public is getting value for the jack they pay when the whole tribe of N.H.L. teams in the games over the week-end didn't score as many goals as a good amateur team a few years ago woulda piled up in 60 mins. Six teams was in action Sat. night, and the Leafs was the only team of the ½ dozen to find the nets, while Sun. night New York Americans got the only goal of the game at Chicago. They ain't the real punch to hockey unless somebody is scoring once in a while, and while the boys did a little better in the Tues. night games, the average score looks, as Mister Bert Perry puts it, like a coupla doughnuts. Most of the hockey customers, Mac, like to see the old piece of rubber sag the nets, and soon or later the pro bosses will realize that making traffic cops instead of gool-getters out of their players is killing the game. Mister Newsy Lalonde, which has forgotten more about hockey than most players nowadays will ever know, sez the best thing to increase scoring would be to do away with the rule that gives the defending side a chance to pass forward behind their own blue line, and Mister Bill Hewitt of the Star takes a running jump at Mister Lalonde's theory, telling Newsy to think it over again.

As for me, I'm with Mister Lalonde. The forward pass for the defending side in their own area has taken most of the punch outa the attack, Mac. The 1st thing they try to teach a player nowadays is to stay outa the corners and never be caught up the ice. They's few battles around the nets because none of the attackers is going to take a chance on being caught flatfooted by a long pass out to the blue line, and so they's very little of that three-man stuff right into the gool mouth that used to be a feature of hockey a few years ago. The forward pass for the defenders was put in to speed up the game, but it speeds it up at the wrong end. They's no use getting a rush away fast if the attachers is satisfied with a hasty shot and tear back to their wno blue line again. If you take that long forward pass away from the defence, Mac, the attackers will open up and there'll be more action round the nets, which is exactly what the cash customers like to see. They ain't going to tear in, however, so long as the defenders can get a 60-ft. jump on them.

Well, I don't make the rules, so they ain't much use writing a book on this subject, so we'll drop it with the remark that Mister Lalonde and us is both right. Satisfies me.

And now they ain't nothing left but to say to all the customers that A. Wise Cracker wishes them a most happy Christmas, with full stockings, full pantries, and for them that want it that way, full cellars.

Hoping you are the same.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

DEMPSEY READY TO RETURN TO RING, SAYS TEX RICKARD

Promoter Replies To Boston Heavyweight, Jack Sharkey's Bitter Arraignment.

PLAN ONE BOUT IN 1929.

Rickard Declares Anyone Who Can Beat Ex-Champ Will Gain Public's Confidence.

Boston Jack Sharkey's bitter arraignment of George Tex Rickard as the manager of most of the heavyweight division, came to an abrupt and senastional halt yesterday. The accused promoter changed the subject with an adroitness that left the angry Lithuanian in a most ridiculous position.

Mr. Rickard stepped to one side and revealed the large menacing figure of William Harrison Dempsey. It developed that he has been saving the former heavy weight champion for some such emergency as this.

Dempsey will come back, he said. He will fight once in 1929, and his opponent will be the winner of the 1929 elimination tournament. Nothing remains to be settled except the date. Terms and conditions have been agreed upon, and the dotted line formality will be staged in Florida next month. Mr. and Mrs. Dempsey will be house guests of the Rickards at Miami for the month of January.

Texas Triumphant.

"So that Sharkey isn't going to get anywhere fighting me," said Texas triumphantly. "He's wasting his time. He'll have to do all his talking to Dempsey eventually, so he may as well start now."

Once Rickard is wound up on Dempsey, there is no stopping him. He can discuss Dempsey by the hour. He rattled on:

"The return of Dempsey will cause the public to accept the appointment of a successor to Tunnny as a genuine champion. Any man who can whip Dempsey will earn the confidence of the public.

"After all, Jack had Gene on the floor longer than the law allows and he knocked out Sharkey. He's still the foremost fighter of the division.

"Dempsey will only fight once, but there can be no criticism on that score. He is the former champion, and he is entitled to more consideration than the contenders. His drawing power proves that.

Tex Turns Down Jack.

"Sharkey accuses me of managing Paulino, Hansen and Dempsey among others. If it will do Sharkey any good I'm willing to tell him that I had a chance to manage Dempsey once.Jack came to me after he had knocked out Sharkey a year ago last July, and proposed that I look after his business. I told him then, as I have told a number of others, that I couldn't be a promoter and a manager too.

"I'm willing to help you any way I can, Jack,' I told him. 'You can always come to me with your troubles, and you know you'll get honest advice. But that's as far as I can go.'

"As for me managing Paulino,Sharkey is welcome to look over the records of Madison Square Garden. Paulino has fought once for me in the past year. Instead of accepting one match we offered him last summer he went over to Brooklyn and fought for Humbert Fugazy."

BEVERIDGE MAY PLAY FOR LONDON PRO TEAM

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 21.—Bill Beveridge, sub goaler of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, has been given permission to play with the London Panthers, Manager Bert Corbeau announced last night. Beveridge, who formerly played amateur hockey in Ottawa, was sought by the London manager prior to the opening of the season, but had previously accepted terms with the Black Hawks

CHAMP DEFEATS NEW YORK RIVAL

Gray-Thatched Shot Marker Piles Up Lead in First Tournament.

POORLY PLAYED MATCHES.

CHICAGO, Ills., Dec. 22 (Canadian Press).—Frank Taberski, the "Gray Fox of Schenectady," is the first recognized world pocket billiard champion.

The title and the bag of gold that goes with it fell to the gray thatched shot marker early to-day when he upset his arch rival, Ralph Greenleaf of New York, the national champion in two bitterly-fought matches of 125 points each, the finale of the first international tournament at Orchestra Hall.

The scores were 125 to 97, and 125 to 41. Both went 23 innings, and were poorly played.

HARVARD SEXTET DEFEATS McGILL

Montreal Collegians Play Good Hockey To Defeat Crimson 3-2.

BOSTON, Mass., December 22. — Canadian Press. — A hard fighting Harvard hockey sextet defeated McGill 3 to 2 here last night in an overtime game on the Boston garden rink. The Montreal Collegians held the Crimson scoreless until late in the third period when Giddens and Garrison tied the score. Tudor caged Harvard's winning tally in the overtime; McTeer and Ward shot the McGill goals.

BOBCAYGEON WILL HAVE JUNIOR TEAM

Northern Village May Also Enter Intermedate Team in O.H.A.

It is now reported that Bobcaygeon has no intention of withdrawing from the Junior O.H.A. and that not only will 'Caygeon have a Junior entry, but is also seriously considering the question of an Intermediate team in the O.H.A.

Permission has been granted by W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A., for Bobcaygeon to enter a team in the Intermediate, and he has promised to rearrange the schedule of one of th groups to accommodate the Northerners.

Bobcaygeon is said to have a raft of hockey players; in fact, a surplus of material; and unless two teams are put on the ice a large number of excellent hockey players will have no team on which to play.

Gordon N. Moore is the manager of the Bobcaygeon teams, and he is sending out a call to all hockey players in the neighborhood of the village to come in and try out.

VIEWS ON SPORT

The Brock Street Rink is being flooded and with continued cold weather hockey practises will likely start Monday.

Bobcaygeon has withdrawn from the Junior O.H.A., and as a result, the Peterborough St. John's team has been given a bye and Lindsay will be grouped with the Peterborough Juniors and Lakeshore teams.

* * * * * *

There will be a slight departure from the regular blue and white pattern of the Peterborough teams' sweaters this year. The sweater will combine the old colors of blue and white, but there will be two shades of blue, light and navy. It is expected that it will make a snappy and altogether distinctive sweater for the teams. Port Hope is also using blue and white this year.

There was another battle of the Irish last night when Jim Maloney fought Con O'Kelly at the Madison Square Gardens. As in most cases where Irish meets Irish it ended in a draw after a hard bout with stiff boxing.

Phil Edwards, crack half miler on the Canadian Olympic team, is the outstanding runner for his distance in the United States and it is likely that he will race Paavo Nurmi, the Finnish wonder, at the mile distance in a series of indoor track races. Nurmi, although getting old, does not want to relinquish his records.

Percy Williams has declared that he will quite college after the Christmas vacation and this coupled with the word that he will come east to race on indoor tracks during the big Internationa meet in February, has been the foundation of the rumor that the Olympic flash would turn professional. Williams will not turn pro., is the reply of all those who know him. Certainly Williams is a wonderful runner, the greatest sprinter Canada has ever had, be he would be making a big mistake in becoming a professional. He hasn't that rugged physique that is required by a professional athlete, who must perform day after day for the crowd's delight.

AT THE REGENT,

LAST SHOWING TO-NIGHT OF TIM McCOY'S WESTERN DARMA, "SPOILERS OF THE WEST."

"SHARP SHOOTERS" IS NEW AND GRIPPING FOX FILM OF ROMANTIC ADVENTURE.

Filled with an adventure and romance, Fox Films "Sharp Shooters," with George O'Brien and Lois Moran, comes to the Regent Theatre starting Monday for a three days' run.

It is a story of gripping action, pathos and comedy of a typical gob making the port of Morocco and there leaving a heart-broken little French girl, who is desperately in love with the handsome American

This girl, never thinking that it was the glamour of the foreign port, the sky, the sea and the spirit of days off ship, follows her sailor to New York.

There she becomes an employe in a tough dance hall under one of the most notorious bootleg kings in the city, still vainly seeking the man she had met in Morocco.

When she finally meets him he is completely nonplussed at the thought of the girl following him across the water, but there his buddies force him into marriage after a series of exciting and comical adventures

In a smashing climax, when he discovers that the bootlegger is in love with his wife, the realization of his love for her comes to him. With a band of gobs he cleans up the joint and receives ample reward in regaining the girl's love and a further reward from the government as recompense for the capture of the desperate law-breaker.

Included in the splendid cast are: Gwen Lee, Noah Young, Nancy Carroll, Tom Dugan, William Demarest and Joseph Swickard. J. G. Blystone directed.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"The Street Angel" With the Stars of "7th Heaven" Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, and which is one of the Year's Greatest If Not the Greatest Pictures, Will Be the Big Holiday Feature at the Capitol, Commencing Monday — 3 Shows Christmas Day, 2.30, 7.00, 9.00.

Manager Stewart of the Capitol certainly picked a wonderful attraction for Christmas when he chose "The Street Angel," the companion picture to "7th Heaven" which received the gold medal for being the best picture in 1927. The same wonderful stars, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, who won fame in "7th Heaven" again carry off the laurels in this holiday offering. "The Street Angel" opens Monday matinee. There will be three performances on Christmas day, at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.00. The Capitol orchestra will be in attendance at all performances.

The story is laid against the colorful background of Naples and the beautiful, soft-toned photographic treatment of the many picturesque scenes is a conspicuous contribution to the art of the motion picture.

Miss Gaynor, as a little waif of the Neapolitan waterfront, and Farrell as a vagabond artist who meets and falls in love with her, handle their roles with superb skill, and their many love scenes together held the audience enraptured.

It recounts the story of Angelina's desperate attempt to raise funds for her dying mother by taking to the streets, for which she is arrested and sentenced to prison She escapes from the police and joins a small, travelling circus in which she becomes a ballet performer. Here she meets Gino, the wandering painter, but their romance is shattered by the police who track her down and take her away to prison. However, they are finally re-united and made happy again.

"Street Angel" is a picture that ranks with the best of all time.

An "Our Gang" comedy, "The Spanking Age" will also appear on the holiday program.

The Old Waits Carol.

(A 15th Century Carol, contributed by M. B. Chenhall.)

1. The moon shines bright and the stars give a light, a little before it is day.
   The Lord our God, He calleth us, and bids us awake and pray.
2. Awake, awake good people all, awake and you shall hear,
   The Lord our God died on the cross, for us he loved so dear.
3. The fields were green as green could be, when from His glorious seat,
   Our blessed Father watered us, with His heavenly dew so sweet.
4. And for the saving of our souls, Christ died upon the cross,
   We ne'er shall do for Jesus Christ, as He hath done for us.
5. The life of man is but a span, and cut down in its flow'r,
   We're here to-day, to-morrow gone, the creatures of an hour.
6. To-day you may be alive and well, worth many a thousand pound,
   To-morrow dead and cold as clay, your corpse laid underground.
7. With one turf at thy head, O man, and another at thy feet,
   Thy good deeds and thy bad, O man, will all together meet.
8. My song is done, I must be gone, I can stay no longer here;
   God bless you all, both great and small,
   And send you a joyful New eYar.

COUNCILLOR SHOT BY UNKNOWN MAN

Assassin Makes Attempt To Take Life of Monsieur Fachot.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press)—M. Fachot, Councillor of the Court of Appeals and one time States Attorney was shot and probably fatally wounded by an unidentified man yesterday.

Fachot, who prosecuted the case against several Alsatians last year, was encountered by a young man in front of his residence. The man asked him if he was the councillor and when Fachot desponded in the affirmative, his questioner drew a revolver and shot him three times at close range. The man then escaped.

The motive of the crime was not known. A semi-official communique intimated that the assailant was believed to be a foreigner.

Built on the confidence of its subscribers, the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal, stands supreme today among farm papers, while its Magazine Section is easily at the head of the list.

DICKENS' CHRISTMAS CAROL

The real spirit of Christmas and giving was emphasised more than ever last evening when Dicken's Christmas Carol was presented in Murray Street Sunday School. The audience was carried back many years to find Scrooge in his counting-house busily engaged in counting his wealth. Everywhere during the day, he encountered people with a Merry Christmas wish on their lips which makes him even more bitter toward the outer world.

The son of his only and much-loved sister, Fanny, enters with an outburst of Christmas wishes, only to be roughly treated. He has no sooner departed than two gentlemen call thinking they might obtain a slight contribution from Scrooge for the poor and destitute at the Christmas season. Scrooge thinks they might go to the prisons or workhouses, which he helps to keep open. He is told that many of them would rather die than go to the workhouses or prisons, to which Scrooge replies, "If they would rather die, they had better do so," not thinking that these very words would be brought back to him in the course of a day or so. Very grudgingly too, he consented to let his clerk, Bob Cratchit, have all of Christmas Day off.

Upon returning to his home that evening, Scrooge cannot help thinking of his old pal and partner, Jacob Marley, who has been dead almost seven years. His face haunts him everywhere, even in the knocker on the door he encounters his face. While he is thus thinking of his old pal, a ghost enters who says that in life he was hisp artner, Jacob Marley. He tells of his great suffering because of the life he led while living, and warns Scrooge of the fate he will encounter if he still goes on in the same way. Then to make matters even worse, he explains to Scrooge the visits of three Spirits, which would arrive on the three following nights. The first, Christmas Past would arrive at the stroke of one o'clock on the following night, the Spirit of Christmas Present at the same hour on the second night, and the Spirit of Christmas future at the last stroke of twelve on the third night.

Promptly at the hour Scrooge is awakened to find the Spirit of Christmas Past before him, and he is taken back to his boyhood days, when all the friends of those days were brought back to him. As he names them from memory they pass before him, all joyously proclaiming the Christmas season.

He sees himself all alone seated in the school, and jumps to see what he is reading. As he comes to all the old tales of Valentine, Robin Crusoe, and Friday, the characters pass before him making it even more vivid to his imagination. Then he is left alone, well Scrooge remembers his schooldays, especially the Christmas which he expects to spend at the school when all the other boys have packed and gone. Then comes Fanny with a joyous greeting and assures him that he is going home for Christmas and to stay.

Bob. Cratchit's Home

Christmas Present presents a joyous and Christmasy appearance and with a wave of her wand the fairy brings into the scene the home of Bob. Cratchit, on Christmas day. All the family including Tiny Tim enjoy Christmas dinner. This is almost too much for Scrooge and he asks the Spirit of Tiny Tim will live. "I see a vacant place in the chimney-corner and a crutch without an owner, carefully preserved. If these shadows remain unaltered by the future, the child will die," the Spirit made answer, and bringing back to him the words he himself had said, "If he be like to die, had he not better do so?"

In agony he watches the family drink to his health. The fairies quickly change the stage to the home of Scrooge's nephew where he and his wife partake of their Christmas meal, and at the same time discuss Scrooge and drink to his health, and for a Merry Christmas.

The Spirit of Christmas Yet to come presents an entirely different appearance, attired in a robe of black as the future of Scrooge's Christmases need only be as he makes them. The family of Tiny Tim is again brought before him, picturing the scene as if Tiny Tim had died. How desolate they had become over the loss of a loved one deeply affects Scrooge and he resolves to help Tiny Tim. Again the scene is changed and fairies place a gravestone before him, and Scrooge begs the Spirit that he may be spared that he might rectify his errors. He promises to honor Christmas in his heart and keep it all the year.

The third act finds Scrooge kneeling just where the Spirit left him, where he begged for forgiveness. He rises to find that he is not dead, that he is still alive. Running to the window, he hails the newsboy inquiring what day it is, delighted to find that Christmas Day is still before him—that he has not yet missed the happiness of giving. He sends the boy off rejoicing to bring back the finest turkey which is to be found in the butcher shop and quite to the boy's surprise pays him for it. Again he hails from the street the two gentlemen who had called on him canvassing for the Christmas season, and gives them a cheque for five hundred dollars.

The day following Christmas finds him once again in his office, and nine o'clock arrives and Bob Cratchit has not yet arrived. When he does, Schooge gruffly asked for an explanation, and after hearing the reply, tells him he cannot stand it any longer, and therefore—he will raise his salary. With quite a shock Bob. receives Scrooge's joyous Christmas greetings and wonders what has made the change. Just before the closing of the scene, Scrooge assures him that if money can make Tiny Tim well, he will be so.

A. J. Madill, superintendent of the school was chairman for the evening and was assisted by W. G. Shiner in the giving of the prizes and diplomas. A quaint Christmas song was given by the members of the primary department, and the Pastor's Choir also sang. Miss Constance Lewis acted as accompanist. Little Virginia Madill in her usual pleasing manner gave a Christmas reading.

The following received prizes for the completion of the Memory Work: Part 1, Hilda Babbs, Elva Barringer, Geraldine Chapman, Gwynneth Hurst, Patricia Madill, Delia Smedmore, Florence Snowden. Part 2, Dorothy Boorman, Marion Harvey, Donald Shiner, Isabel Wray, Morris Wearing. Part 6, Jean Barringer.

The new member's contest resulted in Kathleen Foster receiving first prize, Ethel Smedmore second, and Jack Hudgins third.

Prizes were also given for those who had attended every Sunday during the past year. Candies and nuts were distributed to the children at the close by Santa Claus.

The cast of the characters of the play is as follows: Scrooge, John Pritchard; Nephew, Stanley Peryer; gentlemen, Gordon Wray and Jim Ellis; Fanny, Adrienne Matthews; the Cratchit family, Alice Johnson, Mrs. Cratchit; George McNabb, Bob; Jack Wray, Tiny Tim; Dorothy Irons, Martha; Margaret Blade, Belinda; and Frank Wert, another son; nephew's wife, Mildred Irons; Marley's ghost, Sidney Drury; Spirits, Trucie Pearson and Helen Barrie; Fairies, Patricia Madill, Jean Barringer, Elsie Lemon. Pantomine, Borden Herron, Russel Curtis, Norman Wilson, Billie Ellis, Morris Wearing and Jack Hutchins.

Mrs. L. J. Pettit and Walter Fitzgerald had charge of the Christmas Carol and other entertainment.

Canadian Invented Telegraphic Printer

The Creed telegraphic printer, which has been bringing news direct to The Examiner Office since last Friday morning, is the invention of a Canadian. Mr. Creed was born in Nova Scotia and worked there as telegraph operator for some years. Then, with the great idea for this wonderful instrument, he went to England.

The machines are designed and built in Croydon, England, and shipped to Canada complete. From first to last, the installation is an Empire product.

Readers are invited to call and see the printer at work, between 7.45 a.m. and 3 p.m., excepting a period of about twenty minutes at 11.30, when the operators have lunch.

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

Swing and carolling,
Notes wondrously fair;
Bells of dear Christmas, ring,
Forth—ring on the air.

Ring of that lowly birth,
Pride of all heaven.
Ring of that need of earth,
By evil riven.

Ring of the Christ, new-born,
Babe of the humblest.
Ring out earth's fairest morn,
Sunned by the Greaetst.

Ring of that Mother's sweet
Virginate first-born.
Ring out her heart's secrete,
Told Lady Day morn.

Ring out the Glorias,
Of Angelic choir;
Ring of their "Peace on Earth"
To all who aspire.

Ring! Ring out the welcome
Christ offers to all.
Ring! Ring out! We welcome,
Babe, Mother, and stall.

SEE CANADA FIRST.

The twin coastal cities, Vancouver and Victoria, at this time of the year appeal with endless charm to the holidaymakers, wanderers, and tired business men and women, for the weather is ideal and the foliage in the gardens and parks of wondrous color. Not a day passes, too but sees the twelve golf courses gay with happy and enthusiastic players while riding in the early mornings and afternoons is particularly favored. There are splendid motor highways on Vancouver Island, and innumerable ones running into Vancouver City from all directions. The winter season's attractions include theatres and concerts of the highest calibre, while the Hotel Vancouver at Vancouver and the world-renowned Empress at Victoria are the centres of the social and commercial activities of the two cities and districts. During the winter the Canadian Pacific Railway operates the only through train to Vancouver from Toronto. The "Vancouver Express" leaves the Union Station every night at 9.00 and reaches the coast four days later. ROYAL FAMILY TO BE UNITED FOR CHRISTMAS

Duke of Gloucester Arrives At Beside of King From Hunting Trip in Africa.

CONDITION IMPROVES.

Celebrations Will Be Subdued On Account of His Majesty's Illness.

LONDON, Dec. 24.— King George was doing as well as could be expected to-day in the slow progress from the depths into which his grave illness had plunged him and there was a united family at Buckingham Palace for the Christmas holidays.

The last of the three sons that were in distant parts of the far flung British Empire when the King was taken gravely ill more than a month ago, returned to the palace to-day. The arrival of the Duke of Gloucester a fortnight after the Prince of Wales and a few days after his younger brother Prince George completed the family party.

The Duke, who reached Southampton from South Africa early to-day, stepped through the portals of Buckingham Palace in the middle of the forenoon shortly before his father's physicians issued this bulletin:

"The King has had a quiet night. The local condition continues to show progress. The general condition remains unchanged."

The Duke of Gloucester's arrival at the Royal residence after a quick motor trip from the coast was so unexpectedly early that the small crowd outside the Palace was unaware of his return home until some time afterward. Even the Royal household officials, who had been expecting him later in the day, were not present to receive him when he stepped in the private door at the side of the Palace. He went straight to his own apartments, where he will stay for the time being.

Later the Duke saw Queen Mary, who affectionately greeted the last of her returning sons.

Gather At Palace.

The entire family of the King will gather at Buckingham Palace for Christmas. It has been ten years since they were all together for Christmas and the same period since the festival was spent in London instead of at Sandringham. The celebration will necessarily be a subdued one as the King is still far too weak to take any part in seasonable customs and also because anxiety has not yet been wholly removed.

The children of Viscount Lascelles and his wife Princess Mary and the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York will miss their grandfather's customary active share in their games. Nothing however has been done to lessen the usual arrangements for the Christmas pleasures of the youngsters.

The cruiser Enterprise which aided the Prince of Wales in his rush to his father's beside, arrived home. The crew was given three days' extra Christmas leave in recognition of their services in carrying the Prince from Dar-Es-Salaam, East Africa, to Brindisi, Italy.

Drove His Own Car.

The Duke of Gloucester drove his own car from Southampton, a distance of more than 78 miles, in two hours and twenty minutes, despite "greasy" roads. The returning son found the atmosphere of the Palace, which was one of deep anxiety when he started his trip from South Africa, one of subdued optimism as to the outcome of His Majesty's illness.

While physicians to-day were unable to report any further definite improvement in his general condition, it was pointed out in authoritative quarters that so gradual and slight is the progress made that it is often impossible for the doctors to detect any change in the patient's condition in the interval between one bulletin and another. The cumulative effect, however, of a number of small steps forward made it possible for them to

SEVEN QUALIFY FOR ALDERMEN

Eight Are in Field For Four Vacancies On Board of Educataion

ALD. GREENE WITHDRAWS.

By nine o'clock Saturday night, the final hour in which they might qualify seven Peterborough citizens had expressed to the returning officer, S. R. Armstrong, their intentions of entering the aldermanic race, whose goal will be membership in the City Council of 1929. In addition, eight nominees had qualified to run for membership on the Board of Education. The candidates whose names will go before the voting public on New Year's Day are:

For Council.

Stanley A. Lowe, Merchant; Daniel J. Holland, Miller; John A. McNabb, Merchant; Frederick T. Tuggey, Contractor; Nagle E. Phelan, Insurance Manager; Malcolm McIntyre, Contractor; H. G. Huffman, Contractor.

For Board of Education.

James Dutton, I. P. McNabb, Dr. A. Moir, Dr. J. A. Morgan, E. F. Reid, C. H. Rogers, J. F. Strickland, W. R. Turner, Jr.

Almost An Acclamation.

Up to 5.30 p.m., an half hour before closing time, there was every indication that an acclamation would Place the five old aldermen in harness for another year, for up to that time, the 1928 aldermen, Lowe, Huffman, Greene, Phelan and McIntyre were the only men to have qualified.

But that last half hour gave an entirely different complexion to this state of affairs, for in that short space of time, J M. Greene withdrew and the qualification of Messrs. Tuggey, Holland and McNabb were received, making a contest necessary.

The immigration figures in Canada for the month of August were boosted to 25,340 by harvesters from Great Britain numbering more than 8,500.

MOTOR THIEF IS REMANDED

Former Convict Appeared in Police Court Charged With Theft.

ARRESTED IN OSHAWA.

J. Williams, alias Walter Bernard, alias John Parks, with a record that includes sentences in the Kingston Penitentiary totalling over seven years, has been brought back from Oshawa, where he had been arrested early Saturday mornings after having stolen the motor car of Victor Young, of Young's Point, from the market square in this city on Friday night. He was remanded for one week when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning. A more detailed search of his record will be made.

Chief of Police Newhall has already traced Williams' career during the past week—a decidedly hectic one. Williams left Toronto on Thursday, driving a stolen motor car with a Quebec license number 26-678. Coming by way of Newcastle, he broke into a garage at the rear of Britton's store there and stole a robe, an overcoat and a kit of Hudson-Essex tools. Arriving in Peterborough early on Friday morning, he loafed through the day. Meanwhile Victor Young arrived in the city and left his car on the market.

Identifies Overcoat.

Williams stole the car, and en route to Oshawa, again stopped at Newcastle. This time he entered Britton's store, which was open for business, and there aroused the suspicions of Mr. Britton, who on closer inspection discovered that his suspicious customer was wearing the stolen overcoat. Britton went into another room, secured a revolver, and Williams bolted. The storekeeper, not to be outdone, gave chase in another car, but lost his prospective quarry somewhere between Newcastle and Bowmanville.

The next heard of Williams, he was under arrest in Oshawa, an officer having found it necessary to fire twice before taking him into custody.

Chief Newhall, Detective Sergeant Meagher and Provincial Constable Thompson, going to Oshawa to escort Williams back to Peterborough, learned that a garage in the west end of Bowmanville, had been broken into and a large quantity of gasoline stolen. The stolen auto, driven by Williams, was found to be well supplied with a reserve supply, carried in a large milk can.

Williams at first denied all knowledge of these offences, but later admitted being guilty of the string of offences.

David Sullivan and John Joseph O'Brien, travelling the highways and byways together from Kingston, protested most vigorously that they were not guilty of vagrancy when they appeared before the Magistrate, after failing to answer satisfactorily when questioned by a police officer. Both men claimed to be looking for work.

They were assured of a good Christmas dinner in the jail, and were remanded until December 27 for trial.

The Magic of Christmas

Once more the forward march of the days has brought us Christmas—the most joyous festival of the year.

To-night in the homes of Canada, in the mansions of the wealthy, in the comfortable homes of the city workers, in the farm houses of peaceful Ontario, out on the wind-swept Prairies where new Canadians of many nationalities are finding a new home and a new happiness in a new land, there is abroad that Spirit of peace on earth, goodwill toward men that is peculiar to this most happy occasion.

The air is full of Christmas Magic—Magic that makes smiles brighter, voices kinder, that puts a new sincerity in our salutations, that makes young and old alike feel that this old world after all is a mighty good world in which to live.

Petty differences lose their seriousness; old quarrels their power to hurt; the chasms that selfishness and indifference have opened between us and old friends are bridged; the importance of getting suddenly seems small alongside the importance of giving.

In the benign influence of this Christmas spell new values are created, new standards established, the brotherhood of man all at once draws close.

There are those who say, with some truth, that the observance of Christmas has become commercialized; there are others who claim that the tendency to extravagance in the lavish giving of presents has converted the Christmas season into a period of anxiety and worry for many whose purses are unequal to the strain of keeping up with the procession.

These things may be so, but surely they fade into insignificance in the face of the transformation achieved by the Magic of this great anniversary, and surely the world is infinitely better because, for a brief spell at least, humanity sloughs off the garb of selfishness and has a thought for others.

If it could be possible indeed to store up for future use the kindliness and generosity and thoughtfulness of this season, what a wonderful change would be effected in the lives of all of us; what a wonderful world it would be if every day were Christmas!

That, perhaps, is too much to expect and we must be thankful, therefore, that there comes a time each year when momentarily, at least, man rises to a higher plane than that represented by money-grabbing in his own interest, when he pauses in his chase after wealth and position and power to recognize the need of others and the essentiality of contributing something to the happiness of those around him.

A wonderful season Christmas; the happiest, albeit strangest, of the year; a season that makes home more precious, memories of old days keener, the handshake of old friends warmer, the greetings of strangers more significant.

May the Magic of Christmas make you and yours happy to-morrow and in the days that lie ahead!

ARCHBISHOP IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang Is Taken Suddenly Ill at Canterbury.

BULLETINS ISSUED.

CANTERBURY, Eng., Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press).—The Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, newly enthroned Archbishop of Canterbury, who is suffering from internal inflammation, was described as being in less pain in a medical bulletin issued this morning. The bulletin said:

"The Archbishop's pain is less today. The inflammation, which is in the region of the liver, appears to be subsiding."

CANTERBURY, England, Dec. 24.— (Canadian Press).—The newly enthroned Archbishop of Canterbury yesterday became suddenly ill from an attack of internal inflammation. A hurried call was sent to London for Sir Hugh Rigby, the surgeon who recently operated on the King, and who is still in daily attendance at Buckingham Palace.

Churchmen and citizens here were much surprised, for, though the Primate of the Church of England had been ill for a day or two, no information had reached the public previously that he was seriously indisposed. The fact that it was found advisable to summon the surgeon of the King and to issue two bulletins from the Archbishop's Palace told them that the matter was serious.

Dr. Whitehead Reid, the regular medical attendant of the Archbishop, issued the following bulletin after he had called in Sir Hugh Rigby yesterday morning:

"The Archbishop is suffering from an attack of internal inflammation, which will make it necessary for him to remain in bed for some days."

Last night he issued another bulletin, saying "The Archbishop has passed a moderately comfortable day with some sleep. The inflammation remains the same."

The Primate was sufficiently well last Friday to attend a meeting at Buckingham Palace of the State Counsellors.

With members of the Royal family and others, he had been appointed to this body, which acts for the King during his illness.

Although the Primate had suffered slight periodic attacks of pain for some days, it was only after dinner Saturday night that he became seriously ill, and that the internal inflammation developed.

News of his illness was conveyed to Buckingham Palace yesterday by the Rev. L. J. Percival, the domestic chaplain to the King. It came as a surprise, because he had seemed quite well to those of the household who had seen him on Friday.

Birds are said to have voluntary control over the size of the pupil of the eye.

CHILDREN ARE ENTERTAINED

Rotary Club Acts Santa Claus At Regular Weekly Luncheon.

JOYOUS AFFAIR

A Santa Claus with a pronounced Scottish accent and the ability to sing Lauder songs like the famous Sir Harry himself, and the presence of the children from the Children's Shelter and from St. Vincent's Orphanage featured the Christmas luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day. The little folks were the guests of Rotarian Chris Graham and the Empress Hotel and each received several souvenirs of the occasion in a form most welcome to young hearts.

The Christmas address was given by Rotarian Rev. Father Paul Costello.

It was a joyous affair both for the Rotarians and for the young guests of honor. Santa Claus received an ovation when he appeared at the door and the applause was redoubled when he sang "I Love a Lassie" and "She's the Lass For Me". And when he wished everybody a Merry Christmas and departed, the cheers and handclapping left no doubt that the visit of the benevolent old gentlemen had been appreciated.

The children of St. Vincent's Orphanage contributed a Christmas hymn to the program and former Rotarian Dave Melton, here for the holiday, sang "Just a Song At Twilight" with chorus by the whole gathering.

Rev. Father Costello's message drew attention to the significance of the anniversary, pointing out that it was only because of the great sacrifice made by Jesus Christ that mankind could hope for eternal happiness. The lesson that he left with his hearers was that at this

PETERBOROUGH GIVES CHEER TO EVERYONE

210 Deserving Families Are Being Remembered With Christmas Gifts.

LISTS COMPLETED.

Response Has Been Most Generous One, City Has Proud Boast.

Approximately 210 deserving families, ranging from old couples to ten children, will receive Christmas cheer in this city to-day and to-morrow, and not one needy family will be missed, as the result of a splendid system of lists, compiled and cross-checked, as supplied by the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, the Salvation Army, the Canadian Legion and Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion and many private citizens and organizations who have asked to have their names left unpublished.

Through the co-operation of the City Relief Officer, A. G. Metheral, School Attendance Officer J. A. Abraham and Ensign Green of the Salvation Army, a wealth of presents in the form of toys for the little ones, fruit, nuts, wholesome food and some clothing, and $75.00 worth of milk and bread tickets (from an unnamed organization) will be distributed, these men being assisted by many firms loaning trucks and private citizens assisting with their cars. All this work is aside from the work of the various churches throughout the city.

That the response of more fortunate citizens has been a most generous one is evidenced by the large supply of foods and clothing and toys, left at various central places, including The Examiner Office and the Boy Scouts' store-room in the Grand Opera House building.

Everyone will receive Christmas cheer in Peterborough to-morrow—a proud boast for this city.

Stranger Enters.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Following an eloquent appeal for peace on earth and goodwill toward men in an address by the Rev. Dr. R. W. Knowles in the Central United Church here last night, the congregation was given the opportunity to exemplify the Christmas spirit.

A ragged stranger, who had quietly slipped into a rear pew at the opening of the service, collapsed on the floor, at the conclusion of the sermon, suffering from exhaustion as a result of hunger. Willing hands lifted him to a bench, where he was partially revived, and lay moaning, "Bread, bread, give me bread."

While several persons suggested taking the man, a war veteran, to the police station, Dr. A. H. Wilson and C. A. Thompson, both veterans of the war, took him to a restaurant, where he was given a light meal. The man stated his name was Alphonse Droulet, and said he was a native of Quebec, and told a pitiful story of several months' tramping in his own province and Ontario seeking work, until his frame collapsed under the strain of privation.

The relief committee of the local branch of the Canadian Legion arranged for his care at a local hotel until he recovers his strength. Meanwhile members of the Central United Church are providing him with clothing and footwear and with a little money to look after his immediate necessities. The Legion arranged medical aid for the man to-day and began efforts to secure work for him after Christmas. The man is a French-Canadian Protestant.

Smuggler Opens Fire On Border Customs Inspector Who Had Granted Permission To Roll a Cigarette

EL PASO, Texas, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Tom Morris, a customs inspector on the Mexican border, was dead to-day because he temporarily dropped his guard to oblige a liquor runner who asked permission to roll a cigaret before being handcuffed.

Morris and Inspector M. R. Rogers, stopped an automobile near Fabens, Texas, yesterday and after finding liquor in the car arrested the two occupants. One of the prisoners was handcuffed immediately, but the shackles were temporarily withheld from the other to grant his request for a smoke.

Instead of bringing tobacco and papers from his pocket, however, the man, who had not been searched, drew a revolver and fired four times, three of the bullets striking Morris and the other slightly wounding Rogers. Both inspectors opened fire on the prisoner, but he escaped into Mexico.

Inspector Morris died in a hospital here a few hours later. The other smuggler was placed in jail here.

Tidal Wave Sweeps Philippine Province Many Houses Collapsed During Earthquake

MANILLA, December 24 (Canadian Press). — The toll of an earthquake and tidal wave last Wednesday at Cotabato, capital of the Philippine province of that name, to-day stood at four dead, 102 injured, and property damage of about $250,000. The city of Cotabato was said to have been practically destroyed.

The quake came during the night and many houses collapsed. Fire broke out, but it soon was brought under control. The tidal wave followed, flooding the city and surrounding the area.

Although the epicenter of the quake was reported to have been in the Celebes Sea, many miles from Cotabato, it shook the provincial capital violently.

Cotabato, a seaport with a poulation of more than 4,000, was practically destroyed in 1876 by an eruption of Macaturin volcano. An earthquake followed the eruption.

There are nine towns along the Cotabato coast, but no reports of damage from the tidal wave have been received from them. Lebak, one of the coast towns, reported the quake.

The Red Cross here sent 5,000 pesos ($2,500) to Cotabato, and announced that more would be sent if needed.

Premier Announces Penny Postage Rates To all Parts of Empire

Canada's Christmas Message To His Majesty Carries Note of Strengthened Imperial Tie—Desire To Promote Better Understanding Prompts Government's Message.

DOMINION LEADS WAY IN RESTORING TWO CENT RATE, WAS ESTABLISHED DURING LAURIER REGIME

Respectful and Heartfelt Greeting Was Extended King George, Queen Mary and All Members of Empire—Feelings of Love and Devotion Expressed.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Penny postage from Canada to all parts of the British Empire will be restored on Christmas Day. A message from Premier Mackenzie King to King George bearing the Christmas greeting of Government and people of Canada to His Majesty announces the reduction in the postal rates.

The message was sent by the Prime Minister to the Governor-General, who, with Viscountess Willingdon, is spending Christmas at the Citadel, in Quebec City, with the request that it be cabled to King George. It went forward to Buckingham Palace yesterday morning.

"Never have the minds and hearts of the British peoples everywhere been drawn more closely together," said the message after stating that "we join our prayers to those of all parts of the Empire for the complete restoration of Your Majesty to health and strength."

As Enduring Expression.

"We have felt that at this Christmas season we should like on the part of Canada to give enduring expression to this oneness of feeling, and to the nearness of the relationship of our country to all other parts of Your Majesty's dominions," the message continues. "We have decided, accordingly, on Christmas Day, to restore the penny postage rate on communications from Canada to all parts of the British Empire."

Canada thus is leading the way in bringing back the two-cent postage rate within the Empire, which was discontinued when the war broke out. Premier King, in making public the message, said it was the confident hope of the Government that the lowering of the rate would encourage communication between Canada and the other countries, and thereby foster greater unity and a better understanding among the peoples who make up the British Empire. The statement, dated at Ottawa, follows:

Rejoice in King's Progress.

"At this Christmas season the members of Your Majesty's Government in Canada desire, on their own behalf and on behalf of the people of Canada, to extend respectful and heartfelt greetings to Your Majesty, to Her Majesty the Queen, and to all the members of the Royal family. We rejoice that under the providence of God the anxiety occasioned by Your Majesty's illness has been so materially lessened. We join our prayers to those from all parts of the Empire for the complete restoration of Your Majesty to health and strength.

"At no time since Your Majesty's accession to the Throne have the feelings of love and devotion on the part of the Canadian people toward Your Majesty found deeper or more universal expression than in the course of Your Majesty's illness. Never have the minds and the hearts of the British peoples everywhere been drawn more closely together. We have felt that at this Christmas season we should like, on the part of Canada, to give enduring expression to this oneness of feeling and to the nearness of the relationship of our country to all other parts of Your Majesty's dominions. We have decided, accordingly, on Christmas Day to restore the penny postage rate on communications from Canada to all parts of the British Empire.

Strengthen Many Ties.

"While this reduction in the rate of postage will be of more immediate and direct benefit to the citizens of Canada, it is our hope and belief that it may also serve to render the more enduring the many ties which unite the British Commonwealth of Nations in a common allegiance to the Crown.

"W. L. Mackenzie King,
"Prime Minister."

The present rate from Canada to other parts of the British Empire is three cents an ounce. Hon. Peter Veniot, Postmaster-General, and Hon. James A. Robb, Finance Minister, have been in conference with the Prime Minister, and have endorsed the reduction. It is these two depart-

PERMITS ARE IN BOOK FORM

Motor Licenses and Drivers' Permits Will Be Available First of Year.

FIRST NUMBER 269-401.

With the beginning of the new year, Peterborough and district motorists will be able to obtain their 1929 motor licenses, plates, or renew their driving licenses at the local office, in the Chamber of Commerce building. Already the supplies are in with the exception of the license plates, which will be shipped directly from the factory.

F. G. Stinson, having spent several hours in the Department of Public Highways at Toronto, on Tuesday last was able to give considerable information regarding the licensing, and incidentally mentioned the fact that the work of the Peterborough office during 1928 had been highly commended.

Change of System.

This year, the operators' permits are in book rather than card form, as are the motor vehicle permits which accompany the purchase of the license, and the former may be renewed at the local office on or before January 1. The first Peterborough passenger car license will be number 269-401, the first commercial, 38-001, and the first operator's permit 266-001.

Any person who has not as yet obtained his operator's permit must make application to the Toronto office having first filled out the application form supplied at the local issuer's office. The same regulations govern chauffeur's' licenses, the renewals being made here, but new applicants looking to Toronto. The fee for both the individual and the chauffeur's permit is $1.00. There has been no change made in the fees for commercial and passenger car licenses, but the markers this year are decidedly pleasing to the eye. They are made with a soft gray background and large black numerals, and already are being issued in Toronto.

Other Regulations.

All applications and fees for permits for motor buses, municipally owned fire apparatus, police patrols and ambulances and trucks having a gross weight (vehicle and carrying capacity combined in excess of eight tons, must be forwarded to the head office in Toronto, to be issued.

PLANE CRASH KILLS FOUR

Monoplane Bursts Into Flames a Few Minutes After Taking Off.

VICTIMS BURNED.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press). — Four men lost their lives while one escaped miraculously yesterday when one of the large six-passenger Fairchild cabin monoplanes used by the Interstate Air Lines, Inc., in the newly-inaugurated air mail route between Atlanta and Chicago, crashed a few minutes after it had taken off from Marr Field here. The victims were burned almost beyond recognition by flames that enveloped the machine soon after it struck the ground, but it is thought possible that one man, the pilot, was killed by the impact when the plane crashed.

For 50 years a trestle-table, covered with red baize, which was brought in for the use of the revisers of the Bible has stood in the Jerusalem Chamber of Westminster Abbey.

WARKWORTH COUPLE HOLD THEIR FIFTY-THIRD WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Baker Are Among Oldest Residents of Village.

CARRIAGE MAKER.

Both Have Always Taken a Keen Interest i n Community Life.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, December 24. — Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Baker, who are among the oldest and most prominent residents of this village, are today celebrating their fifty-third anniversary.

Mr. Baker, who is seventy-four years of age, is a native of the village of Stirling but when he was nine years old his parents moved to Norham. Three years later they took up residence in Warkworth. When their son grew up he went back to Norham, where he established a carriage factory for some years. At that time all kinds of vehicles were made by hand, when the workmanship was of high standard and only the best material was used. There are still in commission in this vicinity, sleighs, wagons and buggies that were turned out years ago from Mr. Baker's factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker, the latter being seventy years of age, and whose maiden name was Charlotte Taylor, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Taylor, Port Hope, were married in 1875 by the Rev. M. Sims, who at that time was the Methodist minister at Norham, the ceremony being performed at the residence of a relative of the bride on River Road, a short distance from Campbellford.

The young couple lived for some years at Norham, but when carriage making ceased to be a profitable business owing to the competition of the larger factories in the cities, they moved to Warkworth, which has ever since been their home. Here they have a farm of 93 acres, 30 acres of which are planted in fruit trees. Mr. Baker for some years carried on a thriving business buying eggs and from selling American coal oil to the farmers of the vicinity. Although still active Mr. Baker's farm cultivation is carried on in a small way. He is able at the present time to hold his own on the end of a cross cut saw,

MISSING MEN'S CANOE FOUND

Montreal Prospectors Are Believed To Have Lost Their Lives in Metwazu Lake.

BODIES NOT RECOVERED.

CHAPLEAU, Ont., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The finding of an overturned canoe since identified as being that in which the mising Montreal prospectors, Him Allen and D. Donivan set out from Amyot over a month ago to stake some claims in the region two townships to the south seems to point conclusively to the fact that the two men lost their lives by drowning in an attempt to cross Metwazu Lake on the first stage of their journey.

Success came to the searchers late Saturday when the canoe was discovered wedged in between two rocks not more than ten feet from the shore and about three miles from the starting point of the ill-fated expedition.

No trace of the missing men or any of their equipment has been found and it is thought that the canoe had drifted as the shoreline yielded no sign of camp fire or landing

Any attempt at dragging operations must of necessity be postponed til spring as six inches of ice covers the lakes in this region at the present time.

In the meantime Provincial Constable McDougall of White River and his Indian guides are scouring the imediate vicinity in the hope that further light will be thrown on the disappearance of the unfortunate man.

The Weather

METEOROLOGICAL OFFICE, Toronto, December 24. Canadian Press.—Pressure continues high over the Northwestern and Atlantic States with depressions moving eastward over the Hudson Bay region. The weather has been fair in almost all parts of the Dominion, somewhat colder in the Maritime Provinces, but unusually mild in the west.

Forecasts.

Lower Lakes and Georgian Bay. — Southwesterly winds, fair and mild to-day and Tuesday.

Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence. — Fresh south easterly winds; fair and mild to-day and Tuesday.

Northern Ontario.—Fresh to strong southwesterly winds; fair and mild, Tuesday, Easterly winds, mostly fair, stationary or a little lower temperature.

Superior — Strong southwesterly winds, fair and mild, Tuesday, westerly winds, fair, stationary or a little lower temperature.

Manitoba—Fresh to strong westerly winds, fair to-day and Tuesday; not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Moderate winds, fair and mild to-day and Tuesday.

The weather still continues unseasonable, and bears little resemblance to the conditions that usually prevail during the Christmas season. The first heavy snow last winter came on November 24 to the dept of 3 1-2 inches, but only remained for three days. On December 15, 4 inches fell, and from that date to the 26th there was sufficient for fair sleighing. Mild weather and heavy rain came on the three last days of the year, and took most of the snow away. The roads, however remained very icy. Considerable snow on Jan. 14 brought good sleighing again, and it continued until March 21. The first zero weather came on Dec. 24 (a year ago this morning), when we we had it 6 degrees below. On Christmas day it was 3 degrees below. This winter zero has not been reached yet. As tomorrow will be Christmas Day, I take this opportunity, as I have heretofore done, to extend the season's greetings to every reader of these weather notes which have appeared more or less regularly for many years. May each reader (without exception) have a Happy Christmas, and as much prosperity in the coming year as is good for him or her. May each one have good health, an optimistic spirit, a thankful heart and a contented mind.—W. P.

Jilted Suitor Uses Dynamite As Death Tool; Blows Three To Atoms After Love Plea Fails

ANEROID, Sask., Dec. 21.—Maddened by jealousy because Beatrice Baragar, 26 years old, had refused his offer of marriage, William Laqua, 30-year-old well-digger, lit a stick of dynamite with his cigarette while he clutched the girl in his arms, and killed himself, the girl and her mother in the explosion which followed.

A coroner's jury, after listening to the story of Mrs. Adelaine Wray, cousin of the dead girl and only witness of the explosion, returned a verdit of premeditated murder and suicide.

PLEADS WITH GIRL

The triple tragedy occurred at a combined cafe and rooming house operated by Mrs. Baragar, where Laqua had formerly roomed. For a time Beatrice had accepted him as a sweetheart, but later she transferred her attentions to a rival suitor, and, after a quarrel, forbade Laqua to enter the home again.

DISCRIMINATION IS THE BETTER PART OF TRAVEL

To travel in a distinguished manner across the continent is the wish always of discriminating travellers, and if your journey ends in California or along the Pacific Coast, ask nearest agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway to map out your itinerary so that you will receive the full quota of scenery. A winter in California will give you an album of memories. Pleasant memories of a fascianting country possessing a virtual infinity of charm. Grand Mountains stretching into the sea, crescent shaped beaches that are always gold except when the moon turns them silver, and such fruit that only California knows. The daily play consists of golf, polo, tennis, yachting, fishing, even flying. Dancing is for the moonlight nights. The more serious sports include hunting, but you can also be as lazy as you wish.

Potential Field For Gas Sales

In our article of December 21st we mentioned the excess capacity of the gas plant.

The per capita consumption of gas for a number of Ontario municipal gas plants is as follows: These figures are obtained from "Municipal Statistics" for 1927, published by the Ontario Government.

GAS SOLD PER YEAR

Municipality	Per Consumer. Cubic feet.	Per Capita. Cubic feet.
Belleville	17,000	1,700
Brockville	16,700	3,300
Guelph	24,100	5,300
Kingston	19,000	3,270
Kitchener	28,000	5,000
Owen Sound	18,400	2,000
St. Thomas	17,200	3,800
Waterloo	16,400	2,200
Average	19,600	3,321

The consumption in Peterborough in the same period is as follows: 17,200 cubic feet per consumer; 2,250cubic feet per capita.

The above figures show that the Peterborough gas consumption is somewhat below the average and there is, therefore, a good potential market in Peterborough for the sale of gas.

In this connection, it is interesting to quote Mr. Frederick Burnett, a well-known gas engineer, in a report made to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission on the gas plant in Oshawa in 1927:

> "During my long experience in the gas business I have many times acted for cities negotiating for the purchase of the local gas utility, and it has been very interesting to see how business improved once the municipality took over the plant. Local loyalty to municipally-owned utilities is very strong in Ontario, and I could give you many instances where a struggling gas business under private ownership soon became a very profitable venture when owned and operated by the municipality. There have been a few failures, but they may be blamed upon lack of judgment in not engaging competent superintendents or the services of a consulting engineer familiar with such situations."

CHURCH SCHOOL HOLDS CONCERT

St. Andrew's Children Present Their Annual Christmas Entertainment.

INTERESTING PROGRAM.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—St. Andrew's church Sunday school rooms were well filled by an appreciative audience Friday night when the Sunday school children presented their annual Christmas concert and, in return for their good behaviour, received a visit from their old friend, Santa Claus. The program contained several very interesting numbers and throughout its entirety, showed the results of careful training by the teachers and diligent application by the children themselves. In keeping with the spirit of the season, the first two numbers on the program were two carols, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," and "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear." The last number before Santa Claus arrived was "Christmas Round the World" by the girls of Mrs. McKelvie's class, in the costumes of the various countries. The one-act comedy, "Not Quite Such a Goose," which was the second last number, was the high light of the program, being well staged and equally well acted by the five members of the cast. There were numerous recitation throughout the evening. The remainder of the program consisted of "Merry Christmas," an acrostic by Mrs. Rollo's girls class; a chorus by Mrs. Connor's and Mrs. MacMillan's classes followed by recitations by primary scholars, Dutch Girls' drill directed by Mrs. Rollo; Wooden Soldiers' drill, and song by Miss E. McKelvie's class; instrumental number, mounth organ and guitar, Frank Rowe and Manson LeBrash; dialogue, "Choice of the Christmas Doll; duet, "Pierrot and Columbine; pantomime, "O Little Town of Bethlehem"; Tableaux, "Christmas Eve and Christmas Morning."

Owing to illness, the Rev. W. J. Mark was unable to be present. The duties of chairman were discharged by John F. McGregor, superintendent of the Sunday school. At the conclusion of the entertainment, Mr. McGregor expressed the thanks of the Sunday school to each and all who had assisted in making the program and entertainment such a success.

W.C.T.U. HOLDS REGULAR MEETING

Mrs. J. Forbes Allan Delivers Address On "Beginnings and Endings."

The monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held on Wednesday with Mrs. George Patterson, the president, in the chair. Mrs. Plunkett had charge of the clip sheet which was read by several members. Visitors were apointed to call upon members who were ill and those who had been interested:—Mrs. Throop and Mrs. Moore for East City; Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. G. A. Gillespie for West End; Mrs. Sarah Armstrong and Mrs. E. Manning for North End; Mrs. G. Patterson and Mrs. J. Plunkett for South End. Mrs. E. Wand sang a Christmas solo, "The Star of Bethlehem," with Mrs. Kitney, accompanist which was very pleasing. The feature of the meeting was an address by Mrs. J. F. Allen, "Beginnings and Endings", based on Deuteronomy, 3rd chapter beginning at verse 24. She dwelt on the beauty of the wonderful book of Deuteronomy in which God gave to Moses the law, to give to the people of Israel. Its outlook is human and charitable. "It is concerned with the wives of widows, slaves, laborers, and even the animals. Then we come to the cry of Moses, heartbroken because he cannot lead the children of Israel into the Promised Land. But a new kind of life needs a new kind of leadership, so he must prepare Joshua for the task". Tracing the life of Moses, she said "If the movies would only take up stories like that of Moses what thrilling pictures they would make(free from the objectionable features of many of our films." She traced the growth of religion and the influence of the Bible until to-day there is that larger Bible in much of our literature. She paid a tribute to the local paper, "The Examiner" which on every moral issue is generally found on the right side."

Mrs. Dr. Morrison, on behalf of the members, presented a picture of the delegates to the Provincial convention, lately held in Toronto, to Mrs. Throop, as a token of appreciation, for her valued service to the local union, of which she had been president for three years.

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press)—The domestic cash grain trade here Saturday was decidedly dull, but the undertone to the market was firm and prices showed no important change.

The trade in Spring and Winter wheat flour continued of a disappointing character but values for all grades were well maintained.

The undertone to the market for all lines of millfeed was firm but the volume of business was small. Standard grades of rolled oats were steady under a fair demand.

The inquiry for all grades of fresh and storage eggs continued good and values were unchanged.

A moderate amount of business was done in butter, and values were firmly maintained. Receipts were 311 packages.

Extreme dullness again marked the cheese trade, and the undertone was easier. Receipts were 238 boxes.

Beans were stronger. Canadian grades sold at $5.25 to $5.50 per bushel.

Little business was done in potatoes and the tone of the market was easier. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 75c, Green Mountains at 80c per 90 lbs in bags, while New Brunswick Green Mountains were offering at 60c per 90 lbs in bulk.

LEGION ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

George Free Will Head Campbellford Branch For Coming Year.

NEW EXECUTIVE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 22 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — There was a good attendance at the regular meeting of the local branch of the Canadian Legion in their rooms in the Armories Thursday night, when the election of the officers for 1929 was the chief order of business. Geo. Free, first vice-president for the present year, moved up one degree and will occupy the president's chair for the next twelve months. James Waters and Ernest Armstrong will be the vice-presidents. J. R. Wilkinson, who was second vice-president this year, was also nominated for the president's office but withdrew, through courtesy to George Free, whom he deemed the proper candidate for the office. The system followed during the election was somewhat novel to the Campbellford branch. Defeated candidates for one office automatically became candidates for the next in line. This was the system followed at the Provincial Command elections, and was believed to tend toward a strong executive.

The officers who will head the local branch during the coming year are: George Free, president; James Watters, first vice-president; Ernest Armstrong, second vice-president; J. D. MacEachern, secretary-treasurer; Comrades D. B. (Dr.) Johnston, T. Dutton and J. M. Bygott, executive committee; auditors, MacCall and Dickson. According to the constitutional rules, the installation will take place at the first meeting after the New Year.

In the days when Sir William Mulock was Postmaster-General in the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier the penny postage throughout the Empire was agreed upon by a conference of the different countries affected. When the war came the rate was increased to four cents for the first ounce and three cents for additional ounces. This was later reduced to three cents. The rate from Great Britain to Canada is a penny and a half.

FAMILIES OF VICTIMS MAY GET $20,000.00

Montreal Council May Play Santa Claus To Friends of Theatre Fire.

MONTREAL, Quebec, December 22. Canadian Press. — The Montreal City Council is to be asked to adopt the guise of Santa Claus by voting the distribution of $20,000 among the families who suffered loss of life in the Laurier-Palace theatre holocaust.

Alderman Des Roches, chairman of the Civic Executive Committee, announced last night he would place the proposal before the council immediately so that the money will be available to the stricken families during the Christmas festival season.

The plan would mean the compensation of about $225 to the various families, many of whom are of the poorer class, for each lost i nthe theatre fire. The catastrophe, which claimed 73 victims, was rendered more poignant by the fact that those who died were nearly all children.

Wife Equally Active.

Mrs. Baker equally as active, and is able to carry out all her household duties.

Mr. Baker is a member of the local Masonic Order, and has served the Percy Township council. Although he was deputy reeve for two years and reeve for the same period, he never sat in the County Council at Cobourg. His municipal service was given back in the 90's when that body was constituted differently than it is to-day, the members being known as commissioners instead of reeves and deputies.

Mr. Baker served for years as member and chairman of the school board. He has for forty three years been church warden and for the past sixty-three years a member of the Anglican choir, still taking part in the musical services, his voice as strong and as melodious in the days of his young manhood.

Mr. Baker takes a keen interest in the news of the day from the several different newspapers which he takes, none is ever just looked through, but read from beginning to end.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker have raised a family of twelve children, ten of whom are living, all holding good positions in the various communities in which they reside. These are: Malcolm, a merchant in Hastings; T. S. Baker, in business in Campbellford; W. A. Baker, of Rochester, N. Y., Mrs. Harold Wilson of Hastings; Mrs. (Rev.) Russell McGillivray of Edmonton, Alberta, whose husband is pastor of Central United church, Edmonton, and formerly Presbyterian minister here; Mrs. J. E. T. Musgrave, Corbyville; Miss Blanche, at home; Wallace of the local telephone exchange; Mrs. George Barker, whose husband is a teacher in the Collegiate Institute at Picton, and Mrs. Blake Valleau, of Rochester. Mrs. Charles Summerby, a daughter, died four years ago last August, and Colin, a son, lost his life in the Great War.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker have twelve grandchildren, and one great grandchild.

WEDNESDAY'S MEETING.

It is to be hoped that citizens will avail themselves of the opportunity offered by the public meeting in the new Collegiate Institute assembly hall on Wednesday evening, sponsored jointly by the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce, to consider and discuss the gas purchase and Johnson Motors by-laws.

This meeting will be of an informal nature with the audience cordially invited to take part in the discussion and to ask any questions in regard to the two by-laws that may be considered pertinent.

Representatives of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario will be in attendance to put the full facts in regard to the gas plant purchase before the citizens and to answer any inquiries that may be made.

The two measures are of great importance to Peterborough, and it is desirable that the ratepayers should be in possession of all the available information before they are called upon to express their opinion of the proposals.

The joint meeting will provide an unusual chance to hear the by-laws discussed from every angle, a chance citizens who take their responsibilities as ratepayers seriously should not think of missing.

The new assembly auditorium is a roomy hall, but it should be crowded on Wednesday evening in view of the subjects to be discussed.

THANKS, SANTA'S PALS.

Wonderful has been the response to The Examiner's appeal to its readers to become Santa's Pals this Christmas.

The donations that have poured into this office during the past few days from generous citizens of Peterborough and the district have made it possible to bring Christmas joy and happiness to many homes that would otherwise have been devoid of anything suggestive of the Yuletide season.

The gifts covered the whole range of Christmas giving: food, clothing, candies, fruit, and dearest of all to the hearts of the youngsters, a most bountiful supply of toys, games, kiddie cars, rocking horses and all the varied assortment that goes to make a real Christmas for the little folks.

With the co-operation of social service organizations and able assistance from James Abraham, it has been possible to distribute these splendid donations of Santa's Pals to the best possible advantage, so that no deserving case has been overlooked and duplications have been avoided.

To the dozens of citizens who gave so generously and so sympathetically to this splendid cause, The Examiner says from the bottom of its heart, "Thank you."

We wish that you all could see what happiness your kindness has brought, but if you are not able to have that experience, you at least have contributed most effectively toward making this a real Christmas for those in need.

Thanks, Santa's Pals. May your own Christmas be the happier for your thoughtfulness for others.

THE CIVIC CANDIDATES.

The electors have a field of seven from which to select five aldermen and a list of eight aspirants for the Board of Education from which to choose four members of that body.

Four of the aldermanic nominees and seven of those named for the Board of Education do not choose to run in 1929.

Both Council and Board lose a valuable member as a result.

Ald. J. M. Greene's decision not to stand for re-election removes from the Council a hard-working and conscientious alderman, who has devoted much of his time and talent to the city's business.

There have been times when The Examiner has not always seen eye to eye with Ald. Greene, but differences of opinion as to policies have never blinded us to the fact that he has contributed valuable civic service as a member of the Council, and particularly as chairman of the Parks Committee.

"He has always scrutinized public expenditure as closely as if they were his own," is the tribute a colleague pays to Ald. Greene's constant endeavor to see that the administration of Peterborough's affairs should be business-like and free from extravagance.

At the same time he has striven to secure to the citizens full value for their taxes and to improve and beautify the city's park system and generally to make Peterborough a better place in which to live.

E. Roland Wilson, whose services as a member of the Board of Education should be gratefully remembered, has also decided to retire. The Examiner can only repeat what it said the other night, that men of his calibre are needed in public life and that his departure from the Board is to be regretted.

The field for the Council has now narrowed down to four of the present aldermen and three new candidates. Five is all to be elected. Ald. Nagle Phelan and Ald. Malcolm McIntyre are the veterans in the list in point of service, while Ald. Harry Huffman and Stan. Lowe have had a year's experience as a result of being appointed to the Council at the beginning of 1928 to fill vacancies caused by resignations. The other aspirants are Daniel Holland, who made a good run last year, and is the only East City candidate in the field; Fred Tuggey, whose name has gone before the electors on several other occasions, and J. A. McNabb, former member of the Board of Education.

In the case of the Board of Education there is a wider choice and the elector who views his responsibilities seriously is going to have difficulty, so excellent is the material available, in deciding how his ballot is to be marked. It will be necessary to choose from three members of the present Board who have done excellent service and five other citizens, all with obvious qualifications for good work in public life.

The three trustees asking for another term are Ernest F. Reid, W. R. Turner, Jr., and J. F. Strickland, while the new candidates in the field are two outstanding professional men, Dr. A. Moir and Dr. J. A. Morgan, James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Isaac McNabb, former president of the Kiwanis Club, and Claud H. Rogers, manufacturer, and former president of the Rotary Club.

PRICE OF CANADA'S GLORY.

The people of Canada have no need to be reminded of the tremendous price which the Dominion paid as a result of its participation in the Great War. This is brought to their remembrance year after year by the observances of Armistice Day, and by the evidences in every community of the blighting effects of the war. Moreover, they are forcefully reminded of the huge financial cost of the war by the heavy burden of taxation and debt which the country is called upon to bear. Canadians have accepted the burdens of the war in a spirit of heroic submission and of unshaken confidence in the future of the Dominion. They are always pleased, however, when their services and sacrifices are adequately recognized by other nations, particularly by their great neighbor, the United States of America. Under the heading, "The Price of Canada's Glory," the Detroit Free Press pays the following tribute to Canada's part in the Great War:

"The announcement from Ottawa that since last April the national debt of Canada has been reduced by nearly $100,000,000 is a reminder of the tremendous financial burden imposed on the Dominion by its participation in the World War. When Canada went into the war in 1914 its net debt was roughly $336,000,000. When it came out in 1918 this load had increased to $1,191,000,000. The peak was reached in 1923, when the net debt of the Dominion stood at $2,453,000,000. Since then it has been reduced somewhat. On September of this year it was given as $2,223,000,000.

"The annual interest charge on that sum is a heavy drain on the income of a nation of fewer than 10,000,000 people. What Canadians otherwise might be spending on economic expansion they must pay on their debt. This retards business and keeps taxes at a level that interferes with the immigration that the Dominion so badly needs. As the debt is reduced these obstacles to more rapid progress will be diminished, and to the desirability of reducing the public debt as fast as possible Canada's Ministers appear to be thoroughly alive. The 600,000 men Canada put in uniform between 1914 and 1918 established an imperishable record for Canadian arms. The men responsible for handling the financial aspect of the price Canada paid for the glory that came to it on the battlefield are establishing another record that is in its way equally creditable to the Dominion."

The people of Canada have reason, indeed, to be proud of the part which their country took in the Great War. They have not complained of the heavy sacrifices made in the loss of the flower of their manhood, and in the expenditure of vast sums of money. They were fully persuaded when they undertook the effort that the ultimate victory was worth while, and they are of this opinion still. Nevertheless, they are human enough to appreciate such splendid and generous tributes as that just published in the Detroit Free Press.—Brantford Expositor.

IMPROVING RURAL SCHOOLS.

Alberta is manifesting disquiet over its rural school situation, and it is reported that reforms will be proposed at the coming session of the Legislature. The truth is that rural educational facilities have not kept pace with those in cities and towns, and this results in a handicap which should be overcome Alberta's system of large farms, with low population within a school area, has intensified the difficulty of rendering education of the desired quality. If farmers insist on occupying 320 or 640 acres of land for one family, schools must be far apart, or else slimly attended.

A bulletin recently issued by the University of Alberta contains a review of the situation by Mr. A. E. Otterwell, registrar of the university, and former director of its extension department. Mr. Otterwell writes on "The Education Handicap of the Rural Community." The presence of so many new citizens of foreign birth complicates the problem of citizenship, which, he believes, can be best solved by public education. Though radios and libraries exist, the main task will fall on the public school, which alone is unifying, says Mr. Otterwell. "With our great distances, sparse population and poor roads, especially when aggravated by severe winter weather, the mere task of getting to school is serious."

Consolidated schools offer a remedy, but Alberta conditions make purely rural consolidation almost out of the question. Residential high schools are suggested for secondary education difficulties, with the cost of board met by the students. The Province has been at pains to provide agricultural high schools at heavy cost; why not extend that facility and make better education more general?

The suggestion is made that rural schools be grouped, so that a school superintendent or manager could see to the engagement of teachers and exercise a much closer supervision than is now possible. The cost would not be prohibitive, Mr. Otterwell says, and would be repaid amply by greater efficiency.

The Alberta movement has its significance for Ontario, where Premier Ferguson, as Minister of Education, has been urging improved rural schools for some years. His proposal for township school boards has been before the Legislature several times, and each year the bill has been discussed and then withdrawn, awaiting a more favorable public opinion. The fact remains that, while cities and towns have steadily improved their educational facilities, the rural sections, as a rule, have been almost stationary, and, owing to the section unit system which has been retained for eighty years, there is no opportunity for co-operation, and little chance for improvement. There are 891 one-roomed schools in Ontario with an attendance of ten or less, a condition which cannot make for efficiency or low cost. Alberta, Ontario and other Provinces have a condition in rural education which should be courageously met in this enlightened age.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

To all the people of the district it serves The Examiner's sincere wishes for a most happy Christmas are extended.

Give a little, love a little, try a little mirth:
Sing a little, bring a little, happiness to earth.
Pray a little, play a little, be a little glad;
Rest a little, jest a little, if the heart is sad.
Spend a little, send a little, to another's door;
Give a little, live a little, love a little more.

The Globe thinks that if municipal elections were held in November, candidates would be deprived of much of their canvassing material; they could not wish the electors a Happy Christmas.

Toronto communists have been warned by General Draper, and the latter's army reputation should be enough to convince the Reds that Toronto's Chief of Police usually means what he says.

LIFE'S MUSIC

GOD'S MINUTE.

"O Give thanks unto the Lord, call upon his name."—1 Chronicles 16:8.

Lord, our God, our heavenly Father, we come into Thy holy presence as Thy children who would begin this day in Thy name. We thank hee that Thou hast so revealed Thyself unto us, in Christ Jesus, that we know Thee indeed as our Father whose loving watch-care has been about us all our lives and in Whose keeping we have rested safely in the past night. We thank Thee for the new opportunities that are ours with this morning to which Thy grace has brought us. Make us willing to use this day to Thy glory and strong to so live maong men that by word and deed we may bear witness that we are indeed Thine own. Cause us, therefore, to know Thy presence with us, as we go about our ordinary duties this day. Keep us from sin. Should temptations beset us, grant that in the power of Thy name the victory may be ours. And if this day should bring to us trials and sorrows, help us to meet them with courage and that trust in Thee which will cause every experience that life has in store for us to draw us into closer fellowship with Thee. Be with our loved ones and with all Thy children everywhere. Cause the hearts of men to seek Thee, and reveal Thy self in the fulness of Thy love to all who reach out unto Thee. Let the day soon dawn when men shall permit Thy love to right every wrong, and when truth and justice and love shall overrule all the affairs of men. We ask it in the name of Jesus Christ, Thy son, our Saviour. Amen.

CHRISTMAS EVE.

The evergreens are greener,
Christmas Eve.
The earth is whiter, cleaner,
Christmas Eve.
The north wind may be colder,
But the heart is braver, bolder,
For the world grows young, not older,
Christmas Eve.

Yes, we all forget our sorrow
Christmas Eve.
For we all await to-morrow
Christmas Eve.
We can hear a sleighbell jingle,
And it sets us all a-tingle—
It's the coming of Kris Kringle,
Christmas Eve.

And the home is always nearer
Christmas Eve.
For the dear ones now are dearer,
Christmas Eve.
Every lamp is shining brighter,
Every foot is stepping lighter,
For the bonds of love grow tighter
Christmas Eve.

Oh, the world is so much better,
Christmas Eve.
We have broken every fetter
Christmas Eve.
And we may be six or seven,
Or life's clock may strike eleven,
But we're mighty close to heaven
Christmas Eve.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE BITE OUR TONGUE AND CHEEKS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

"Why do we bite our tongue or cheeks inadvertently?" inquires a correspondent and wants to know what might be done to stop it and what the subconscious has to do with it.

The subconscious has nothing to do with it. Biting one's tongue or cheek is rather common; of course some people do it more often than others, but the phenomenon is universal.

By the time the baby acquires teeth he has learned to manipulate his tongue and the muscles of his cheek so as to avoid the teeth. After a while these muscles learn to shift for themselves just as most people learn to avoid automobiles and trolley cars in crossing the street. And again just as sometimes we do not succeed in crossing the street safely so the tongue and cheek muscles sometimes meet with accident.

The clever dodging necessary on the part of the tongue to avoid the teeth is sometimes impaired through a lack of co-ordination in the muscles involved. When artificial teeth are acquired the cheek and tongue muscles have to readjust themselves. This takes time and may never be wholly successful.

What causes this lack of co-ordination is not clear. It may be due to a number of causes. Lack of energy and vitality in the parts affected through a local disorder might cause the accident of getting in the way of the teeth. Or the difficulty may be in the brain centers which control the impulses to these parts. With the normal person these accidents come only rarely.

If they occur too often there may be a complication of causes such as a habit of sucking in the cheeks. Sometimes paraffin plates are worn in the mouth to break this annoying habit.

Excess tissue in the cheeks may also be a cause of too frequent biting. When there is too much flesh and fat in these parts there is obviously less clearing space for the teeth and hence greater risk of collision.

Our correspondent's extreme self-consciousness and constant worry are probably the greatest contributing factors. Whenever one tries consciously to regulate or in any way interfere with a mechanical process that is automatic he is likely to cause confusion.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, enclosing stamped envelope for reply.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

XVI.—RATS IN A TRAP.

It was a clear, fine night, and the headlights of the two cars cut into the darkness like sword-blades.

Harnigan stood at the door of the big limousine, sphinx-like and unemotional.

Biddy scrambled in, followed by Dolly Benson.

George Paget lingered a moment to speak to Hugh Hubbard.

"No racing, mind! I'm not sure that I trust Marna to you."

Marna laughed.

"We'll race you!" she teased him. "I shall make Hugh get there first, you'll see!"

The big car glided away into the darkness, leaving Marna standing on the path with Hugh Hubbard.

"Well, are we ready?" he asked.

He avoided looking at her.

"Quite ready."

She got into the little coupe, and Hubbard followed.

"You'll have to show me the way," he said. "I've never been to Mrs. Blair's before, you know."

"It's quite easy to find," Marna assured him. "And it's a lovely house, Hugh."

"Is it?" His voice was abstracted. "Sure you're warm enough?" he asked.

"Quite warm, thank you." Impulsively she slipped her bare hand into his. "Feel!" she commanded.

His fingers closed over hers in a sudden electric grip quickly released, but he said nothing and they started away through the clear night.

Marna moved a little nearer to him, so that their arms touched, and she closed her eyes with a feeling of utter contentment that was almost pain. It was wonderful at last to be able to relax her strained nerves. A block in the traffic brought them to a standstill at the crossroad, and Marna spoke suddenly.

"Is it true — what you said at dinner to-night—about having booked a passage on the Karmala?"

"Quite true."

He felt her sudden convulsive movement, and, driven to the limit of endurance, he broke out:

"Why did you come with me to-night, Marna? Why did you?"

"Because I had to." Her voice was as passionate as his. "Because I can't bear it any longer, Hugh. Since you came home I've never been alone with you for a single moment. Whenever I speak to you there are always eyes staring at us — people watching us. Oh, didn't you want me to come?" she appealed desolately.

"Want you!" he laughed roughly. "What's the use of wanting? Every moment we spend together only makes things harder to bear afterwards."

The traffic block had dispersed, and as they were moving on again Marna broke out desperately:

"Why need you go so soon? Oh, don't leave me again just yet, Hugh! If you could only be somewhere near — just in England — so that I could see you sometimes——"

"Do you think that would make us any happier? Don't you think it would be all the worse to know that we could see one another sometimes?"

"Nothing could be worse than what I have suffered for these last five years—nothing!"

"It was criminal of me to come home," Hubbard said hoarsely.

Marna pressed her cheek against his coat.

"Don't say that. It's been something, anyway; it will be something to remember when—if—afterwards——"

Her voice broke, and Hubbard heard her sobbing.

They were like rats in a trap, he thought bitterly — in a nice, comfortable trap, concerning which there was no reasonable cause for complaint, except that they could not get out of it.

He spoke at last angrily.

"Don't cry, Marna—I can't bear to hear you cry! It breaks my heart."

With a great effort she checked her sobbing.

"I'm sorry. You don't know what it's been all this time — how I've felt."

"I do know."

She went on wildly:

"It's all the more horrible because we can't blame anyone. George is the best and kindest man in the world, and I would rather die than hurt him, and yet—oh, Hugh, it's like being in prison—like being left without air to breathe."

"I know."

"And it will always be the same. Nothing can ever happen that will put things right." Her dreadful sobbing began again.

They were out of the suburbs now, and in comparative quiet, and Hugh Hubbard deliberately drew the car to the side of the road and stopped the engine.

Then he turned in his seat and took Marna into his arms.

"I must—just this once," he said brokenly.

"Oh, Hugh!"

She put her arms round his neck, hiding her face against his shoulder, and then for long moments neither of them spoke; they just clung to one another and kissed, while the dark shadows of the past and the even darker shadows of the future slipped away and for a little were forgotten. There was no need for words, till at last Hubbard moved, turning her face up to his.

"We must be going on, my dear."

Going on! That was how they spent their lives, going on alone down roads which could never join together, save now and again for a few painful steps which made the rest of the way all the harder.

He tried gently to unclasp her arms from about his neck, but she resisted passionately.

"You do love me, Hugh—you do love me?"

"I love you, and only you," Hubbard said. "There will never be any other woman in my life."

He could feel her eyes upon him through the darkness.

"And when shall I see you again—when shall I see you again?" she asked brokenly.

Hubbard tried to laugh.

"I am not going away yet — not for several weeks."

"But when you have gone — after that, I mean!"

"We won't think about it. Something may happen—something may happen——"

There he was again, a wretched rat in a trap, going round and round, seeking in vain for a way of escape.

Marna closed her eyes.

"Nothing will ever happen," she said. "What can happen? Just nothing!"

Hubbard raised her hands to his lips, kissing them many times, but he could find no words with which to answer her. What was there to say?

"We must be going on, my dear," he said once more, and Marna answered:

"Very well. I don't care. Nothing matters."

They drove on in silence through the darkness, and when Marna spoke again it was only to direct him along the road.

"It's the next turning on the right, and then there's a white carriage gate on the left."

"Are we there so soon?"

"I thought perhaps you would be glad to be rid of me," she answered bitterly.

She heard him draw a hard breath.

"Need you be so cruel, Marna?"

She could not speak.

They were quite close to the Blairs house now. In a moment they would have to face a sea of interested, inquisitive eyes; in a moment she would have to put on the mask which for a little while had been cast aside.

Hugh slowed the car up.

"I'll get down and open the gate," he said.

"It's generally open," Marna answered. But to-night it was closed.

"I dare say the catch slipped back," she said mechanically. Hubbard got down to open it. In the strong light of the headlamps she could see every line of his figure, and the hard expression of pain on his face.

"I can't bear it!" she told herself wildly; but she knew that she must. She knew that in a moment she would have to be laughing; in a moment the Little Flapper would be clamoring round her, and George with his loving anxiety, and the Big Flapper with her loud, assertive voice.

She could not bear it!

Hubbard opened the gate and came back. He took his seat beside her, but for a moment he made no attempt to drive on.

He put one arm round her, drawing her close to him, and, bending, he kissed her lips.

Then he spoke; his voice was rough with emotion.

"Goodbye, my dear, and God bless you forever and ever!"

Marna cried out sharply.

"But it's not goodbye! I shall see you again before you go? Hugh, promise me that you will say goodbye to me alone before you go!"

"I can't. I couldn't bear it. It will only make it worse—more impossible."

She clung to him with shaking hands.

"No, no—promise me, Hugh! Just once more. Just one day together. George will not mind."

"I know. That's so damnable. George trusts us."

"We've done nothing to be ashamed of. We've never wronged him."

"Not even in our thoughts, Marna?"

She would not listen; she only pleaded over and over again.

"Promise me. Promise!"

In the end he gave way.

"Very well. I promise."

"And you don't hate me because I can't be as strong as you are — because I can't face things as you do?"

"Hate you? If you only understood how I love you!"

Marna caught her breath on a little sigh of contentment.

"I can go on now, Hugh," she said after a moment.

They drove up to the house in silence.

Wheat Export Reports Lower Chicago Values

CHICAGO, Ills., December 24. Canadian Press. — Persistent Bearish reports regarding big supplies of wheat to come from the Southern Hemisphere gave somewhat of a downward trend to wheat prices early to-day.

On the other hand the actual amount of wheat on ocean passage showed a decided curtailment. Opening unchanged to 1-4c lower wheat declined a little all around. Corn, oats and provisions likewise were easier, with corn starting unchanged to 1-8c off, and subsequently undergoing a slight general setback.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET

A Special Service to The Examiner.

CANADA FOUNDRIES AND FORGINGS AT LOW LEVEL Compared with Yield.

Declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 37 1-2 cents per share on the Class 'A' stock of Canada Foundries and Forgings draws attention to the relatively low price at which the stock is selling, compared with the yield. The current rate is on the basis of $1.50 per year, and with the market price at 20 the return to the purchaser is 7 1-2 per cent.

The progress being made by the company over the past year has brought it well on the road to rehabilitation after the difficult operating conditions experienced during the period of post war depression. Directors before placing the new class 'A' stock on a dividend basis carefully considered the present situation and the outlook for the future, and only acted when they felt assured it would be possible to maintain the dividend permanently.

That they have been justified in their indication would appear to be borne out by the recent favorable reports of increased activities at both the Welland forge plant and the old James Smart plant at Brockville.

The dividend just declared is payable January 15th, to shareholders of record December 31.

HALIFAX NEW SHIPPING PORT

White Star Steamship Line Opens New Schedule of Eastbound Sailings.

PORTLAND PROPERTY SOLD.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 24.—Co-incident with the inauguration, on December 10, of a new schedule of eastbound sailing from the port of Halifax, officials of the White Star line announced that their connection with Portland was at an end, and that the shipping previously done through the Maine port was in process of being transferred to Halifax. All property of the line in Portland, even the office furniture, has been sold, said Major P. A. Curry, general manager of the line in Canada, at a luncheon aboard the Baltic, which has sailed with the first cargo she had ever taken on at Halifax.

The Baltic's clearance, on December 10, marking the opening of a new schedule of White Star-Cunard sailings, under an arrangement with the Canadian National Railways, whereby weekly sailings will be carried on by both lines from Halifax to Liverpool and London, makes certain the routing through Halifax of weekly cargoes, handled by these lines, of at least a thousand tons. The arrangement has been consummated through the C.N.R., mainly through the initiative of a vice-president of the road, A. T. Weldon, of Moncton.

In connection with the inauguration of the new service, it was pointed out that the amount of shipping handled by the terminals here had risen from 6,000,000 tons in 1912 to 13,000,000 tons last year, and that with a new import and export service just beginning, the amount likely to be handled at this port this year was 16,000,000 tons.

COMPANY TO BUILD $1,000,000 THEATRE

British Firm Plans Construction of New Building at Toronto.

Toronto is to have a million-dollar theatre and office building. The site is said to be on Yonge street, north of Dundas. The theatre will be the first of a Canadian chain of British picture playhouses and will mark the first step of the British film industry gaining a foothold in Canada. The plans are yet incomplete.

Introduction of these all British theatre in the Dominion is being sponsored by the Gaumont British Film Co., of London, England. They are capitalized at $100,000,000 and will have a chain of 350 theatres throughout the British possessions, which will have completely circled the Empire when the theatre links in Toronto and Canada will have been completed.

The theatre and building will be the first of its kind on this continent, said Edward Auger, Canadian representative of the Gaumont Co., who had just left for St. John, N.B., to open up offices there. "It is to be fashioned after the big houses in London, England," Mr. Auger told The Telegram. "We shall have nothing to do with modernistic or futuristic fads in buildings, but in its place there will be a bit of real olde English in the heart of Toronto and incidentally Canada.

Serve Afternoon Tea

"Nor shall we lack the English customs. During the afternoon matinees tea will be served to all patrons by the girls of the show. At the rear of the seating house, which we hope shall be around 4,000 capacity, there will be a lobby or foyer where sweethearts or man and wife may meet, have tea, smoke and continue to watch the interior and all furnishings will be fashioned after Old English style of architecture. On top of the theatre will be an office building. The cost will be $1,000,000 or perhaps a little more. Plans are just being completed, while the deal for the site is more than half through at present."

British films have long tried to break into the Canadian market, pointed out Mr. Auger. They have met with little or no success. British pictures have been shown in the United States and Canada but have been sold through the United States and they have made the Canadians pay to see them. They obtained American rights when buying the picture.

All-British Pictures

"Gaumont Company will not only show all-British pictures in their string of theatres, but will also sell British pictures to the other theatres desirous of showing English pictures," continued Mr. Auguer. "The United States will not have any rights over Canada. They will be able to buy, too, but Canada will have it at the same time. Up until the present it has been the United States that had the choice runs and this country came first after them. Toronto is the key city to Canada, and our headquarters will remain here. I am opening offices in several other large cities throughout the Dominion with a view to spreading the chain of theatres."

SIXTY-THREE TRAPPED.

TOKYO, Jana, Dec. 24 — (Canadian Press.)—Sixty-three miners were trapped Friday by an explosion in the Harutori coal mine near Kushiro, Vezo Island. Fire followed the explosion and the fate of the miners could not be determined.

GAINS MADE AT NEW YORK

Buying Orders Distributed Over Fairly Broad List of Issues.

TRADING MODERATE.

NEW YORK, December 24. — Canadian Press. — An old fashioned Christmas market" in which prices of many active issues moved up 3 to nearly 18 points, took place on the New York Stock Exchange to-day. Buying orders were distributed over a fairly broad list of issues, but bullish activities centred principally in stocks likely to benefit by the holiday trade, or those in which special developments are reported to be pending next year. Trading was only moderately heavy in volume.

Call money renewed at 9 per cent. and appeared to be in fairly plentiful supply at that figure despite the calling of about $10,000,000 in loans. Time money rates held firm.

Placing of Anaconda Copper Company stock on a $6 annual basis, as against the former rate of $4.00, was about in line with Wall street's expectations, and was followed by the traditional "selling on the good news." Wall street heard to-day that the proposed Victor Talking Machine-Radio Corporation merger will be accompanied by a 5 to 1 split up of Radio Corporation Common and the issuance of new second preferred stock, whereupon 1 share of new Radio common, one share of new Radio second preferred, and $5 in cash will be exchanged for each share of Victor.

Wide swings again took place in the higher priced specialties. International Harvester ran up 17½ points, and Sear-Roebuck extended its gain to more than 12 points. The rise in Allis Chalmers, which soared nearly 10 points to a new high at 173, was based on reports of a rapid expansion in its new caterpillar tractor business. Otis Elevator, Goodyear Rubber, and Columbia Carbon each jumped 7½ points to new high records at 265, 124 and 127 3-8, respectively.

Motor shares were heavily bought in anticipation of record breaking business next year. Chrysler, with a gain of 5 points, was the leader. American International ran up 5 points to 145, a new high, in anticipation of a 2 for 1 stock split up. Christie Brown, R. H. Mack, National Biscuit and St. Louis South-western all recorded large gains.

Recent rumors of a merger of Columbia Graphophone with Kolster Radio were unofficially denied, and both stocks fell back. Case Threshing broke 9 points.

Stronger Tone Develops On the Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Ont., December 24. — Canadian Press. — There was a strong er tone evident among both listed and unlisted securities on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, and many good gains were registered. Noranda was up 10c at 63.00; Jackson-Manion climbed 8 points to close at 25.

McIntyre closed at 19.75, up 25; Lake Shore at 17.90, up 15; Kirkland Lake at 1.35, up 7; Hollinger Consolidated at 8.40, up 30; Hudson Bay at 19.50, up 40; Pen-Oreille at 10.00, up 40; Falconbridge at 5.00, up 10;; Teck Hughes at 8.50, up 40, and Siscoe up 3 at 89.

Abana gained 38 to 3.43, when 102,090 shares changed hands. Aconda gained 2 1-2 to 14, while Barry-Hollinger was up 11 at 30, and Bidgood 2 at 37. Clericy dropped 1 to 20, Mining Corporation 10 to 3.60; Sherritt Gordon 5 to 6.25.

Wright-Hargreaves gained 3 to 1.55; Big Missouri 2 to 69, while Mandy dropped 5 to 1.15.

172 CHILDREN ARE HONORED

Loyal Order of Moose Holds Big Christmas Entertainment and Supper.

THEATRE PARTY.

Santa Claus visted the lodge rooms of the Loyal Order of the Moose on Saturday afternoon making happy with numerous presents and a big supper to 172 of the poor children of the city.

The event was a treat to all the children. In the afternoon they were taken to the theatre and afterward conveyed to the lodge rooms were everything was in readiness for the supper and Christmas tree. Santa Claus was present with his jolly red face and white beard and every child received an armful of presents. There were 123 boys and each received a pair of woollen mitts, a knitted scarf, a game, a book, a Christmas stocking, a bag of candies, a bag of nuts, an apple and an orange. The 49 girls received the same, except, that instead of a scarf their presents included a warm pair of bloomers.

After the children's appetites had all been fully satisfied by the splendid supper given by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Santa Claus apeared with a merry jingling of bells and the children cried out with joy. The presents were then given out and old St. Nicholas required a great many assistants in the effort of giving each child all the presents that had been brought for them.

The Christmas Story

Rev. J. L. Hughes of St. George's church told the children in simple words the story of "What Christmas Means" aud he gave an altogether new and yet most reasonable interpretation of the name Santa Claus. He said that in the Scandinavian countries the favorite and most lovable child is lovingly called "claus" and applying this to Christ the people of the North called Him "Santa Claus." The speaker also explained the joy there is in giving when it makes the receiver happy, in fact the happiness is greater to the giver than to the receiver.

The Loyal Order of the Moose went to a great deal of trouble and expense in their program to insure that every child would receive useful presents and everything went off most successfully Much of the credit for the success and happiness of the event is due the committee of the Christmas Tree Fund for poor children, which consisted of A. Nokes, chairman; Albert Lasenby, who played the part of Santa Claus with a flowing white beard; A. Chapman, William Smith; Albert Curtis, Arthur Edwards, A. Long, Fred Roberts and S. Laidlaw. J. S. Poloman was the advisor to the committee and acted as chairman at the happy Christmas tree program.

The Loyal Order of the Moose are also sending the same list of presents to each child in the St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Children's Shelter.

CHILDREN ARE MADE HAPPY

Border Transit Company and Kiwanis Club Entertain Boys and Girls.

CHRISTMAS TREE.

Forty-five or more happy boys and girls from St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Children's Shelter, happy in anticipation of an unusual afternoon's entertainment, set out for a ride about the city in the big buses of the Border Transit Company on Friday afternoon. Through the kindness of the company owning the buses this ride had been provided, and through co-operation with the Kiwanis Club, the ride ended at the Paragon Tea Rooms, where members of the club, and a number of Kiwanis ladies, had provided happy entertainment. There, the boys and girls were served refreshments and from the tables were distributed gifts to all. These presents had been brought by the Kiwanians to their Friday luncheon, and so varied were they that every child received something to his liking.

During the entertainment, President J. John, of the club, welcomed the boys and girls, and wished them a Happy Christmas (which they were certainly having at that time), while J. Edgar moved the vote of thanks which was seconded by Mrs. Lynch, of St. Vincent's Orphanage. Mrs. Overend accompanied Mr. Lynch, while Mrs. Elliott superintendent of the Shelter, was also present. The ladies assisting were Mrs. J. John, Mrs. C. D. Cook, Mrs. J. J. Craig, Mrs. G. R. Scott, Mrs. W. E Taylor, Mrs. W. J. Oke, Mrs. T. Mark, Mrs. M. Bredin, Mrs. W. S. Morrell, Mrs. C. H. Huffman, Mrs. A. J. Reynolds, Mrs. J. A. Dewart, and Mrs. Vernon Morphet.

At a meeting held immediately after the Kiwanis luncheon yesterday, the club voted a cash donation to the entertainment in St. Andrew's Church this evening of the children who attended the summer camp in Jackson Park.

Christmas Tree at Shelter.

The annual Christmas tree at the Shelter was held on Friday evening and the attendance was larger than usual, showing a growing interest in the work of the society. In the absence of the president, Rev. Dr. Blagrave, Mr. Edgar acted as chairman and also represented Santa. Santa was very busy and could not attend in person, so had to have a substitute. The children enjoyed the evening and the many nice things Santa sent for them. Friday was a busy day for the children. First there was the Christmas tree at the King Edward School, where Santa remembered all of them; then the drive, followed by the entertainment by the Kiwanis Club.

The program on Friday night consisted of readings by Mrs. Connolly, the Misses Dunn, Gerrard, Clappe, Woodcock, Baker, and Curran, an instrumental by Phyllis Harris and Freda Kilcher, a solo by Clara Dainton, and a dialogue by Gladys Gerrard and Messrs. Horton, Smart, and Price. At the close of the program ice-cream and cake were served.

SEVENTY-THREE NOMINATED.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS TREE

By HENRY VAN DYKE

The Call of the Woodsman

THE day before Christmas, in the year of our Lord 722.

Broad snow-meadows glistening white along the banks of the river Moselle, pallid hill-sides blooming with mystic roses where the glow of the setting sun still lingered upon them; an arch of clearest, faintest azure bending overhead; in the centre of the aerial landscape the massive walls of the cloister of Pfalzel, gray to the east, purple to the west; silence over all—a gentle, eager, conscious stillness, diffused through the air like perfume.

In the cloister, too, there was silence at the sunset hour. All day long there had been a strange and joyful stir among the nuns. A breeze of curiosity and excitement had swept along the corridors and through every quiet cell.

The elder sisters—the provost, the deaconess, the stewardess, the portress with her huge bunch of keys jingling at her girdle—had been hurrying to and fro, busied with household cares. In the huge kitchen there was a bustle of hospitable preparation. The little bandy-legged dogs that kept the spits turning before the fires had been trotting steadily for many an hour, until their tongues hung out for want of breath. The big black pots swinging from the cranes had bubbled and gurgled and shaken and sent out puffs of appetizing steam.

St. Martha was in her element. It was a holiday. A famous visitor had come to the convent.

It was Winfried of England, whose name in the Roman tongue was Boniface, and whom men called the Apostle of Germany. A great preacher; a wonderful scholar; he had written a Latin grammar himself—think of it—and he could hardly sleep without a book under his pillow; but, more than all, a great and daring traveler, a venturesome pilgrim, a high-priest of romance.

He had left his home and his fair estate in Wessex; he would not stay in the rich monastery of Nutescelle, even though they had chosen him as the abbott; he had refused a bishopric at the court of King Karl. Nothing would content him but to go out into the wild woods and preach to the heathen.

Up and down through the forests of Hesse and Thuringia, and along the borders of Saxony, he had wandered for years, with a handful of companions, sleeping under the trees, crossing mountains and marshes, now here, now there, never satisfied with ease and comfort, always in love with hardship and danger.

What tales he had told that day!

But now the excitements of that wonderful day were over; the hour of the evening meal had come; the inmates of the cloister were assembled in the refectory.

On the dais sat the stately Abbess Addula, daughter of King Dagobert, looking a princess indeed, in her violet tunic, with the hood and cuffs of her long white robe trimmed with fur, and a snowy veil resting like a crown on her snowy hair. At her right hand was the honored guest, and at her left hand her grandson the young Prince Gregor, a big, manly boy, just returned from the high school.

"It is the turn of my grandson to read to-day," said the abbess to Winfried; "we shall see how much he has learned in the school. Read, Gregor; the place in the book is marked."

The tall lad rose from his seat and turned the pages of the manuscript. It was a copy of Jerome's version of the Scriptures in Latin, and the marked place was in the letter of St. Paul to the Ephesians—the passage where he describes the preparation of the Christian as the arming of a warrior for glorious battle. The young voice rang out clearly, rolling the sonorous words, without slip or stumbling, to the end of the chapter.

Winfried listened smiling. "My son," said he, as the reader paused, "that was bravely read. Understandest thou what thou readest?"

The boy hesitated, blushed, stammered; then he came around to Winfried's seat, bringing the book. "Take the book, my father," he cried, "and read it for me. I cannot see the meaning plain, though I love the sound of the words."

Then Winfried began to translate the parable of the soldier into the realities of life.

At every turn he knew how to flash a new light into the picture out of his own experience. He spoke of the combat with self, and of the wrestling with dark spirits in solitude. He spoke of the demons that men had worshipped for centuries in the wilderness, and whose malice they invoked against the stranger who ventured into the gloomy forest. Gods, they called them, and told strange tales of their dwelling among the impenetrable branches of the oldest trees and in the caverns of the shaggy hills; of their riding on the wind-horses and hurling spears of lightning against their foes. Gods they were not, but foul spirits of the air, rulers of the darkness. Was there not glory and honor in fighting with them, in daring their anger under the shield of faith, in putting them to flight with the sword of truth? What better adventure could a brave man ask than to go forth against them, and wrestle with them, and conquer them?

"Come, Gregor," he said, laying his brown hand on the youth's shoulder, "come, wear the forester's boots with me. This is the life to which we are called. Be strong in the Lord, a hunter of the demons, a subduer of the wilderness, a woodsman of the Lath. Come!"

The boy's eyes sparkled. He turned to his grandmother. She shook her head vigorously.

"Nay, father," she said, "draw not the lad away from my side with these wild words. I need him to help me with my labors, to cheer my old age."

"Do you need him more than the Master does?" asked Winfried; "and will you take the wood that is fit for a bow to make a distaff?"

The aged princess trembled a little. She drew Gregor close to her side, and laid her hand gently on his brown hair.

"I am not sure that he wants to leave me yet. Besides, there is no horse in the stable to give him, now, and he cannot go as befits the grandson of a king."

Gregor looked straight into her eyes.

"Grandmother," said he, "dear grandmother, if thou wilt not give me a horse to ride with this man of God, I will go with him afoot."

The Trail Through the Forest

TWO years had passed, to a day, almost to an hour, since that Christmas eve in the cloister of Pfalzel. A little company of pilgrims, less than a score of men, were creeping slowly northward through the wide forest that rolled over the hills of central Germany.

At the head of the band marched Winfried, clad in a tunic of fur, with his long black robe girt high about his waist, so that it might not hinder his stride. His hunter's boots were crusted with snow. Drops of ice sparkled like jewels along the thongs that bound his legs. There was no other ornament to his dress except the bishops cross hanging on his breast, and the broad silver clasp that fastened his cloak about his neck. He carried a strong, tall staff in his hand, fashioned at the top into the form of a cross.

Close beside him, keeping step like a familiar comrade, was the young Prince Gregor. Long marches through the wilderness had stretched his limbs and broadened his back, and made a man of him in stature as well as in spirit. His jacket and cap were of wolf-skin, and on his shoulder he carried an axe, with broad, shining blade. He was a mighty woodsman now, and could make a spray of chips fly around him as he hewed his way through the trunk of spruce-tree.

Behind these leaders followed a pair of teamsters, guiding a rude sledge, loaded with food and the equipage of the camp, and drawn by two big, shaggy horses, blowing thick clouds of steam from their frosty nostrils. Tiny icicles hung from the hairs on their lips. Their flanks were smoking. They sank above the fetlocks at every step in the soft snow.

Last of all came the rear guard, armed with bows and javelins. It was no child's play, in those days, to cross Europe afoot.

The weird woodland, sombre and illimitable, covered hill and vale, tableland and mountain-peak. There were wide moors, where the wolves hunted in packs as if the devil drove them, and tangled thickets where the lynx and the boar made their lairs. Fierce bears lurked among the rocky passes, and had not yet learned to fear the face of man. The gloomy recesses of the forest gave shelter to inhabitants who were still more cruel and dangerous than beasts of prey—outlaws and sturdy robbers and mad were-wolves and bands of wandering pillagers.

The travelers were surrounded by an ocean of trees, so vast, so full of endless billows, that it seemed to be pressing on every side to overwhelm them.

Through this sea of shadows ran a narrow stream of shining whiteness—an ancient Roman road, covered with snow. It was as if some great ship had ploughed through the green ocean long ago, and left behind it a thick, smooth wake of foam. Along this open track the travelers held their way—heavily, for the drifts were deep; warily, for the hard winter had driven many packs of wolves down from the moors.

"Father," said Gregor to the leader, "surely this day's march is done. It is time to rest, and eat, and sleep. If we press onward now, we cannot see our steps; and will not that be against the word of the psalmist David, who bids us not to put confidence in the legs of a man?"

Winfried laughed. "Nay, my son Gregor," said he, "thou hast tripped, even now, upon thy text. For David said only, 'I take no pleasure in the legs of a man.' And so say I, for I am not minded to spare thy legs or mine, until we come farther on our way, and do what must be done this night."

Winfried turned and spoke to his followers in a cheerful voice, that refreshed them like wine.

"Courage, brothers, and forward yet a little! The moon will light us presently, and the path is plain. Well know I that the journey is weary; and my own heart wearies also for the home in England, where those I love are keeping feast this Christmas eve. But we have work to do before we feast tonight. For this is the Yuletide, and the heathen people of the forest have gathered at the thunder-oak of Geismar to worship their god, Thor. Strange things will be seen there, and deeds which make the soul black. But we are sent to lighten their darkness; and we will teach our kinsmen to keep a Christmas with us such as the woodland has never known. Forward, then, and let us stiffen up our feeble knees!"

A murmur of assent came from the men. Even the horses seemed to take fresh heart. They flattened their backs to draw the heavy loads, and blew the frost from their nostrils as they pushed ahead.

After a while the road began to open out a little. There were spaces of meadow-land, fringed with alders, behind which a boisterous river ran, clashing through spears of ice.

Then the road plunged again into a dense thicket, traversed it, and climbing to the left, emerged suddenly upon a glade, round and level except at the northern side, where a swelling hillock was crowned with a huge oak-tree. It towered above the heath, a giant with contorted arms, beckoning to the host of lesser trees. "Here," cried Winfried, as his eyes flashed and his hand lifted his heavy staff, "here is the thunder-oak; and here the cross of Christ shall break the hammer of the false god Thor."

They carried the fir in joyous procession to Gundhar's house. There they kindled lights among its branches and the sweet odor of balsam filled the hall.

The Shadow of the Thunder-Oak

WITHERED leaves still clung to the branches of the oak: torn and faded banners of the departed summer. The bright crimson of autumn had long since disappeared, bleached away by the storms and the cold. But tonight these tattered remnants of glory were red again: ancient bloodstains against the dark-blue sky. For an immense fire had been kindled in front of the tree. Tongues of ruddy flame, fountains of ruby sparks, ascended through the spreading limbs and flung a fierce illumination upward and around. The pale, pure moonlight that bathed the surrounding forests was quenched and eclipsed here. Not a beam of it sifted downward through the branches of the oak. It stood like a pillar of cloud between the still light of heaven and the crackling, flashing fire of earth.

But the fire itself was invisible to Winfried and his companions. A great throng of people were gathered around it in a half-circle, their backs to the open glade, their faces towards the oak. Seen against that glowing background, it was but the silhouette of a crowd, vague, black, formless, mysterious.

The travelers paused for a moment at the edge of the thicket, and took counsel together.

"It is the assembly of the tribe," said one of the foresters, "the great night of the council. I heard of it three days ago, as we passed through one of the villages. All who swear by the old gods have been summoned. They will sacrifice a steed to the god of war, and drink blood, and eat horse-flesh to make them strong. It will be at the peril of our lives if we approach them. At least we must hide the cross, if we would escape death."

"Hide me no cross," cried Winfried, lifting his staff, "for I have come to show it, and to make these blind folk see its power. There is more to be done here tonight than the slaying of a steed, and a greater evil to be stayed than the shameful eating of meat sacrificed to idols. I have seen it in a dream. Here the cross must stand and be our rede."

At his command the sledge was left in the border of the wood, with two of the men to guard it, and the rest of the company moved forward across the open ground. They approached unnoticed, for all the multitude were looking intently towards the fire at the foot of the oak.

Then Winfried's voice rang out, "Hail, ye sons of the forest! A stranger claims the warmth of your fire in the winter night."

Swiftly, and as with a single motion, a thousand eyes were bent upon the speaker. The semi-circle opened silently in the middle; Winfried entered with his followers; it closed again behind them.

Then, as they looked round the curving ranks, they saw that the hue of the assemblage was not black, but white—dazzling, radiant, solemn. White, the robes of the women clustered together at the points of the wide crescent; white, the glittering byrnies of warriors standing in close ranks; white, the fur mantles of the aged men who held the central place in the circle; white, with the shimmer of silver ornaments and the purity of lamb's-wool, the raiment of a little group of children who stood close by the fire; white, with awe and fear, the faces of all who looked at them; and over all the flickering, dancing radiance of the flames played and glimmered like a faint, vanishing tinge of blood on snow.

The only figure untouched by the glow was the old priest, Hunrad, with his long, spectral robe, flowing hair and beard, and dead-pale face, who stood with his back to the fire and advanced slowly to meet the strangers.

"Who are you? Whence come you, and what seek you here?" His voice was heavy and toneless as a muffled bell.

"Your kinsman am I, of the German brotherhood," answered Winfried, "and from England, beyond the sea, have I come to bring you a greeting from that land, and a message from the All-Father, whose servant I am."

"Welcome, then," said Hunrad, "welcome, kinsman, and be silent; for what passes here is too high to wait, and must be done before the moon crosses the middle heaven, unless, indeed, thou hast some sign or token from the gods. Canst thou work miracles?"

The question came sharply, as if a sudden gleam of hope had flashed through the tangle of the old priest's mind. But Winfried's voice sank lower and a cloud of disappointment passed over his face as he replied: "Nay, miracles have I never wrought, though I have heard of many; but the All-Father has given no power to my hands save such as belongs to common man."

"Stand still, then, thou common man," said Hunrad, scornfully, "and behold what the gods have called us hither to do. This night is the death-night of the sun-god, Baldur the Beautiful, beloved of gods and men. This night is the hour of darkness and the power of winter, of sacrifice and mighty fear. This night the great Thor, the god of thunder and war, to whom this oak is sacred, is grieved for the death of Baldur, and angry with this people because they have forsaken his worship. Long is it since an offering has been laid upon his altar, long since the roots of his holy tree have been fed with blood. Therefore its leaves have withered before the time, and its boughs are heavy with death. Therefore the Slavs and the Wends have beaten us in battle. Therefore the harvests have failed, and the wolf-hordes have ravaged the folds, and the strength has departed from the bow, and the wood of the spear has broken, and the wild boar has slain the huntsman. Therefore the plague has fallen on our dwellings, and the dead are more than the living in all our villages.

"None of our usual sacrifices will please the god. More costly is the offering that shall cleanse your sin, more precious the crimson dew that shall send new life into this holy tree of blood. Thor claims your dearest and your noblest gift."

Hunrad moved nearer to the handful of children who stood watching the red mines in the fire and the swarms of spark-serpents darting upward. Foremost among them, and most intent on the pretty game, was a boy like a sunbeam, slender and quick, with blithe brown eyes and laughing lips. The priest's hand was laid upon his shoulder. The boy turned and looked up in his face.

"Here," said the old man, with his voice vibrating as when a thick rope is strained by a ship swinging from her moorings, "here is the chosen one, the eldest son of the Chief, the darling of the people. Hearken, Bernhard, wilt thou go to Valhalla, where the heroes dwell with the gods, to bear a message to Thor?"

The boy answered, swift and clear:

"Yes, priest, I will go if my father bids me. Is it far away? Shall I run quickly? Must I take my bow and arrows for the wolves?"

The boy's father, the Chieftain Gundhar, standing among his bearded warriors, drew his breath deep, and leaned so heavily on the handle of his spear that the wood cracked. And his wife, Irma, bending forward from the ranks of women, pushed the golden hair from her forehead with one hand. The other dragged at the silver chain about her neck until the rough links pierced her flesh, and the red drops fell unheeded on the snow of her breast.

A sigh passed through the crowd, like the murmur of the forest before the storm breaks. Yet no one spoke save Hunrad:

"Yes, my Prince, both bow and spear shalt thou have, for the way is long, and thou art a brave huntsman. But in darkness thou must journey for a little space, and with eyes blindfolded. Fearest thou?"

"Naught fear I," said the boy, "neither darkness, nor the great bear, nor the were-wolf. For I am Gundhar's son, and the defender of my folk."

Then the priest led the child in his raiment of lamb's-wool to a broad stone in front of the fire. He gave him his little bow tipped with silver, and his spear with shining head of steel. He bound the child's eyes with a white cloth, and bade him kneel beside the stone with his face to the east. Unconsciously the wide arc of spectators drew inward toward the centre, as the ends of the bow draw together when the cord is stretched. Winfried moved noiselessly until he stood close behind the priest.

The old man stooped to lift a black hammer of stone from the ground—the sacred hammer of the god Thor. Summoning all the strength of his withered arms, he swung it high in the air. It poised for an instant above the child's fair head—then turned to fall.

One keen cry shrilled out from where the women stood: "Me! Take me! not Bernhard!"

The flight of the mother towards her child was swift as the falcon's swoop. But swifter still was the hand of the deliverer.

Winfried's heavy staff thrust mightily against the hammer's handle as it fell. Sideways it glanced from the old man's grasp, and the black stone, striking on the altar's edge, split in twain. A shout of awe and joy rolled along the living circle. The branches of the oak shivered. The flames leaped higher. As the shout died away the people saw the lady Irma, with her arms clasped round her child, and above them, on the altar-stone, Winfried, his face shining like the face of an angel.

The Felling of the Tree

THE old priest crouched by the altar, silent. Conflicting counsels troubled the air. Let the sacrifice go forward; the gods must be appeased. Nay, the boy must not die; bring the chieftain's best horse and slay it in his stead; it will be enough; the holy tree loves the blood of horses. Not so, there is a better counsel yet; seize the stranger whom the gods have led hither as a victim and make his life pay the forfeit of his daring.

The withered leaves on the oak rustled and whispered overhead. The fire flared and sank again. The angry voices clashed against each other and fell like opposing waves. Then the chieftain Gundhar struck the earth with his spear and gave his decision.

"All have spoken, but none are agreed. There is no voice of the council. Keep silence now, and let the stranger speak. His words shall give us judgment, whether he is to live or to die."

Winfried lifted himself high upon the altar, drew a roll of parchment from his bosom, and began to read.

"A letter from the great Bishop of Rome, who sits on a golden throne, to the people of the forest, Hessians and Thuringians, Franks and Saxons. In nomine Domini, sanctae et individuae trinitatis, amen!"

A murmur of awe ran through the crowd. "It is the sacred tongue of the Romans: the tongue that is heard and understood by the wise men of every land. There is magic in it. Listen!"

Winfried went on to read the letter, translating it into the speech of the people.

"'We have sent unto you our Brother Boniface, and appointed him your bishop, that he may teach you the only true faith, and baptize you, and lead you back from the ways of error to the path of salvation. Hearken to him in all things like a father. Bow your hearts to his teaching. He comes not for earthly gain, but for the gain of your souls. Depart from evil works. Worship not the false gods, for they are devils. Offer no more bloody sacrifices, nor eat the flesh of horses, but do as our Brother Boniface commands you. Build a house for him that he may dwell among you, and a church where you may offer your prayers to the only living God, the Almighty King of Heaven.'"

It was a splendid message: proud, strong, peaceful, loving. The dignity of the words imposed mightily upon the hearts of the people. They were quieted, as men who have listened to a lofty strain of music.

"Tell us, then," said Gundhar, "what is the word that thou bringest to us from the Almighty. What is thy counsel for the tribes of the woodland on this night of sacrifice?"

"This is the word, and this is the counsel," answered Winfried. "Not a drop of blood shall fall tonight, save that which pity has drawn from the breast of your princess, in love for her child. Not a life shall be blotted out in the darkness tonight; but the great shadow of the tree which hides you from the light of heaven shall be swept away. For this is the birth-night of the white Christ son of the All-Father, and Savior of mankind. Fairer is He than Baldur the Beautiful, greater than Odin the Wise, kinder than Freya the Good. Since He has come to earth the bloody sacrifices must cease. The dark Thor, on whom you vainly call, is dead. Deep in the shades of Niffelheim he is lost forever. His power in the world is broken. Will you serve a helpless god? See, my brothers, you call this tree his oak. Does he dwell here? Does he protect it?"

A troubled voice of assent rose from the throng. The people stirred uneasily. Women covered their eyes. Hunrad lifted his head and muttered hoarsely, "Thor! take vengeance! Thor!"

Winfried beckoned to Gregor. "Bring the axes, thine and one for me. Now, young woodsman, show thy craft! The king-tree of the forest must fall, and swiftly, or all is lost!"

The two men took their places facing each other, one on each side of the oak. Their cloaks were flung aside, their heads bare. Carefully they felt the ground with their feet, seeking a firm grip of the earth. Firmly they grasped the axe-helves and swung the shining blades.

"Tree-god!" cried Winfried, "art thou angry? Thus we smite thee!"

"Tree-god!" answered Gregor, "art thou mighty? Thus we fight thee!"

Clang! Clang! the alternate strokes beat time upon the hard, ringing wood. The axe-heads glittered in their rhythmic flight, like fierce eagles circling about their quarry.

The broad flakes of wood flew from the deepening gashes in the sides of the oak. The huge trunk quivered. There was a shuddering in the branches. Then the great wonder of Winfried's life came to pass.

A strong, whirling wind passed over the tree-tops. It gripped the oak by its branches and tore it from its roots. Backward it fell, like a ruined tower, groaning and crashing as it split asunder in four great pieces.

Winfried let his axe drop, and bowed his head for a moment in the presence of almighty power.

Then he turned to the people. "Here is the timber," he cried, "already felled and split for your new building. On this spot shall rise a chapel to the true God and his servant St. Peter.

"And here," said he, as his eyes fell on a young fir-tree, standing straight and green, with its top pointing towards the stars, amid the divided ruins of the fallen oak, "here is the living tree, with no stain of blood upon it, that shall be the sign of your new worship. See how it points to the sky. Let us call it the tree of the Christ-child. Take it up and carry it to the chieftain's hall. You shall go no more into the shadows of the forest to keep your feasts with secret rites of shame. You shall keep them at home, with laughter and song and rites of love. The thunder-oak has fallen, and I think the day is coming when there shall not be a home in all Germany where the children are not gathered around the green fir-tree to rejoice in the birth-night of Christ."

So they took the little fir from its place, and carried it in joyous procession to the edge of the glade, and laid it on the sledge. The horses tossed their heads and drew their load bravely, as if the new burden had made it lighter.

When they came to the house of Gundhar, he bade them throw open the doors of the hall and set the tree in the midst of it. They kindled lights among the branches until it seemed to be tangled full of fire-flies. The children encircled it, wondering, and the sweet odor of the balsam filled the house.

Then Winfried stood beside the chair of Gundhar, on the dais at the end of the hall, and told the story of Bethlehem; of the babe in the manger, of the shepherds on the hills, of the host of angels and their midnight song. All the people listened, charmed into stillness.

But the boy Bernhard, on Irma's knee, folded by her soft arm, grew restless as the story lengthened, and began to prattle softly at his mother's ear.

"Mother," whispered the child, "why did you cry out so loud, when the priest was going to send me to Valhalla?"

"Oh, hush, my child," answered the mother, and pressed him closer to her side.

"Mother," whispered the boy again, laying his finger on the stains upon her breast, "see, your dress is red! What are these stains? Did some one hurt you?"

The mother closed his mouth with a kiss. "Dear, be still, and listen!"

The boy obeyed. His eyes were heavy with sleep. But he heard the last words of Winfried as he spoke of the angelic messengers, flying over the hills of Judea and singing as they flew. The child wondered and dreamed and listened. Suddenly his face grew bright. He put his lips close to Irma's cheek again.

"Oh, mother!" he whispered very low, "do not speak. Do you hear them? Those angels have come back again. They are singing now behind the tree."

And some say that it was true; but others say that it was only Gregor and his companions at the lower end of the hall, chanting their Christmas hymn:

All glory be to God on high,
And to the earth be peace!
Good-will, henceforth, from heaven to men
Begin, and never cease.

If there was mail for Mrs. Bodey, Donohue would deliver it first, even if that meant retracing his steps. For Donohue knew that Mrs. Bodey was always waiting for a letter from her daughter Eda.

Always hoping that Eda would come home for Christmas.

If you had been postman on Donohue's beat for thirty-five years, you might better understand his attitude toward the season of peace on earth and good will toward men. To Donohue, and hundreds like him in the Post Office Department of the large middle West city where so many years ago he had met his Civil Service requirements, Christmas was the tormenting season which began early in December and concluded some time after the New Year.

When the first flurry of snow began to fly, Donohue could feel his spirits sag. A lump of dread began to form somewhere in his being and his arm pits start to ache as if in anticipation.

For thirty-five years Donohue had plowed through a cataclysm of Christmas postcards, greetings, packages, letters and hampers. He had seen the vogue for the Christmas card come in like a great and bellowing lion, roaring its way across the world: Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Man.

Donohue hated Christmas. It was a period of torture to him.

He staggered along until his fatigue made his eyeballs and his very heart strain. Ice formed on his face and his lashes stiffened. Housewives opened their doors just one inch so that he had to poke the letters in one by one, so cold and so blustery could the month of Yuletide be.

DONOHUE was something of a character on his beat. Families had lived two and three generations in the old houses that bordered the street on which Donohue made his rounds. Frequently, on the more blustery days, housewives invited him in for a cup of coffee—or, when the heat blistered, for a glass of iced tea. He had seen the children on his rounds grow up and have children of their own. Life marched on around Donohue. But, except for the passing of the years, Life went on for him at its monotonous pace. Fifty weeks of making his rounds faithfully. He held a record for unbroken service. Two weeks of annual vacation spent on a little farm just three miles out of town. And then back again to the day-by-day; to the day-by-day.

There was something of the querulous old bachelor about Donohue, although people said of him that his bark was worse than his bite. He considered it a fallacy that two could live as cheaply as one and had never married. He lived in a two-room frame house on the edge of the more fashionable district where he distributed mail. He owned a cat and a small blind turtle. His needs were almost as simple as theirs. A place to sleep and enough to eat.

ONCE in a while, Mrs. Bodey, who also lived on the unfashionable edge of Donohue's well-to-do beat, came over of her own volition and gave his place what she called a "thorough cleaning." Donohue was grateful for this, and, if there was mail for Mrs. Bodey, he made it a point to deliver it first even if it meant a great deal of retracing of his steps, which was more than he would do for the less-favored ones of his little community.

There was tragedy in Mrs. Bodey's life and Donohue, who knew all the tragedies of his district, knew hers more intimately than any of the others. Mrs. Bodey's little girl named Eda, whom Donohue had seen grow up out of her mother's arms, had "gone wrong", as the saying goes. There had been a sharp neighborhood scandal and little Eda, who was sixteen at the time and had a cropped yellow head of ringlets, had disappeared. Once in a while a letter came from her with a New York postmark, addressed in her unmistakable angular handwriting, to her mother.

Those were the mornings on which Donohue went blocks out of his way to deliver her mail first.

FOR three Christmases, Eda had been promising to come home. She never arrived. Mrs. Bodey, with a voice full of sobs, used to confide to Donohue that Eda was afraid to come home. Public opinion. Social ostracism. Fear of the smugness of old-time friends. So Mrs. Bodey, who was a narrow, brown little widow, continued to live in her narrow, brown little house, hoping against hope while Christmas after Christmas roared in, and Donohue—whose back was getting rounder and a little more bent and terribly susceptible to the weight of his mail-bag—continued to plow through the knee-high snow storms and the ankle-deep puddles.

Now part of his dread of the Christmas season began to be his dread of what he felt sure was to be Mrs. Bodey's annual disappointment. For months before, as he brought her the letters written in the angular hand of Eda, her spirits began to soar. Mrs. Bodey had so long ago forgiven. Secretly, in spite of the hopeful tones with which she confided the contents of these letters to Donohue, the old mail-man felt that Eda would never return. The pretty young bird had flown away and little brown Mrs. Bodey sat in her little brown house with crumbs in her hand, figuratively speaking, trying to tempt her back. Eda was too worldly now; too scornful or too afraid of public opinion back home.

THE thirty-sixth winter of Donohue's service was the coldest he had ever seen. As early as November the trees around the old familiar streets of his beat were encased in an armor of ice; housewives had to come out on their verandas with a pan of ice cream salt and sprinkle it on the steps before he could mount them with his burden of holiday cheer. Great ice tusks hung from Donohue's mustache. The Christmas crucifixion was upon him and his heart strained and his eyeballs strained and peace on earth, good will toward man lay heavily upon his back.

That was the Christmas that Eda's letters came more frequently and with more and more assurances and promises of her plan to spend the holidays with her mother. Donohue, who could be grouchy when asked to hurry with his mail deliveries, willingly went the five icy blocks out of his way to deliver her letters to Mrs. Bodey because that year it seemed to Donohue that Mrs. Bodey was failing. Her narrow shoulders seemed to want to meet in front and close like a book. Sometimes, when she opened the door for him, the icy blast almost knocked her backward. Donohue had seen many familiar faces suddenly disappear from his beat as death mowed them down.

FOR thirty-five years the Bodeys, even during the lifetime of Fred Bodey, who had been a bookkeeper, had been Donohue's best friends on the beat.

In his grouchy old way, Donohue desperately wanted Eda home for Christmas. Every year, she sent him a five-dollar bill. Most of the families on his beat remembered him in some such way. Money. Neckties. Mufflers. Donohue once counted his. He had one hundred and twenty-seven.

Christmas in the little two-room house of Donohue was a wilderness of such inconsequential offerings. When he was not too cold and too tired and too sick at heart with the long, hard Christmas season, they brought cheer to him, these little evidences of the consideration and the friendliness of the people whom he served. But usually he was too "dog-tired" to have much capacity left for these things of cheer. The sight of a Christmas wreath in a window was anathema to him. The rigamarole of mistletoe, of Christmas card, of red satin ribbon, or red paper bell, of Christmas tree decorated with tinsel, of plum puddings that weighted his back so cruelly was unbearable.

Donohue hated Christmas. On the day itself, he drew his shades, put the paraphernalia of the neckties, mufflers and shoe-trees well out of sight and tried to forget it was Christmas. Most of the time he did, dozing pleasantly beside his cat and his turtle, his aching feet on the fender of the stove, Christmas locked out.

ON the day before the Christmas of his thirty-sixth year, Donohue, who had a letter for Mrs. Bodey, rang her front bell three successive times. There was no answer and so he went around to the side. There in the kitchen, seated in her little rocking chair beside a cold stove with her head slightly forward, just as if she were dozing, was Mrs. Bodey.

But Mrs. Bodey was dead. She must have seated herself because of a sudden pain that had struck her. Standing beside her, Donohue took it upon himself to read the letter from Eda that he was to deliver to Mrs. Bodey.

It announced her arrival Christmas morning.

Donohue met the train. She was so pretty. She stepped off like a bird with a little pecking motion of her head which he remembered.

It broke his heart to go forward and greet her.

It is the thirty-eighth Christmas of Donohue's service and his two-room house, as he turns his aching feet toward it, looks as absurd to him as a birthday cake. There are red paper bells in every window and Eda, irrepressible rogue, has decked out the front door knob in red ribbon, and there is a Christmas tree in the window, freighted with nonsense.

To add to his burden, hasn't the ridiculous child sent him thirty-eight Christmas cards, one for each year of service! And in his own bag, so that he also had to lug it, was a four-pound plum pudding, inscribed with all kinds of funny little nonsense-sayings.

You just can't shut Christmas out of Donohue's house any longer—Eda is there.

Reports For Year Read at Meeting of Knox Church Society.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, December 22. — At the monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Knox United Church held on Tuesday afternoon the reports for the year were read and adopted. The past year has been a successful one in every respect and one which has had many pleasant associations. The fact that during the year there have been no deaths among the members and there has been no serious illness means that there is a great cause for thanksgiving to Almighty God. Financially the year has been remarkably good and the members were all delighted with the treasurer's report which showed such a fine balance. These officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Hon. presidents, Mrs. Peter Baptie and Mrs. Thomas Hendren; president, Mrs. J. A. Porter; 1st vice-president, Mrs. W. W. Yale; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. A. Davis; secretary, Mrs. F. J. Burgess; treasurer, Mrs. W. J. Charlton; financial secretary, Miss Frankish; Missionary Monthly secretary, Mrs. J. Walton; Home Helpers' secretary, Mrs. F. J. Burgess; strangers' secretary, Mrs. H. The Windfall Hill

MARMORA, Dec. 20.—(Examiner Correspondence). — The following poem appeared in the North Hastings Review about twenty-five years ago and refers to a well known hill in the 4th concession of Madoc township and some of the early settlers of whose families there remain but little trace to-day, with the exception of the Miller's who are notable that eight brothers and four sisters are living of one branch of that family whose ages total 607 years. The writer of the poem was Henry Elliott, who wrote poetry a decade ago using the non de plume "Cheviot":—

"Did ye ken Jimmie Miller o' the Windfall Hill?
A sonsy old body when he had a
jill;
He wad get his pipe an sit an blaw
The reck up the lum wi' his held at the wa'
And aye as the smoke floated off like a cloud
Some old time story he'd tell to the crowd
But changes that come, and are coming still
Has ta'en him awa' frae the Windfall Hill.

I mind it weel on a winter's night
When we a' were young and planted right;
There were Sanfords an' Millar an'
Malcolm an' Gunn
And Steve Johnson then wad help on the fun
And Corrigan often would fill the cup
Till some were down an' some were up
In the we' sma' hours their noggans wad fill
E'er we a' seid guid night at the Windfall Hill.

"The Windfall Hill is an auld time place
And few are now left, who the track would trace
Of that wild cyclone which cut a path
In the virgin woods like a giant's swath;
McKenzie's an' Gordons, thae auld pioneers
Hae slipit awa' in the lapse of years
But their names and descendants are biding still Around in the bield o' the Windfall
Hill.

"As the mist clears awa' frae the past by thought
The shades of the old pioneers are brought
To memory's view and the phantom slays
Of Chantys and men by the side of the blaze
There was Zeron, O'Hara, Van
Kleeck and De Clair
The first in the township to find and fare
In eighteen twenty-five those pioneers came Before the Windfall Hill had its name.

"As years slip alang like rippling wave
Maist a' the auld folk are now in the grave,
The auld time usages forgotten and past
Like a time shattered tree which has fallen in the blast
But there are names that should live on memory's page
Van Kleeck, Seymour, Lingham a thought may engage
They were always at all times, the friends of the poor
And the hungry were ne-er sent awa' fra' their door.

"There were women too who deserve
all praise
As much as the men in those early days
They raised sons and daughters, a vigorous t tee
In life's rough stern conflict to take their place;
Their dainties were few but health was their charm
The wool from the fleece they would card and spin
And in long winter nights you would hear the din
Of the clicking loom in the corner set
While the girls round the hearth would sing and knit.

"The notes might partake of a sacred sound
Of some melody learned when the preacher was round
Or perchance it might be some plaintive lay
Of Tara's mute harp or auld Robin
Gray
They were blest with content and simple fare
And with hunger supplied, they were free from all care.

"These scenes came up as I dwelt in the past
I could wish for the spell or the dream to last
And go as of old to the logging bees
Or go gathering sap from the maple trees
Life then was real but tis like romance
To tell of their spoils or their songs and dance
The romance may fade in the coming years
But the names should live of the old pioneers.

"Who has not heard of auld 'Dan'
with his Kippen
Let him hear but a tap of the Protestant drum
Then hurrah boys, sure we'll send them a flippin'
And beat them like rabbits as fast as they come
To be sure it was only in words that he did it
There was little guile to be found in auld Dan
But give him his cruskin and once he has said it
By himself wid his Kippen he'd stand like a man."

Trade With Germany Is Seen With Regret

LONDON, Dec. 24 (Canadian Press.)—A committee of the National Union of Manufacturers Friday sent Rt. Hon. L. C. M. Amery, Secretary of State for the Dominions, a resolution expressing regret that the South African Government had put Germany on the same footing as Great Britain with respect to future preferential rates.

The committee expressed the opinion that the action of the South African Government "could only result in hindering the expansion of Imperial preferences, upon which the extension of Empire trade must largely depend"

AT MOUNT PLEASANT

(Examiner Correspondence)

MOUNT PLEASANT, Dec. 22.—On Tuesday evening the Sunday School of St. John's Parish Church held its annual Christmas concert in the Parish Hall at Ida. Owing to the very bad condition of the side roads, the crowd was not as large as anticipated, but the concert was a huge success. The children of the Sunday School are few in number, but nevertheless the entertainment was good. L. H. Winslow acted as chairman of the evening in his usual good style and the following program was given:

Opening chorus, by Sunday school and choir; recitation, Harold Thacker; pantomine, "Away in a Manger", Audrey Morton, Mabel Eggleston, Emma Fee, Gladys Tippett, Wilma Tippett and Mona Seney; piano duet, Emma Fee and Kathleen Sisson; recitation, Victor Paisley; piano solo, Vera Morton; "Doll's Lullaby, Wilma Tippett, Mona Seney and Doreen Sene; song, Clare Winslow, Tom McCamus and Harry McCamus; "Brownies", Val Thacker, Roddy Tippett, Ivan Eggleston and Arthur Eggleston; piano duet, Allen Winslow and Mrs. Winslow; son, Clare Winslow, Tom McCamus and Harry McCamus; play, "Souvenir Spoons," Emma Fee, Gladys Tippet, Joe Palmer and Allen Winslow.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, December 22. — The annual Christmas entertainment of the Sunday School of St. Thomas' Church was held in the Parish Hall on Tuesday evening, the superintendent, E. H. Barnes, taking the chair. The rector, Rev. Canon Allen, was absent because of ill-health, and the assistant clergyman, Rev. Mr. Roberts, who was also ill, found it impossible to preside over the gathering. Mrs. (Canon) Allen presided at the piano throughout the evening.

Little Betty Smith recited the opening "Welcome" selection, and the pupils of the school followed this with the carol, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." A Christmas recitation by Mary Smith, and "Merry Christmas," by Mary Handley, led up to an attractive "Doll Drill" by Mary Nattress, Mary Vance, Betty and Mary Smith, and Laureen and Mary Handley.

"Christmas in Song" was an appropriate number, Aunt Lucy (Miss M. B. Turner) reading the Christmas story, while her two nieces (Mary Vance and Mary Nattress) questioned her eagerly about the birth of the Saviour, and in the wings the carols were sung, "As Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night" and "Holy Night."

Addresses Audience.

At this point Rev. Mr. Roberts addressed the audience briefly, expressing his personal pleasure in the fact that the program stressed especially the fact of Christ's coming to earth as the chief significance of Christmas, and urged the hearty co-operation of the parents in making the success of the Sunday School assured. The teachers required this backing of their efforts to carry on whole-heartedly and with certainty that their work is appreciated, knowing that from the homes they might look with confidence for help and interest.

"The Spirit of Giving," a dialogue by Misses Marcella and Marguerite Lang (Sophia and Delilah) created a good deal of merriment, the old-fashioned dresses and method of "doing" their hair, with the conversation carried on regarding the giving of "useful" Christmas presents, being decidedly amusing, and with a moral which the listeners could readily apply, though there was no attempt to put it into words.

Elizabeth Russell took the title role of "Mrs. Ruggles" in the next dialogue, her big family of eight children including K. Donnelly, Margaret Russell, Lyal Nattress, Winnie Lord, Eric Abbott, Gilbert Howson, Harold Howson, and Mary Vance. The amusing way in which Mrs. Ruggles coached her children in proper behavior when they went to Miss Bird's Christmas party, and the response made by the boys and girls as they tried to look and act their part, kept the audience laughing through the whole proceedings.

The concluding dialogue, in pantomime, was a "Shadow Play," E. Jordan reading the story, while the shadows on the screen told the tale with effective action. Those taking part were: Gwendolyn Flair, Lyal Nattress; her lover, Reginald Splash, Henry Gray; Elijah, a would-be lover, George Gray; Mrs. Flair, the irate mother, Cameron Vance; the minister who married the happy couple, after Reginald had carried of Gwendolyn in a wheelbarrow, Eddie Nattress.

A pleasing recitation, "Farewell," by John Howson, brought the program to a close, the giving of gifts from a prettily-trimmed tree being the final feature, and the one of special interest to the young folk.

Mr. Barnes distributed the presents, and Henry Gray stood on the other side of the tree and handed to each scholar a bag of candy; several of the teachers were also remembered by their scholars.

Those who trained for the program were Miss M. B. Turner, Mrs. Howard Jordan, and Miss Ella Grandy.

WOMAN FACES MURDER TRIAL

Mrs. Annie Oldham Is Judged Sane After Spending Six Years in Asylum.

TORONTO, Ont., December 24. — Canadian Press. — After more than six years in an insane asylum, Mrs. Annie Oldham, 51, formerly of Mount Talbert, Ontario, will be tried at the winter assizes on a charge of murdering her infant grandchild.

Mrs. Oldham is alleged to have killed the child on May 15, 1922, by dipping its nipple into strychnine. The baby which was 15 months old, belonged to Mrs. Oldham's 19-year-old daughter.

At that time the woman was judged insane, and was not tried, being taken to the asylum here within a few days after the death of the child.

Examined recently by doctors, she was found to have regained her reason. Orders for her trial were issued at the Parliament Buildings, and Crown Attorney Eric Armour now has the necessary papers ready. The woman will remain in the asylum until the time of her trial.

HANDEL'S "MESSIAH."

(By Jeanette.)

Very appropriate to the Christmas season, in its superb outpouring of worship to the Almighty, was the choice of Handel's "Messiah" as a Yuletide program of music. The presentation of this mighty mingling in song of ovation and prayer to God, was beautifully done Friday night at George street United Church, by a combined chorus of one hundred and fifty voices, and the soloists, who like the choristers were recruited from the various churches of the city, and came together, under the auspices of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir, to give "The Messiah," that noble composition which is more like a lengthened and inspired prayer, than any of the wonderful oratorios in the history of music.

The chorus was remarkable for the quality of compactness exhibited by the hundred and fifty voices, spread out, owing to the size of the choir loft, with sections at either side. Possibly the devotional and reverential character of the music, which far outweighed last night any consideration of the dramatic possibilities of the piece, helped to bring the scores of singers together in a united purpose of presenting, with clarity of tone, easy, strong, flowing melody and fine interpretation, the gorgeous music of "The Messiah. Under the baton of their conductor, M. B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., they sang as one person, in a glorious, free out-pouring of beautiful melody. Fine support at the organ and piano was given respectively by G. F. Liddle and R. J. Devey, while Miss Mabel Clarry conducted the first chorus of the evening, "And the Glory," and John Crane had the honor of conducting the wonderful "Hallejujah" chorus, which marks the closing of this oratorio, and which brought the audience to its feet in the gesture of acknowledgment of its majesctic power, which moved the audience in Dublin, Ireland, where the premiere of this mighty oratorio was given so many years ago.

There was a fair sized audience for the production last evening, the proximity of Christmas and the various other attractions possibly having their effect on the attendance. An introduction of the program, and an expression of welcome to the choristers and audience, was voiced by the pastor, the Rev. J. E. Todd. The National Anthem was sung at the commencement, and the Doxology at the close.

The various solo parts exhibited a quality of discrimination in choice of singers which added greatly to their attraction. The different sections seemed eminently suited to the voices of those who presented them, and were splendidly done in every instance. Harold Lee, tenor, was at his best in the finely sung recitative, "Comfort Ye, My People," which seemed to act as a trumpet call to the noble music which follows it, and the the air, "Every Valley shall be Exalted." G. D. Carlisle's resonant, strong baritone had the recitative and air, "Thus Saith the Lord," and "But Who May Abide," and Mrs. G. F. Liddle's sweet, attractive contralto was heard to much advantage in "Behold! a Virgin shall conceive," and "O Thou That Tellest Good Tidings."

The brief recitative and air, "For Behold Darkness" and "The People that Walked in Darkness" was one of the best sung of the evening's solo parts, being wonderfully effective in George East's fine bass voice, and Mrs. W. H. Hohner's strong, clear soprano appeared to be set to the best possible advantage in the recitatives, "There were Shepherds," "And Lo! the Angel," "And the Angel Said," "And Suddenly there was with the Angels," also the superb music of the notable aria, "I know that My Redeemer Liveth."

"Rejoice Greatly, O Daughter of Zion," was a softly sung, sweet solo by Mrs. T. E. Curvin, and Mrs. G. Byer's attractive, graceful voice was lovely in the recitative and air, "He Shall Feed His Flock like a Shepherd," and "Come unto Him."

There was a great deal of effective emphasis in the beautiful contralto solo by Miss Jessie Pattison, "He was Despised," and George Chandler, tenor, had plenty of scope for his musicianly handling of a fine voice in a series of solos, which included "All They that See Him," "Thy Rebuke Hath Broken," "Behold and See," "He was Cut Off," "But thou didst Not Leave His Soul," "He that Dwelleth," and "Thou Shalt Break Them."

The choruses were extremely effective from beginning to end, forming a tapestry background of fine music for the solo work. The joyous singing of the Christmas chorus, "For Unto us a Child is Born," was especially attractive, as was the buoyant, brisk swing of the chorus, "All We Like Sheep."

The "Hallelujah" chorus, which forms the closing, and is in a class by itself, was done full justice to by the massed chorus of well harmonized voices.

The Pastoral Symphony which makes an exquisite little bit of interruption by the organ in the program of vocal music, was splendidly played by G. F. Liddle.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

Thank you very much for the invitation to write again, and especially for the privilege of writing a longer one. You see I am not long in making use of the invitation and fully expect that it will be much longer.

I enjoyed all the short stories and was quite interested in seeing to whom the prizes were awarded. I was preparing one, but was too slow. Saturday, with the closing of the contest came, and the story was still unfinished. I appreciated 'Bobbie's' letter and can fully understand and sympathize with her troubles. It is always nice to know of a mother who is genuinely interested and concerned about the training of her child. So many mothers I have seen, who slap and scold without great deal of reason or judgment. Considering the incident. 'Bobbie,' of your babe disturbing the table while it is being set, it is not very serious. All children are great imitators and your little one is only trying to imitate yourself or whoever is setting the table. Children at that age are very anxious to help. Of course, your babe is not able to understand that taking things off the table is not helping.

Trying giving him the work of putting his own little cup and spoon on the corner of the table himself; then, while he is still feeling quite satisfied with his own accomplishment, put his building blocks in his hand and lead him to his high chair, where he can play with it, and watch the rest of the table setting from a safe distance. You have heard of supplement a 'don't' with 'do'? That is, when you don't want his assistance at table setting, try to find something else that will take his attention. This, 'Bobbie,' is only a suggestion. It may not have any effect in your case, but at least, it is not hard to try.

I can support Marion's theory that 'perhaps after the first dozen the task is easier' (I have a whole half dozen and can see a difference already). The oldest child is usually the biggest mischief. At least, that has been my experience, and I have heard other mothers passing the same remark. The reason as I see it is that he is observing and imitating grown-ups, therefore going from the cupboard to the table and the stove and thus getting into mischief. While on the other hand, the younger children always have older children to watch and play with, and they by this time have learned to play games.

I have five boys and a baby girl, so you can see I can sympathize with mothers having children of various ages. It is a heavy responsibility, but I am learning to come through the mill day by day, sometimes wondering what is still ahead in life, but finding it better to live one day at a time, doing the best that I know how and not worrying over th future.

My boys have helped me wonderfully in doing little chores, and helping care for the smaller children. Since my illness of the past few months they seem to be more thoughtless, quarrelsome and harder to manage. They had good care from loving hands while I was ill, but being in charge of several different people during that time, seemed to change their habits to a certain extent. The problem just now is how to lead them back to the same condition of a few months ago. Perseverence is the road to success, so with that and lots of patience we will wait and see.

Yes, Marion, I think the stores must be very pretty just now, as they always are at Christmas time. As yet I have only seen them through the advertisement, but hope to be able to be downtown at least once before this Merry Season is over.

I have been embroidering some very pretty towels, it helps to pass the time, and besides they make very nice gifts.

I hope my letter is not too long for printing. I will be glad to see another letter from 'Bobbie.'

A Shut-In.

City.

As you say, "Shut In," having the children in other hands for a time DOES make them more difficult, but then, one is fortunate to have someone to look after them in case of necessity. I have heard of some sad cases lately, where the 'flu sent the whole family to bed and they could not afford to hire anyone.

I'm sure "Bobbie" will enjoy your letter, which seems so sound in its reasoning. I hope you are soon fully recovered.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I am enclosing the coupon for helps. I always seem to be begging when I write, but these helps are nice to keep, even though one doesn't use them at the time. I found the Christmas gift help very helpful indeed.

I was very much interested in 'Bobbie's' letter. Doesn't she write a delightful letter? I think she must have been a school marm before she was married, she sounds so clever.

I also have a baby boy and some of 'Bobbie's' problems are also mine, although my baby is not as old. I certainly agree with 'Bobbie' about putting a child to sleep without rocking and in the dark, too.

'Bobbie' asks what other mothers give their children to do to amuse themselves. I know a mother who used to give her little girl (about 2 years), a large box filled with what might be called 'junk' to play with. There was everything in this box—such as broken door knobs, empty powder cans, bottles, etc., all things which baby could not swallow or hurt herself in any way. This same child had lovely toys, but would sit for hours playing with this old box.

I have often been in the home of another mother whose child said 'No,' and would immediately howl and then, of course, whatever object it wanted was handed over at once. Every article on the table which baby could not eat was covered up so he wouldn't see it and cry. It was quite embarrassing to visit there and have to reach surreptitiously under a dish for a piece of cheese or some such article. In such a case as this I think a child should be taught that 'No' means NO. Of course, some articles do not necessarily need to be in baby's vision, and to save trouble they should be kept out of sight, but I guess as 'Bobbie' says, it is easy to see faults in other people's children.

I certainly enjoy the Daily Reading Column, Marion, and will perhaps send some suggestions if I can find time. I also enjoy 'Thinker' and 'Another Thinkers' letters, aren't they most amusing?' The Christmas stories were very interesting. I wish I were talented enough to join in and write one. Well my letter is going to be very lengthy so I will close, wishing you all success,

Yours sincerely,
Countrywoman."

Lakefield.

I am glad to send all the helps you desire, "Countrywoman," and I am pleased to know you find them useful.

Yes, "Bobbie's" letter was just fine—and I'm expecting to hear from her again one of these days. It is certainly nice to gather round with you neighbors and discuss the things in which we are interested.

I remember when I used to rummage through boxes of old clothing and odds and ends my mother had saved up and, as you say, there is nothing more interesting to a child. Don't we still grown-up as we are, like to sort things?

I'll be looking for another letter soon—it is some time since you wrote before.

"Dear Marion:

When the man brought the money for my story, the grocery boy happened to be just inside the door taking an order. "Give this to your mother,' he said, handing him the envelope. We had a good laugh as my eldest is [illegible] Many thanks, Marion, for giving me the opportunity to earn a little pin money.

Maybe the neighbors know these hints, but I'll send them anyway. When making cocoa, mix sugar and cocoa in cup before adding boiling milk or water, and the cup won't keep turning as you stir. Do the same with cornstarch. Don't throw lemon skins away. Keep them near the sink or wash bowl for taking stains from fingers after peeling vegetables or apples. If put in the wash water they make the skin fair. The enclosed recipe for date bars is good. I made a pan for Christmas. I doubt if they will keep that long.

I hope you like the little card I have painted for you, Marion, and as I shall not be writing to your again this side of the holiday, I wish you a Happy Christmas and a Bright New Year.

Oriole."

Thank you, "Oriole," both for your nice letter and for the beautiful Christmas card. It is quite the prettiest I have seen, and from your splendid work in painting it I fancy your home must be very attractive with your pictures. Thanks, to, for the recipe, which I will take care to add to my file. I'm sure the neighbors will wish to save it, to, together with your hints. I'll be looking for another letter from you soon after the holiday.

"Dear Marion:

Don't you just feel sorry for the poor, tired little children one sees, being dragged from store to store this Christmas season? It is a wonder how they can go to sleep when night comes, the state their nerves must be in.

What possible enjoyment or interest can a young child have being pushed about in the crowds, jammed smotheringly into a corner on the elevator, rushing up the gloom, and then, while mother views this and that, standing on poor tired little legs, hot and uncomfortable, dressed far too warmly for the heat of a crowded store.

They don't get any thrill out of the noise and excitement, only a harmful one, and if they dare to protest against the discomfort of it all, they are mostly likely soundly slapped and told they are 'naughty.'

Consider the children, and leave them at home in the care of some member of the family, or if this is impossible, arrange to have someone come in. If all else fails, do the necessary shopping in the morning when the stores are not so crowded.

Only on Saturday my heart burned with indignation at one thoughtless mother whose child was imploring to go home. She was no doubt having the time of her life, and the child's wails annoyed her. I am sure the marks of her fingers must have been well impressed on the small arm as she shook him in no gentle grip and promised to punish him, 'when I get you home.' The selfishness of it!

Of course this does not apply to older children who have become accustomed to all the exciting novelties that Christmas brings.

Quite often there is a sick child in the home on Christmas day. Is it to be wondered at? I do believe it is many a long day before some tots recover from the harrowing experiences of 'Christmas shopping.'

Yours truly,
Adastia."

I don't know what you will think of me, "Adastia" for being so long in printing your letter. I'm sure the neighbors will have your remarks in mind for next year. Your other letter will be printed within a few days—I expect to get my correspondence caught up by the end of the week—and if only I can get the space I will never let it get behind again! Cross my heart!

"Dear Marion:

Just a little suggestion for the Daily Reading. What about the 'dinner scene' at Bob Crachit's house taken from Dickens' Christmas Carol in Chapter three. I think it would be very appropriate at this time of year, don't you? I can fairly smell that goose AND the stuffing AND the applesauce AND the mashed potatoes, AND that pudding, my dear; yes it was worthy of the name of pudding, that one. I think that scene, finishing up with Tiny Tim's "God bless us every one," is truly delightful.

Another suggestion: Any chapter (they are all quite short) taken from Henry Van Dyke's 'The Other Wise Man' would also be very suitable at the present season. This latter suggestion is my husband's.

Yours sincerely,
Sheila."

Thanks very much, "Sheila," for the Songs of Love. There haven't been many coming in lately, probably because the neighbors are so busy preparing for Christmas.

I'm very sorry that I have already sent in to the typesetters the reading extracts for Christmas week. I have to prepare a lot of copy like that, which can be done early, in advance. I would like to print "The Other Wise Man," and if I get the opportunity I certainly will. How like the patient, seeking Artaban we might all be! Never given the opportunity to serve the Christ-child in person, and refused the privilege of laying at His feet the gift we have—buy paying tribute and service to Him through the least of his brethren.

It is many a year since I first read the Christmas Carol, but the story of Scrooge has a constant attraction. Perhaps, before very long I may find room for it—and it is really a story for anytime, isn't it?

"Dear Marion:

Received payment for my Christmas story; thanks very much. Little did I think when I wrote it that it would be printed, and the little bit of money comes in real handy, especially at Christmas time. I certainly enjoyed reading all the stories; they surely were interesting, and I wish to congratulate the neighbors who were the prize-winners, also all the rest, because I think all the stories were splendid.

I think the Big Sister plan is a good idea. I know I should have answered your letter before, Marion, but surely you will excuse me as I am a busy mother and one of my wee boys has the whooping cough. I don't know whether I would be capable of giving advice to the girls or not. I think perhaps some of the older neighbors might do better, so if you have a goodly supply of Big Sisters, perhaps you will not need me. If not, I am willing to help in any way I can, because I like to be able to write for help, too.

I wonder if some neighbor has a good recipe for Yorkshire pudding to be eaten with beef? I cannot have good success, and I would be very glad to know how to make it.

I am enclosing a coupon for some helps, if I am not too late. Thanks for all the help, and wishing you a Merry Christmas.

Yours truly,
Marleigh."

MEMORIES OF AN ANGEL SONG

(By Mollie Rooney, Havelock)

In the holy hush of morning o'er my soul there steals along
Waffted down the changeful ages, mem'ries of an angel song;
Humble shepherds in the nightime watch were keeping o'er their fold
When a light shone 'round about them flooding all the hills with gold.

Fear and trembling seized upon them as an angel by them stands
Bringing such a gladsome message to the near and distant lands,
"Fear ye not, behold I bring you, and to people all this word Born to-day in David's city is a Saviour, Christ the Lord."

Suddenly a heavenly chorus with the angel then was seen,
Praising God and saying "Glory in the highest to the King"
And the men ere they departed for the heav'nly land above,
Peace and good will sang they sweetly, telling of a Father's love.

When the wond'rous sight had faded, spoke those shepherds "let us on Even now to Bethlehem's village" at the burst of the dawn,
"See this thing which God revealeth unto us by angels fair,"
And they found the little Jesus in a manger over there.

For no room was left to shelter at the inn the promised One,
No His loving mother Mary, watching o'er her first-born Son.
What was told them by the ange is made the Shepherds known abroad
All who heard were filled with wonder, Mary pondered on her God.

Then the shepherds home returning, glorified the Lord for all
They had heard and seen that morning, from the angels to the stall
Unto us a child was given, unto us a Son was born
When the angels hailed the shepherds on that first glad Christmas morn.

I'm very glad that you like the stories, "Marleigh—so did I, and everyone I've been listening in on. The idea about the Big Sister column is to pass the letters of inquiry around to neighbors, in the order in which they responded to my request—so your turn will not come for some time yet. I'm putting in an SOS for the recipe.

As requested, your pen-name has been changed, "Marleigh." Do you wish to give up the old one altogether, so that someone else can have it?

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Thanks for the previous helps sent me.

I just think your pages are most wonderful; one gets so much information from them.

I am inclosing my name and address, as I note you have asked for it. The stories were all fine.

Truly yours,
Alley."

Thanks for responding to my SOS "Alley" (or is it "Ally"?) The spacerate payment for the story has been sent to you.

"Dear Marion:

The letters are getting more interesting and more exciting all the time, since the men have chipped in. It takes a man to make it interesting every time . . to let them tell it. I sure liked the way you and some of the other neighbors told 'Thinker' off. We all know what men of that kind are like. There never was a woman made for a grouch like him.

I hope I am not too late for the Christmas helps. All that I have received have been so helpful. Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New New.

Hildaguard."

Thank you for your very good wishes, "Hildaguard," and for your letter about "Thinker's" attitude. The helps were sent you some days ago—I am a little behind with my correspondence!

• • •

"Dear Marion:

This is the first I have written and I must say I certainly enjoy reading your wonderful page. I am enclosing the coupon for your household helps. I've a lovely scrap-book made up of your recipes and I've tried several of them and find them lovely recipes.

I enclose a recipe for a Mackoa Cake and am hoping some neighbor can publish a recipe for peanut candy.

Wishing you every success, I remain,

Babe of the Woods."

Lakefield.

Thank you, "Babe of the Woods" for the recipe, and I hope the SOS is answered. Thanks, too, for your nice appreciation.

"Dear Marion:

Received a pleasant surprise from you in Wednesday's mail and wondered why I should be receiving correspondence cards. Since then I have discovered the reason and send you my many, many thanks. They are perfectly lovely and are also going to be very useful. I can already see them with little hand-painted designs and suitable verses for my 'most special friends.'

When I saw my name listed amongst the prize-winners it made me feel like a school girl again watching for examination results and finding myself near the foot of the class. However, Marion, it was really much better than I expected or deserved so I must abide by the old motto, 'If at first you don't succeed, try, try again.' There is nothing I should like better than to be able to write stories but I am afraid they are 'distant pastures' for a busy farmer's wife.

I am sure everyone must have enjoyed your Christmas story number. I read a great many of the stories published and found them all extremely interesting. I think your pages are a splendid addition to the paper. I like the personal touch you give to your letters and the neighborly spirit of the neighbors. They give one the feeling that The Peterborough Examiner is 'our' paper instead of 'the' paper, don't they?

Wishing you continued success in your work, and lest I have no other opportunity I wish you the heartiest of the season's greetings, 'A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.'

Yours sincerely,
Silver-Birch."

Thank you for your very nice letter, "Silver-Birch," and for your good wishes.

I used to think that I would like engraved upon my tomb stone the epitaph, "One More Dreamer Dreamt a Dream." This women's section was a dream—or a vision. It has succeeded beyond my highest expectations, because good neighbors like myself, "Silver-Birch," caught the spirit of my idea and put the pages across. There may, now, be no need for that epitaph, because when dreams come true they are no longer dreams, are they?

Again, thanks, "Silver-Birch," and come again.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I enjoyed the Christmas stories very much, and after reading some of them I was greatly surprised to see mine in print. Thanks very much for the pay envelope.

I agree with you that we should stop the letters from our 'Thinkers' because it is a useless argument; besides, we only have a page or two for the ladies and the men have most of the remainder, so I think they should leave our page alone unless they have something worth-while to write us about.

Neither is life complete without the other, so why scrap about who has the most brains? Why not work together and give credit wherever it is due? Then perhaps we'll really accomplish something. I would like the recipes for a sauce for Christmas pudding, also icing for my cake. I have some receipes for these but would like some new ones this year.

Wishing you and the readers a Merry Christmas.

Yours truly,
Ella May."

City.

I'm afraid, "Ella May," you may think me negligent in not printing your letter earlier, but I've had so much this last week or so. I put the S.O.S. in on Friday, however.

The point about the controversy with "Thinker" is he doesn't believe what you claim, that neither is complete without the other. He thinks man is the big boss and everything else—the whole works.

"Dear Marion:

Thank you very much for the money I received for my Christmas story. I never hoped for a prize so I was not disappointed; in fact, when I wrote it I didn't expect it to get any farther than the w.p.b. It was my first attempt and I feel encouraged to try again with better success should the opportunity occur again.

I congratulate the prize-winners, although I cannot pass any comment on any of the stories in this letter as, owing to sickness in the house, I have been unable to read them, but I have them all saved, so that as soon as I get a little more leisure I can read them. I am sure, with so many entrants, you have no easy task in judging them.

In spite of my extra work I have always managed to read your page and the daily reading each day. I love to-night's poem. It is so vivid. One can so clearly picture the scene and feel the emotions of those brave strong yet tender warriors. As soon as I have time, I will send in some readings that I enjoy.

I have enclosed coupon for helps. I may be able to make one or two gifts in time for Christmas; if not, they will be useful for other gift-giving occasions which occur during the year. There's lots I want to write to you about, Marion, but I haven't time just now.

There is just one mistake you have made, I am not entitled to the prefix Mrs. I'm just

Yours sincerely,
Plain Miss."

City.

P.S.—I would like to say how much I appreciate the Christmasy appearance of the streets. Round about 6.30 every morning I have to cross George Street on my way to work, and it's a cheery pretty sight at that rather gloomy time of the morning. Life has compensations for everyone, hasn't it, Marion? I can imagine some of your readers enjoying the thought that they are in bed at that time of the morning, and perhaps plying me—but I have seen some wonderful sunrises as I walk over the bridge which has made me forget tiredness or cold in the beauty of the scene.

You are a cheery Miss. 'Pain Miss,' to look for beauty so early in the morning. The only time I see the run rise is when I'm working all night until it comes up. Sometimes I don't get the inspiration for my day's Whatnot till the early morning—and often I know the Whatnot shows it. I'm sorry about the "Mrs." mistake.

Thanks for all the nice things you say about our page. I hope you soon find time to write all the things you have in mind.

"Dear Marion:

Here I am again, this being the third time I have asked for your helps, all of which I have found very valuable.

You certainly have improved The Examiner. I, like most of your correspondents, look for your page and the Whatnot first and the idea of exchanging helps, etc., is splendid, gives one a feeling in common with every one, and undoubtedly will cause a more friendly feeling in Peterborough generally.

The very fact that if we require a recipe, advice, or help out in any perplexity, we are at liberty to enquire from you, knowing we shall bountifully receive from your abundant wisdom, must make us more responsive to your call to help your information bureau, and thereby the other neighbors.

I wonder, Marion, if you could, or is it Laura's business to offer suggestions as to how to entertain guests staying over Christmas to the New Year, without giving them the impression of causing anxious thought?

I shall be grateful for any suggestions and will thank you in advance knowing full well it will fill my requirements. I also wish you a joyous Yuletide. Am enclosing a few timely recipes for your page.

Very sincerely yours,
BLANCHE."

Thank you, "Blanche," for your kind wishes and for your encouraging words. I have asked Laura to write to you telling about entertaining over the holiday. I'm a great hand to get out of work when I can, and that is one section of the department into which I brought a helper.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Your page certainly makes a wonderful improvement in our valuable paper. We have been taking The Examiner as many years as I can remember, and I like it better than ever now.

I have four babies and I do all my own housework, so you see, Marion, I am quite busy. I like the way you answered "Thinker's" letter; imagine a Peterborough man writing such a letter, but as you say, Marion, there are 'women and women,' as there are 'men and men.'

Success and a Merry Christmas to you, Marian,

RAMONA."

I'm very pleased to have your nice words of commendation, "Ramona." I should think you WOULD be busy with your family of four, and thank you all the more heartily for taking time to write to me.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

'Our pages' are a great improvement to The Examiner and so interesting and helpful that I'm asking for some helps also.

Wishing you continued success and a Merry Christmas.

Thanks for your good wishes, "Mrs. R.A.T." I'm glad to help when possible.

This is the first time I have written to you. Enclosed find a two-cent stamp for some helps Your column has improved The Examiner.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

DECEMBER 24, 1928

"The Mahogany Tree," by William Makepeace Thackeray, English novelist (1811-1863) has a place all its own among Christmas poetry, and is made specially significant because the writer died on December 24, sixty-five years ago.—M.

Christmas is here:
Winds whistle shrill,
Icy and chill,
Little care we:
Little we fear Weather without Sheltered about
The Mahogany Tree.

One on the boughs
Birds of rare plume
Sang, in its bloom;
Night birds are we::
Here we carouse,
Singing like them,
Perched round the stem
Of the jolly old tree.

Here let us sport,
Boys, as we sit;
Laughter and wit
Flashing so free.
Life is but short—
When we are gone,
Let them sing on,
Round the old tree.

Evenings we knew,
Happy as this;
Faces we miss,
Kind hearts and true,
Gentle and just,
Peace to your dust
We sing round the tree.

Care, like a dun,
Lurks at the gate:
Let the dog wait;
Happy we'll be!
Drink, every one;
Pile up the coals,
Fill the red bowls,
Round the old tree!

Drain we the cup.—
Friend, art afraid?
Spirits are laid
In the Red Sea.
Mantle it up;
Empty it yet;
Let us forget,
Round the old tree.

Sorrows, begone!
Life and its ills,
Duns and their bills,
Bid we to flee.
Come with the dawn,
Blue-devil sprite,
Leave us to-night,
Round the old tree.

CHRISTMAS EVE

Catherine Parmenter wrote this Christmas Eve poem, sent to me by "Ariadne".—M.

Pine-crowned hills against the sky,
Kneeling low to pray;
Friendly, lamp-lit villages
Along the snowbound way;
Myriads of silver stars
Gleaming softly bright—
Little King of Bethlehem
I see Thy star to-night!

Fragrant wreaths and candle glow
In a city street;
Songs of Christmas carolers
High and clear and sweet—
Echoes of the angel host,
With wings of shining white—
Little King of Israel,
I hear Thy song to-night!

Words of ancient prophecy
Are mine to take or leave;
Visions of a golden age
This happy Christmas Eve;
Peace on earth, goodwill to men—
Oh, dim and holy light!—
Little King of all the world
I share Thy dream to-night!

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

Don't forget to make plans for the table decorations for the Christmas feast. In most families dinner is served before nightfall and hence artificial light is not usually needed. However, if you are planning a fairly late dinner or if you want some table lights anyway, you may like to use Christmas lights to light the table. Attach the cord at the electric light fixture over the table, hide the cords with Christmas greens, and let the little colored bulbs appear like so many differently colored stars above you and your guests as they eat. The bulbs should not be placed so low that they will glare in the diners' eyes.

If you are serving a large dinner without help your table may be too crowded to permit of much if any decorative centerpiece. Then it is a good idea to plan a hanging decoration for the table that will give the Christmassy appearance without taking table space. Get some narrow red ribbon and cut into lengths long enough to hang from the center light to within eight or ten inches of the table. The ribbons should vary slightly in length so as to give an uneven appearance. On the ends of these ribbons may be hung small brass Christmas bells, sprays of holly, artificial poinsettias, or sprays of pine.

There should be eight or ten of these ends and you may have half finished in one way and half in another—as five Christmas bells and five holly sprays

If you cannot afford the red ribbon use narrow streamers of red tissue paper, or even bright red twine. If you use the twine then you will need rather more of the streamers to get the desired color effect.

CREAM PUFFS.
(Contributed by Mrs. E. F. for Mrs. A. R.)

1 cup boiling water.

Chocolate Filling.

Add to 1 1-2 cups scalded milk, 1-2 cup flour mixed to a paste with 1-2 cup of cold milk. Place in a double boiler, stirring constantly for 15 minutes. TAFFY.
(Contributed by "Lucinda.")

Stir four cups of granulated sugar and one-half pint of water over the fire until dissolved. Then boil. When nearly done add three teaspoonfuls of butter and one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Boil until when dropped in cold water it hardens quickly, and when bended will "crack" or snap and not stick to the teeth. Then add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla and turn out in shallow pans to cool.

NUT TAFFY.
(Contributed by "Lucinda.")

Stir well together 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1-2 cup of water until dissolved, set over the fire and add 3 tablespoonfuls of vinegar, do not stir after putting on stove. Boil until when dropped in cold water it hardens quickly and when bended will snap and not stick to the teeth. Then having a layer of nuts in pan, pour over them just enough taffy to cover them.

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

SO THE BIG DAY is almost here at last! Can you realize that to-night we hang up our stockings? To-night Santa comes, or at least we hope he will come, to every home in Peterborough and for miles around.

• • • • • • •

For the youngsters of the home, the celebrating of Christmas means much merriment. There is no more entrancing hour than that devoted to the emptying of the stockings which Santa Claus has filled on Christmas Eve.

• • • • • • •

There is a curious fascination in watching tiny night-robed figures dancing with joy, hugging that curiously shaped stocking!

• • • • • • •

Can't you just see them? Even while you read this you will be thinking of to-morrow morning.

• • • • • •

The Christmas stocking is an ancient custom. Legend tells us how away back in the sixth century St. Nicholas was called upon to fill the first stocking.

• • • • • • •

In a scheduled convent, it was the custom of the young lady boarders to hang a silk stocking on the door of the apartment on Christmas Eve. In the morning they found to their delight the stockings had been filled with "sweets" by the patron saint of little children.

• • • • • • •

The origin of the Christmas stocking dates back to one night when St. Nicholas, overtaken by a severe storm, took refuge in a convent. The following day being Christmas he preached to the nuns. They being delighted with his message, invited him to return next year. Before he retired he askd ach sister to lend him a stocking. These he filled with sugar plums.

• • • • • •

Formerly instead of a stocking, a slipper was placed in readiness for Santa.

• • • • • • •

The word Santa Claus is an English perversion of the Netherlands word "Sinter Klass," meaning St. Nicholas, the patron saint of the children. In some parts of Germany it is still the custom for someone to dress up as a bishop on St. Nicholas Eve, which is December 6, and distribute presents to the children. This custom is, however, almost forgotten, St. Nicholas being superseded by Santa Claus.

• • • • • • •

You all remember the story of the first Christmas tree, don't you? How a father long, long ago in Germany thought he would take a tree home for his kiddies.

• • • • • • •

This was in 1605, and it was first introduced into England from Germany by the Prince Consort in 1840.

• • • • • • •

Would you believe it, with Christmas an event to anticipate weeks in advance, that there was once a time when the festivity was abolished in English Parliament? In 1643 they passed an act forbidding the celebration of the day, in spite of the protests of the King and the people. Anyone celebrating would be heavily fined.

• • • • • • •

For twelve years, there was no celebration of Christmas.

• • • • • • •

Then again in 1659 the State of Massachusetts, through the General Court enacted a law providing for similar punishment for any person observing, or in any way, any such day as Christmas. For twenty-two years this law remained enforced. But Christmas was officially recognized again when the act was repealed in 1681. Even for years after the restoration, the Puritans obstinately refused to celebrate.

• • • • • • •

I wonder how many people in Peterborough realize how different the climate is in other places at this time of year?

• • • • • • •

To most of us Canadians, Christmas suggests a celebration in weather that is usually in a temperature considerably below freezing point, with snow banks ranging high, and skating to be enjoyed.

• • • • • • •

It is far from this though in many faraway lands—for instance, in India, where there is a large English population, it is frightfully hot during the Christmas season.

• • • • • • •

In some parts of Ireland and elsewhere a beautiful custom still lingers. On Christmas Eve a tall, thick candle is lit in each house and left to burn all night, while the door is set open so that should Christ again return to earth that night, He would not find the doors closed as before, but a light and a welcome in every home.

• • • • • • •

Isn't this a lovely custom? I hope we will think something of this to-night and to-morrow.

CAR TURNS TURTLE.

Party From Lakefield Meets With Accident While Returning From Peterborough.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 24—When Mrs. Creighton was driving her car home from Peterborough on Friday afternoon between 5 and 6 o'clock the car skidded and turned turtle. Miss Maude Creighton was badly bruised and suffered a broken rib while Mrs. Creighton and her two children were unhurt but badly shaken up. Mr. Marling, who was also in the car, escaped with a few bruises.

MOTHERS, DO THIS—

When the children cough, rub Musterole on their throats and chests. No telling how soon the symptoms may develop into croup, or worse. And then's when you're glad you have a jar of Musterole at hand to give prompt relief.

As first aid, Musterole is excellent. Keep a jar ready for instant use.

It is the remedy for adults, too. Relieves sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, chilblains, frosted feet and colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

MUSTEROLE
WILL NOT BLISTER

Better than a mustard plaster.

MARRIED IN TORONTO

A fashionable wedding took place when Richard Wace, son of Brig-Gen. E. G. Wace and Mrs. Wace of London, England, and his bride, Miss Jill Milliken, were married recently in Toronto. Only immediate friends attended the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Cecil Stuart. Mr. and Mrs. Wace are motoring to Washington and New York.

A Souvenir of the Amazon

By LATIMER J. WILSON

The dawn drew aside her gray curtain and a necklace of pearly clouds hung across the sky, dazzling the eyes of Miss Liberty standing on her little island in the bay. Coast-plying ships were anchored in the harbor when a long spic and span fabricated steel vessel, freshly arrived from South American ports, slid past and docked at her pier.

A short, bow-legged sailor, carrying an oblong box, came ashore. As straight as his seaworthy legs would convey him he went to one of those small lodging houses near the waterfront, deposited his box in a corner of the room that was assigned to him by the red-faced landlady, went to a barber shop in the neighborhood and then took a subway train to Harlem.

Later he advanced up the long flights that led to the top floor of a tenement in a crosstown street.

"It's me, Liz—can I come in?" he shouted in response to the inquiry that followed his knocking upon the door. Instantly the door flung open and two warm arms were around his neck.

"I was expectin' you, Dave. I knew it must be about time for your boat to dock." Then presently, after other fond greetings, the two sat down to breakfast.

"What d'ye think, Liz," broke forth her fiance with the energy that comes with a sudden idea. "Have you still got the bug about acting on the stage? I've brought what you asked for when I was here last trip, and it's a corker."

"You don't mean to say you've brought me one of them big snakes from monkey land! I'd most changed my mind since we talked about the snake-charming business. That girl up at Huber's didn't make near the salary she pretended, I found out. But, anyway, the stage will suit me better than workin' forever in a laundry. I'm still thinkin' of makin' my dayboo in theatricals on the night when they let anybody that's got a stunt take a chance."

"I'll tell you," suggested her partner, "tonight you call in the crowd. Get 'em all here and we'll have a regular dress rehearsal. Put on your flimseys on and we'll see how the act takes. C. of air makes that snake dopey. You can do anything with him when he's cold. Wrap him around your neck, put your head in his mouth, just do anything," said Dave.

That evening Dave was back in Harlem before the appointed hour. He opened the box and permitted the girl to look at the gift, the living souvenir of the swampy jungle.

"What do you feed it?" asked Lizzie.

"Why, I ain't thought of that," said Dave. "Piethongs is as economical as goldfish. I ain't given him a bite since I got him."

The girl left the room to get ready for the rehearsal, while the sailor welcomed the guests that were beginning to arrive.

When the time arrived, the girl stepped out from the next room dressed prettily in a carnival costume of deep red. Her manager came forward and held up his hand.

"Ladies and gents," he said, "let me introduce Lady Liza and her trained snake straight from the jungle. His name is Ana, South American for Anaconda. He eats 'm alive, but he's under the spell of the charmer. She'll show what she can do with him." And at the conclusion he lifted the lid of the long box and handed out the reptile.

The girl instinctively drew back at the proffered souvenir of the jungle, it was such a heavy tangled mass to be handled. But its apparent apathy encouraged her, and in a few moments she and her partner had untangled its long body. First she wound it in festoons around her arms. Then with admirable courage she wrapped it around her waist. The performance proceeded to the utmost satisfaction of everyone.

The air in the room grew warm. It must have approached in degree that of the home of "Ana," and thus served to bring back the dormant life of the tropics. The reptile realized that a living, warm body was within his coils.

"Quick! Get him off" blurted the girl as she felt the reptile tightening around her neck.

Dave ran to her aid. He tugged hard, to no pu pose. The python tightened his grip and the girl's face turned purple.

"Help me, for God's sake," shouted the sailor. "Open the window; help me get her out into the air; it's the only way to make him let go."

In a minute the window was open and the girl's body was pressed out into the cool night air. As by magic the python stiffened into its apathetic state, and in anoth r instant was uncoiled.

Shortly after daylight the next morning, twenty-four hours after the docking of the South American vessel, Prof. Anderton was passing through a deserted stretch of pavement in Union Square. He noticed a bundle that at first seemed merely a pack of newspapers. Curiosity caused him to stop and prod the bundle with the end of his cane. The paper tore, and he saw the glittering tip of the python's tail. A crowd collected, and a policeman came. In a few minutes the heavy club had ended the life of the denizen of the tropics.

By right of discovery the professor claimed the skin, and today he poin s to it hanging upon his wall and says:

"That's the mystery. How a live python found its way from the jungle of a tropical country to a bench in Union Square—that's what I'd like to know."

LES CANADIENS ARE IN THIRD POSITION

CONNELL PLAYS STELLAR GAME, HOLDS CANUCKS TO LONE TALLY

Montreal Team Outskates and Outshoots Senators For 1-0 Victory.

INTERESTING BATTLE.

Ottawa Offensive Lacks Sting For Goal Scoring—Team Jaded.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 24 (Canadian Press).—Canadiens took possession of third place in the standing of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League by defeating the Ottawa Senators, 1 to 0, before 10,000 fans here last night. It was an interesting battle which ran the gamut from brilliant hockey to the mediocre.

The Canucks led offensively throughout, consistently outskating and outshooting the Senators, but they found Connell, the Ottawa goalie, a tough nut to crack, and could beat him only once, Pete Lepine getting the lone goal in the second period when his hard shot from the Ottawa defence found a resting place in the twine. It was a good effort and worthy of the goal that resulted. Besides getitng the only counter of the game, Lepine gave a good account of himself throughout and only good work by Connell kept him from adding to his scoring average.

The Senators looked jaded, and were forced to play throughout without the services of their regular centre, the veteran, Frank Nighbor, who is out of the game with a twisted knee. Alex Smith replaced Nighbor at centre. Despite their condition, the Capitals managed to give the locals a battle, and backed by Connell's brilliant net-minding display, fought every minute of the game. Their offensive, however, lacked a sting, and Hainsworth did not have many of the close variety to turn away.

Canadiens missed a couple of goals by inches in the first period. Mantha circled the Ottawa defence early in the session, and skated unchecked in on the helpless Connell. The latter made his move, but Mantha held on to the puck, only to shoot a fraction of an inch wide of the post. On another occasion in the same period, Morenz led a three-man attack on the Ottawa citadel, all three Canucks getting in on the opposing net-minder with the puck in their possession. Connell fell and forced a scramble. About five players each took a swing at the loose disc, an Ottawa defence player finally connecting to send the disc out of danger. Connell had several such close calls during the remainder of the game, but always managed to emerge safely. On one occasion, in the first period, he fell on his arm, and in so doing struck his head on the ice. He was injured but was able to continue after a short rest.

CLAPP WARNS CLUB OWNERS

Players Must Not Protest Referees' Decisions in Canadian-American League.

DISORDER IN THE LOOP.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).— Canadian-American Hockey League club owners were warned last night by President Charles C. Clapp that they must curb their players from protesting against referees' decisions and inciting the crowds to boo and shower the ice with debris.

"We have reached a situation which needs mending," Clapp wrote to the club-owners in his circuit, "where teams are passing the buck to officials handling the game. Now I understand that officials are not perfect and that they are going to make plenty of errors. This situation is found wherever hockey is played. The officials are doing their best and we must support them and not endeavor to incite players and managers to alibi the losing of games by blaming the officials.

'It is time that the owners of teams in the Canadian-American League realized that the good of the game and their box office depend on the unity which must control our league.

"I have found it invariable that the losing team in our league places the blame on the one officiating while the winners simply concede that they are the better team. The owners will have to instruct their managers and coaches to hold their teams in check, and if the players do not obey their orders, the teams should punish them for insubordination. The next move of the league will have to be the placing of heavy fines on the clubs responsible for inciting the public, a practice which can be stopped by the various managers in the league."

FANS PREPARING FOR HOCKEY SEASON

Prevailing Weather Conditions Favorable For Ice On Opening Date.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Prevailing weather condition point favorably to a Christmas which will be enjoyed by the citizens of the town and district. Throughout the business section of the town, the streets have been gaily lighted by strings of varicolored lights, leading a decidedly holiday touch to the streets. The windows of the places of business are all dressed to attract the eye of the Christmas shoppers and the low temperature has added just enough frosting to the plate glass windows to add to their attractive appearance.

Icy streets have made motoring more or less hazardous, but in spite of the holiday traffic there have been no accidents of a serious nature from this cause. The first hockey game of the season is scheduled to be played on the second day in January. On the same night, there will be games in three towns, Campbellford, Frankford and Marmora. Madoc will be the local visitors, and a lively game is expected. If present temperatures continue, the ice will be ready for use before that time, and it is possible that an exhibition game may be arranged as the opener for the season. There is also a strong possibility that the Campbellford hockey club will stage a carnival at Davidson's Arena before the hockey schedule begins.

Devotees of the roarin' game are beginning to collect their brooms from summer storage and get in practice for the days to come when the skips will demand their skilful and diligent use. From the present appearance of the sheet of ice in the curling rink, that day is not far distant. Curling for Christmas is what practically every curler is anticipating. This year a bigger membership than the club has enjoyed for many seasons is expected and the "Pay as you enter" plan regarding the fees, is expected to assist the finances of the club materially. It has not been the rule in past seasons to press the members for the fees. This season the fee has been lowered and a new rule demands that the fee be paid before a member steps out on the ice. The fee has been reduced to five dollars, and Ross Ryder, secretary treasurer of the club, said he expected a "flock of fives" on the first day of play for the season.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

Peterborough had plenty of good hockey, a large amount of excitement, but no championships in 1905, the year in which Fred Whitcroft played with Midland.

The most excitement came probably in the series with Lindsay. The first game played here was full of fireworks, Lindsay taking a bad beating and going home hot under the collar.

It was expected that there would be trouble when the Petes went back to Lindsay. There was—plenty of it. A special train carried the blue and white team and 200 supporters up to Scugogville, and the Lindsay rink was crowded. So much so that a section of the fence gave way and toppled some of the spectators out on to the ice.

Before the battle started, J. D. Flaveile of Lindsay addressed the crowd, referring to the strong feeling existing between the two towns and pleading for fair play for the Peterborough team both on and off the ice.

The game itself was without incident. The Petes in great form took the lead early; were in front 4 to 2 at half-time, and in the second half drew rapidly away to finally win by 13 to 5.

There were signs of trouble as the team left the rink when one of the players was picked by a roughneck in the crowd. At the station the storm broke. As the Peterborough team and its supporters started to board the train they were bombarded by rotten eggs, snowballs, and lumps of coal. Dave Gilmour, a Peterborough fan, had his nose broken, and several others were injured. Then as the train pulled out there was a volley from both sides of the track, breaking many windows, and the fusilade was repeated at the crossing below the station, more windows going by the boards. The warfare was not on one side, however, for it is reported that somebody on the Peterborough train fired a bottle into the Lindsay crowd with considerable effect.

The riot gave railway and municipal police some busy hours trying to locate the ringleaders, but the inquiry did not have much success.

The teams who faced each other on that eventful night of January 23, 1908, were as follows:

Peterborough — Goal, Wasson; point, Glover; cover, Crowley; centre, Morgan; rover, Cavanah; right wing, Parnell; left wing, Graham.

Lindsay — Goal, McGrath; point, Reilly; cover, Irving; centre, Taylor; rover, Duffus; right wing, Pringle; left wing, Parkins.

Referee—W. A. McCord, Toronto.

Wednesday — The Berlin-Peterborough game of 1906.

WINNIPEG, Man., December 24. — Canadian Press. — Refused sanction of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, Manitoba's Varsity Hockey Team, holders of the Allan Cup, has cancelled the trip to the Pacific Coast, planned for the Christmas recess. The Canadian champs. were advised not to make the trip on the ground that at least two of the amateur teams against which they had planned to compete, were officered by "professional promoters."

Trail and Nelson, B. C., Edmonton and Calgary, Alberta, and Saskatoon and Regina, Saskatchewan, had been included on the itinerary of the jaunt on which the students were to have left to-morrow.

OTTAWA GOALIE AVERAGES .974

Tops Regular Net Minder In Matter of Shots Blocked.

CONACHER IS GOOD.

TORONTO, December 24. — Aleck Connell, slim goalkeeper of the Ottawa team, leads the net minders of the National Hockey League in the first quarter of the 1928-1929 series, which was concluded with the games of December 15. "Flat" Walsh, reserve goaler of Montreal Maroons, played four games with the New York Americans, before that club acquired Roy Worters and was scored upon only once, a phenomenal record, but Connell's performances extend over 12 games, in which he has been scored upon but eleven times, for the fine defensive average of .974. Walsh's mark of .993.

Worter's, the ex-Pirate midget, over whose disposition there was such a long drawn argument, has been doing well since he went into the net for Americans, and seems to have been an important factor in the extended winning streak of that club. In five games Worters has been scored upon eight times for an average of .960, making 196 saves. He is second to Connell among the regulars.

Benedict the Busiest.

Clint Benedict, long and angular cage guardian of the Montreal Maroons, and the veteran of all present-day goalers in point of service seems to have lost none of his cunningg over the long period of years. He was the busiest goaler in the league in the first quarter handling 475 shots in 13 games, and turning back all but 20 of these. Chabot of Toronto and Hainsworth of Canadiens have an equal average of .955.

A newcomer to the major league, "Dolly" Dolson, is carrying on with Detroit Cougars the remarkable record he compiled as the outstanding netminder in minor league hockey. In ten times Dolson was fired upon 369 times by opposing sharpshooters, and average of .970. He leads the American section. Joe Miller of Pittsburgh the hero of the last world series when he stepped into the gap for the Rangers after Chabot was hurt, is second to Dolson. Miller has handled 412 shots, and only fourteen passed him. Cecil ("Tiny") Thompson of Boston, and John Ross Roach of the Rangers, are close behind him. They each average .965.

Conacher High in Averages.

Compilation of the shots delivered against the goalers in the first quarter of the race show some interesting points. Defense men seem to have been the most effective on the offense in the Canadian division, for big Lionel Conacher, rearguard of the New York Americans, has the best average, and "King" Clancy, whirlwind defense player of the Ottawa Senators, has done the most sniping. Conacher took only 28 shots on opposing goalers, but he made these count to the extent of four goals, for an average of .1142. Clancy rifled 113 shots off opposing goalers, and netted five times.

Nels Stewart, big left wing of Montreal Maroons, not only led the scorers in the first section of the race, but the figures indicate that he was the most effective. In the games played up to Dec. 15 Stewart took 97 shots at opposing nets, and eight of these found their mark, giving him an average of .082, which is best among the regular forwards in the Canadian division. Billy Burch, the big centre of the New York Americans, led the forwards in actual number of shots, pelting the other goalers with 109 drives. He netted six of these. A coincidence among the statistics is that Morenz and Joliat, the doughty Canadien pair, each rifled 83 shots at opposing goalers in the first quarter and had the same number of points, Morenz getting four goals and four assists, Joliat five goals and three assists.

Hay has Most Shots.

George Hay, the great left winger of Detroit Cougars, was the most effective sniper in the American section, though not the leading scorer. He took only 39 shots at the rival nets, but scored four times, for an average of .105. Ty Arbour of Chicago had 35 shots and three goals. Bill Cook, who led the scorers at this point, took 72 shots to achieve his five goals. This player has the greatest number of shots fired by any regular forward in the American section, indicating that Cook is a pest for goalers of the other teams. Larry Aurie, Detroit winger, had more shots than any other player in this section, but failed to score a goal. The little winger bounced 85 shots off opposing goals. Hib Milks of Pittsburgh, did a lot of shooting, too, with 83 drives, but this netted him only one goal.

GIRLS ENTERTAIN YOUNG CHILDREN

The C.G.I.T. group of St. Andrews under the leadership of Mrs. J. A. McKone entertained the children of the Jackson Park Camp on Saturday evening Upwards of three hundred children of all ages who spent at least part of their holidays this summer at the Kiwanis Camp at Jackson's Park were served at supper by the girls of this group in their natty C.G.I.T. costumes.

Following supper a program of moving pictures was given in the main auditorium, the projector being operated by Hugh Waddell. During an interval between films the assembled gathering sang "Away in a Manger" and "God Save the King". At the conclusion of the pictures each boy and girl was the happy recipient of a bag of candy

Much credit is due Mrs. McKone and the girls of the group for the successful carying out of an entertainment of this proportion, the more so as it followed the annual Sunday school entertainment of Friday evening.

VIEWS ON SPORT

The Petes have lined up a good coach and should be soon able to begin work for the season's play on ice.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, under their chief, Odie Cleghorn, unfolded a strange attack and defeated the Maple Leafs, 3 to 2, at the arena Saturday night. The Pirates roamed from side to side and the only time the men were in their right positions was at the face off. This is considered unorthodox, the first thing a youngster is taught when learning hockey is to play his position; but it seemed to have great results against the weakening Leafs.

The Toronto Hockey League have hit on a good plan in selecting their referees. Every would-be bell ringer must appear before a special board of the T.H.L. and prove their qualifications and experience. The O.H.A. might do well to adopt the same plan with some improvements.

* * * * * *

Belleville has made plans for a city hockey league, but in the Quinte town no intermediate players are allowed to play City League and only two Junior O.H.A. players can be carried by each team.

American sport writers eulogizing on the Yale 6 to 1 victory over McGill at the Madison Square Gardens, Saturday night, state that it is only further proof of the rapid strides hockey has made in the United States It is said, that all the schools and colleges in the Eastern States, especially, have taken up the game enthusiastically and are learning its fine points quickly; in fact it is said further the brand of hockey played in these states is on a par with that played in the schools of Canada. One of the greatest American stars is Palmer, who plays left wing for Yale and whose services are said to be in demand by N.H.L. clubs and who is considered in the same light at Dave Trottier is in the Canadian. Certainly the Americans are making every effort to learn the game and they are taking the right course, teaching the boys while they are attending schols. There isn't a college team in Canada but that receives every year a pressing invitation from a group of American colleges to go over and play a series of games during the Christmas vacation, and during every series the American players study the Canadian methods and apply them. Canadian coaches have been hired by every college to train the players the game as it should be played.

The Six Nations Athletic Society composed of Indians of the Brant reserve under the presidency of Jesse Mos es has completed arrangements for a ten mile relay road race to be run on the reserve on New Year's Day. It is reported that there are many fine ruuners among the Indians and Percy Wyer has invited a junior team to run in the three mile event at the Christmas Day races in Toronto.

* * * * * *

A writer in the New York Daily News says: "In amateur hockey, the standard is lower, and anyone who approaches professional perfection appears to be miraculously good. Amateur hockey was at its best many years ago, about but turn of the century, before the game had been put on a business basis." Certainly the brand of hockey played in the O.H.A. this year may not be on a par with that of some years ago because of the inroads of the pros. But one does not have to go back to the beginning of the century to find brilliant amateur teams. Consider the Soo Greyhounds of five years ago, the Winnipeg Eskimos, first Olympic hockey champions, the Port Arthur team, the Varsity Grads, the Peterborough champions of three years ago and this claim shows its fallacy. And reports on the first senior game this year between St. Michael's team and Varsity makes it appear that the teams gave a great exhibition of hockey. With amateur associations like the O.H.A. operating and teaching the young players hockey no sympathy should be wasted on amateur hockey.

"Sharp Shooters," Fox Films production which opens an engagement at the Regent Theatre to-day, is one of the most absorbing comedy-dramas that has come to the screen in many a day. Every minute of the picture is filed with action, suspense, comedy, romance and pathos.

George O'Brien and Lois Moran, who are seen in the stellar roles, are superbly cast as the hard-boiled American sub and the little French dancing girl. Both O'Brien and Miss Moran show their versatility in this production, running the gamut of emotions, from tense drama to riotous comedy.

Besides these two talented young stars the very locale and plot of the story is entirely novel and differena. It is an original by Randall H. Faye, and the action travels rapidly from French Morocco to New York's East Side.

Lois Moran is cast as a little French girl who entertains by her dancing in a low dive in Morocco. There she meets O'Brien, a typical, handsome sailor.

Lois falls madly in love with him and when his ship leaves she promises to follow him to New York, little thinking that she is just another incident in the gob's life.

After the death of Lois' father she finds her way to New York. Due to the passport difficulties, she slips from the immigrant officers and in a flimsy row boat starts drifting down the East River. Here she is picked up by a bootleg king who befriends her and gives her a job in his dance hall.

From then on the suspense is terrific. George finds Lois and realizes his love for her when he finds her in danger. The climax of the picture comes when George, at the head of a gang of sailors, conducts a self-appointed raid on the bootleg joint.

Others in the cast who give noteworthy portrayals are William Demarest. Tom Dugan, Noah Young. Gwen Lee, Nancy Carroll and Joseph Swickard. J. G. Blystone directed and made every scene of the picture grip with some emotional element.

AT THE CAPITOL.

BIG CHRISTMAS ATTRACTION AT THE CAPITOL, OPENING TO-DAY. "THE STREET ANGEL," THE PRODUCTION THAT EVERYONE HAS BEEN WAITING FOR, WITH JANET GAYNOR AND CHARLES FARRELL. THREE PERFORMANCES ON CHRISTMAS DAY, 2.30, 7 AND 9.

The year's greatest picture, "The Street Angel," with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, will be the big Christmas feature at the Capitol, opening to-day.

This picture again brings together the triumvirate responsible for the successful screen translation of the John Golden stage play "7th Heaven"—Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, and Director Frank Borzage.

In this new attraction, which comes direct from its long run at the Globe Theatre, New York, the two youthful film lovers are transferred from the scenes of their first triumph in the sewers and attics of Paris to the streets and ateliers of Naples.

Miss Gaynor will be seen as a waif of the wharves who joins a small travelling circus in order to free herself from the persecution of the Neapolitan gendarmes. Farrell portrays the role of an itinerant Italian artist who, enamored by her charms, follows her about the countryside.

Director Borzage, who is of Italian parentage, has long been a student of Latin manners and customs, but despite his lifelong familiarity with the theme of "Street Angel," he spent many weeks in and about Naples, while vacationing in Europe last year, gathering data and atmosphere which was to aid him in bringing the story to the screen.

If you buy out of town,
and I buy out of town,
and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

Will Train With Leafs.

Frank Coleman, southpaw hurler of the Hanover Club of the Blue Ridge League, will get a trial with the Toronto Leafs next spring. Coleman pitched the Hanover Club into a pennant and was rated as the best boxman in that fast circuit last season.

PLANS BIGGER HOBBY SHOW

Model Aircraft Will Be New Department In This Year's Program.

COMMITTEES FORMED.

Present indications point for a bigger and better Hobby Show in 1929 and the President, Fred McNeely, of the Y.M.C.A., announces that plans are under way for a show of hitherto unattained proportions. The various committees are now being former and a general meeting of the directors and executive of the exposition is to be called in the near future.

A new and interesting department is to be included, that of model aircraft. This department is likely to be very popular with the boys of the city and ought to result in a great many entries.

All boys will do well to make enquiries about the different departments so as to gain the advantage of an early start.

PENNY POSTAGE IS WELCOMED

ential bodies here who are urging a similar course on the British Government.

"We have been urging this on every British Postmaster-General since the war," declared the secretary of the Associatd Chambrs of Commerce today to the Canadian Press, "and have had several deputations to them. The Postmaster invariably replies that though he would like to institute a return to penny postage, it would involve a loss to the postal service of anything from seven to five million pounds. Against this there is the fact that the Postal Department in the past year produced a surplus of seven and a half million, which we claim is merely saving that much in general taxation by drawing it from the postal service.

"We think the real opponent of a restored penny postage is the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who perhaps excusably, does not like to relinquish this 'found money.' However, we will have a meeting early in January, when we shall probably arrange for another deputation to see the authorities on the matter."

THREE FOXES STOLEN

TORONTO, Dec. 24.— (Canadian Press).—Three silver black foxes, valued at $750 were stolen from the yard of Miss Constance Boulton and her sister Elizabeth, who keep a small fox farm, it was learned by police here Friday. Blood stains found in the pen indicate that the animals were killed by the thieves before being removed. Police are investigating.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS

LAKEFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, December 24. — The annual concert of the Lakefield High School was the outstanding social event of the pre-Christmas season and took place in the auditorium of the Town Hall on Thursday evening, December 20. Following the custom adopted last year, the entertainment consisted of a dramatic entertainment given entirely by the pupils, and with results equally good. Last year's production was "The Merchant of Venice—Up to Date" and exceedingly good and well adapted to the purpose. This year "Lost—A Chaperone" was a jolly college play, teeming with witty sayings, funny situations, misunderstandings, and laughter. The cast was well chosen, and each player well adapted to the parts assigned, and there was a complete absorption in the character which lifted the performance above the average amateur production.

The audience was very appreciative and heartily enjoyed the jokes and bits of by-play which were exceptionally clever and never once overdone.

The cast of characters was:

Ruth French, Helen Porter; Alice Bennett, Merle Crawford; Marjorie Tyndall, Margaret Tanner; Agnes Bates, Mary Tanner; Blanche Westcott, Lulu Smith; Mrs. Higgins and Mrs. Sparrow, Reba Preston; Lizzie, Bessie Thompson; Mandy, Dorothy Sutton; Jack Abbott, Harold Schwark; Fred Lawton, Holley Jewell; George Higgins, Clayton Bullock; Dick Horton, Russell Elliott; Tom Crosby, Dominico White; Raymond Fitz Henry, Ronald Kemp.

The first act took place in the living-room of a summer cottage which was at the time a maiden's paradise, as five college girls were spending their vacation there having arrived the previous evening with only one mishap, the chaperone had missed connections and had not arrived. Although each one was terribly frightened, one and all put up a stiff front and feigned great bravery so that no one dared confess to fear. Five totally different types—Ruth, jolly and practical, Agnes, day-dreamings and superior ;Alice, petulant and indolent, Blanche, affected but agreeable, and Marjorie, the hostess, inconsequent and easy going, constituted the house party. They receive a visit from a curious neighbor and her equally curious daughters who are anxious to sell vegetables to the camp.

The second act showed a vastly different scene, a tent in the woods, a clothes line with what appeared to be a complete wardrobe on the line, very crude culinary arrangements, and three college boys, the owner of the aforesaid wardrobe had taken an involuntary bath in the lake, and was swathed in a bright scarlet blanket draped with classical grace about his person. The boys are enjoying the camp, but find the cooking a problem, and have an amusing experience with boiling rice which surely "did swell." While George was impatiently waiting for his wardrobe to dry and Fred was trying in vain to keep pace with the swelling rice, Jack received a succession of young lady visitors, Miss French, Miss Bates, and Miss Bennett, each of which implores him to frighten her brave camp mates. George is a cousin of Marjorie, the hostess, and the visitors each desire to see George, who, of course, is unable to appear.

A plot results, and three lumbermen (?) are induced, for the rich fee of one dollar each, to lend their wardrobes and axes to the boys for their lark, and to await their return at the camp. However, the lumbermen are also college boys working in the camp for the vacation, and one of them discovers that his own sweetheart is one of the girls who are to be frightened, so the trio start off as a rescue party.

The third act showed the girls' cottage with the frightened girls waiting on the three marauders. The rescuers arrive and also the lost chaperone, who had spent the night at Nassau, under the most uncomfortable circumstances, which she related at considerable length. The ending is, of course, all that one can expect, and indicates that the summer will be both pleasant and profitable to both camps.

Each part was so well taken that it would be unfair to make comparisons, but one must specially mention the work of Helen Porter, Merle Crawford, Mary Tanner, Clayton Bullock and Harold Schwark, who, with very heavy parts, acquitted themselves particularly well, living the parts they played so naturally that it gave reality to the play. In this regard they were not exceptional, as each member of the entire cast gave an unaffected performance which won much applause from the audience and many complimentary remarks during the play and later in the evening.

The hall was decorated in a very artistic manner with orange and black crepe paper and the letters L. H. S. (Lakefield High School) used effectively. The school colors were noticeable everywhere and were a pleasing reminder to old pupils present of the old school, which has a long list of distinguished graduates.

During the intermissions The Grove Orchestra played a popular program of music and during the second part of the evening provided music for the dancing.

Between the first and second acts of the play as an important and interesting interlude, J. W. Ridpath, chairman of the School Board extended a welcome to those present on behalf of the Literary Society and the staff of the High School. Mr. Ridpath pleaded his retiring disposition as an excuse for not giving a more lengthy address.

T. A. Chaplin, principal of the Public School, was asked to present the Strathcona Medal, which is presented each year by the Strathcona Trust to the cadet in each corps taking the highest average in nine competitions. It was won this year by Norman Lemay.

Mr. Ridpath presented the girls' championship medal for the Field Day sports to Ruby Tedford, who had the highest number of points, and the boys' championship medal for the sports to Ronald Kemp.

A prize given this year for the first time was that offered by the Diamond Jubilee committee for the highest marks in Canadian History at the entrance examination made by a pupil of the Lakefield Public school. A bond was purchased with a part of the surplus funds and the interest will be used as the prize which is intended to promote greater interest in the study of our country, its problems and resources and to make for better citizenship. This prize was won by Thelma Hendren.

As a fitting close to this important part of the proceedings, Helen Nicholls presented Miss Curtis with a bouquet of pink carnations, and Marion Wagner presented Miss Connall with a bouquet of white carnations, as tokens of appreciation for their faithful work and their interest in the pupils' welfare.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

There was a large attendance of pupils and their parents and a fair number of ex-pupils, all of whom joined in heartiest enconiums on the splendid performance.

Great credit must be given to J. F. Harvey and Misses Curtis and Connal, the staff of the high school, and to the literary society of which Jack Nicholls is president and Reta Preston is secretary.

CHILDREN OF CLUB ARE ENTERTAINED

Successful Christmas Concert Is Held in W. O. W. Hall.

The members of the Caledonian Club entertained their children to a delightful Christmas tree entertainment in the W.O.W. Hall on Friday night. The hall was filled to capacity by members and children, and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy the program which the children put on. A ladies' committee, under the convenorship of Mrs. James Reid, was as follows: Mesdames McArthur, McPhate, Jackson, Wyllie, French, Duthie and Moffatt. These ladies arranged the tables, which were tastefully decorated with red and white streamers. The large Christmas tree, which was placed on the platform, was put up by Messrs. Clark and Miller, who very artistically decorated it with colored electric lights and tinsel, so that when the little guests arrived at 7.30, everything presented a very festive appearance.

Robert Veitch, the president, occupied the chair for the program, and each number was well received, and many showed remarkable talent.

After a lengthy program, the company enjoyed the refreshments provided for them—the children being seated at tables, which were laden with dainties. After the tea came the principal act—the appearance of Santa Claus. He was hailed with great delight by the little folks, who sang "For he's a jolly good fellow." Santa distributed the gifts along with bags of fruit and candy.

After the juniors had received their presents from Santa, a social hour was spent in games.

Another item of interest was the announcement of the names of the winners in the bowling contest held at Water Street Bowling Alleys. The lucky winners were Mrs. Duthie and A. Jackson, who each received a goose.

The following is the program:

FIRE DESTROYS FARM PROPERTY

LINDSAY, Dec. 24.—A disastrous fire occurred on the farm of James Kenny, who resides about three miles south of Oakwood, in Mariposa township, last week when his barn, together with twenty-three head of cattle, fourteen pigs, three horses and about two hundred hens were destroyed.

Roy Kenny, the fourteen year old son, was in the barn doing the chores, his father being in the bush at Haliburton. The lantern exploded and in the twinkling of an eye the interior was a mass of flames. The boy summoned aid, and neighbors were quickly on the scene. Every effort was made to save some of the stock, but to no avail. Most of the season's crop as was as practically al the farm implements were also destroyed. A brave and successful fight was put up by the neighbors in staying the progress of the flames, thereby saving the other buildings They were assisted by a contingent of the Lindsay Fire Department.

MOST COMPLETE COURSE GIVEN

Peterborough Business College Carries All Modern Training Equipment.

ACCURACY IS KEYNOTE.

"We have one of the best-equipped and finest business colleges in the province and we endeavor, with our modern equipment, to thoroughly familiarize our students in the full use of this equipment so that when they go out into the business world they can use them intelligently and to the best advantage," said J. A. McKone, principal of the Peterborough Business College to-day, in an interview with The Examiner.

The words of Mr. McKone were well borne out when the large bright class rooms were inspected. Some of the equipment on which the students get full practice are: two modern adding machines, a Dalton and a Burroughs, which are coming into more frequent use in all offices to-day; a mimeograph machine for duplicating letters; an Elliot addressing machine used especially in circular mailing; a mimescope, which aids greatly in copying printed matter. One of the most interesting of the many modern business machines in the college is the dictaphone. This has been constructed on the same principle as the phonograph; the person dictating the letter speaks into the mouthpiece, his words are imprinted on a circular cylinder, very similar to the early Edison records; the cylinder is then removed, placed upon another machine with earphones, and the stenographer hears the full message as it was spoken and types it off at a speed which she can regulate to suit herself. The dictatphone consists of a set of three machines,—the one that receives the message, the transmitter, and the third machine which shaves off the grooves of the messages from the cylinders and prepares them, that they may be used again.

Department Most Complete

The typewriting department of the school is most complete, there being a typewriter for every two students, and all the typewriters are of the most recent and improved kind. Each student gets three periods of forty minutes each at typing during the day, and as much extra time as they desire. The pupils learn to type to music, thus getting an easy and regular rhythm which helps them in accuracy and touch. The music begins slow in the first lesson and then the beat is gradually increased in succeeding lesson until a point is reached, that keeping time to the beat of the music the student does forty words a minute. In order to be graduated and receive an efficiency certificate the students must accomplish a speed of sixty words a minute.

Gregg shorthand is taught and this is one of the simplest yet most efficient shorthand courses yet discovered. The final speed required before graduation is one hundred and twenty words a minute.

time of general rejoicing and happiness no one should hold spite against another If there had been quarrels this was the season when they should be forgotten and when humanity should be united in rejoicing To the children the speaker said that although they had no fathers and mothers they had many warm friends, among whom were the members of the Rotary Club.

John Edgar for the Children's Aid Society and Mrs. Lynch for St. Vincent's Orphanage, expressed the thanks of the children and wished the Rotarians a Merry Christmas.

President W. R. Moris congratulated Rotarian Gordon S. Matthews upon his re-election to the Utilities Commission for another term and expressed pleasure in the fact that Rotarians Dr. A. Moir and Claude H. Rogers had offered their services as members of the Board of Education.

The president also called attention to and endorsed the appeal that was being made on behalf of the Boy Scouts' Association.

Rotarian Fred L. Roy, District Scout Commissioner, recommended the appeal. The Scout movement was a splendid training school for boys, he declared, and locally the organization had been successful in enlisting the services of some fine young leaders from whom good work could be expected.

Christmas greetings from Governor Bob Turnbull were read to the gathering by President Morris who also read the answer he was about to send on behalf of the club.

Harold Can't Help But Have a Merry Christmas.

Dear Marion:

Our little four-year-old son was so impressed by my stories of the children who wouldn't be getting any Christmas gifts that he got me to count up the coppers he had saved in his little bank and wished me to send them to them for Christmas. Am enclosing his dollar which I hope will help to make some poor child a little happier on Christmas.

Wish best of luck to your page.

SUPPER CLUB HAS CHRISTMAS TREE

Friday Night Boys Donate Many Presents To Santa's Pals.

The Christmas entertainment of the Friday Night Supper Club at the Y.M.C.A. was a great success. Over sixty of the boys turned out to what was voiced as the best meeting of the year. The club rooms were decorated with Christmas decorations and a large Christmas tree. The tree was decorated with a present for each of the boys as well as the usual tinsel., small colored glass globes and tiny electric lights. Each of the boys bought a small present which was placed on the tree and later taken off to be given away. The girls who have so kindly helped with the suppers during the fall were honorary guests of the occasion. Bert Granik, who has been a popular member of the club, and who is leaving the city for Oshawa, where he has accepted a position, was then made the recipient of a presentation. Bert will be greatly missed by the members of the club as well as by many different organizations around the city.

Then the fun began. Bruce Fraser and Bob Killaly acted as Santas for the occasion and were ably assisted at times by Mr. Wallace and "Red" Eastwood. Each of the girls, Mrs. Roper, and the head cook were presented with a large box of chocolates. Mr. Wallace, the worthy chairman of the club, was then presented with a gift.

Gift for Everyone.

A gift was taken off the tree and given to each one of the boys. This was the cause of a great deal of merriment. Each of the boys in turn was called up to the front and presented with his gift, which he was obliged to open in front of everyone. Some of the gifts were comical while others were useful.

The presents ranged from toy cars and kazoos to silk stockings given to Bim Sturgeon. After the tree was stripped and the presents given out, those who did not want to keep their presents placed them on the front table so that they could be given to the Santa's Pals Christmas Cheer organization in order that they might be given out to the less fortunate children of the city. A large number of the gifts were turned in to this noble cause. The meeting closed with the reading of the creed.

Team Is Gaining.

Because of the large turnout last night the membership campaign was given a great boost. A large percentage of each team was present, and the captains are doing their best to maintain or break out into the lead of this race. Hec. McLeod's team has been leading since the start, but during the last few weeks Crawford Hall's team has been catching up. The teams are gradually closing in on each other, making the race a more even one. The standing of the teams is as follows:

Y.W.C.A. ENTERTAINS JUNIOR CLASSES

Children of Shelter and St. Vincent's Orphanage Are Guests at Christmas Tree.

One of the most successful and jolliest Christmas parties for children held at the Y.W.C.A. in many years, was the entertainment by the Juniors' and Babies' Classes on Saturday morning, when these two classes had as guests children from the Shelter and St. Vincent's Orphanage, also the members of the "Y" Saturday Afternoon Club. The big gymnasium resounded all morning with the happy cries of little children, enjoying themselves hugely with the assistance of a real honest-to-goodness Santa Claus from the Teco Store, and a gift tree laden with presents and good things to eat. The gathering numbered over two hundred and eighty children.

The Physical Committee of the "Y" donated oranges and a large box of gifts was received from Madam Merriam and the staff of her store, and Mrs. T. Johnston. The evening gym. classes also donated gifts.

The program consisted of games, gymnasium exercises, and dances by the Junior Interpretive dancing class. The big gymnasium and tree were beautifully decorated for the occasion.

Members of the Board who assisted were the president, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Mrs. J. F. H. Wallace, and Mrs. E. E. Harvey. Ladies assisting with the distribution of gifts were Miss Maud Perry and several leaders of the classes, Mrs. V. Gray, Mrs. Beryl Willis, the Misses Jean Fairweather, Hazel Bradley, and Gladys Gerard.

CHILDREN OF CLUB ARE ENTERTAINED

Successful Christmas Concert Is Held in W. O. W. Hall.

The members of the Caledonian Club entertained their children to a delightful Christmas tree entertainment in the W.O.W. Hall on Friday night. The hall was filled to capacity by members and children, and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy the program which the children put on. A ladies' committee, under the convenorship of Mrs. James Reid, was as follows: Mesdames McArthur, McPhate, Jackson, Wyllie, French, Duthie and Moffatt. These ladies arranged the tables, which were tastefully decorated with red and white streamers. The large Christmas tree, which was placed on the platform, was put up by Messrs. Clark and Miller, who very artistically decorated it with colored electric lights and tinsel, so that when the little guests arrived at 7.30, everything presented a very festive appearance.

Robert Veitch, the president, occupied the chair for the program, and each number was well received, and many showed remarkable talent.

After a lengthy program, the company enjoyed the refreshments provided for them—the children being seated at tables, which were laden with dainties. After the tea came the principal act—the appearance of Santa Claus. He was hailed with great delight by the little folks, who sang "For he's a jolly good fellow." Santa distributed the gifts along with bags of fruit and candy.

After the juniors had received their presents from Santa, a social hour was spent in games.

Another item of interest was the announcement of the names of the winners in the bowling contest held at Water Street Bowling Alleys. The lucky winners were Mrs. Duthie and A. Jackson, who each received a goose.

The following is the program:

FIRE DESTROYS FARM PROPERTY

LINDSAY, Dec. 24.—A disastrous fire occurred on the farm of James Kenny, who resides about three miles south of Oakwood, in Mariposa township, last week when his barn, together with twenty-three head of cattle, fourteen pigs, three horses and about two hundred hens were destroyed.

The lantern exploded and in the twinkling of an eye the interior was a mass of flames. The boy summoned aid, and neighbors were quickly on the scene. Every effort was made to save some of the stock, but to no avail. Most of the season's crop as was as practically al the farm implements were also destroyed. A brave and successful fight was put up by the neighbors in staying the progress of the flames, thereby saving the other buildings They were assisted by a contingent of the Lindsay Fire Department.

The total loss is estimated to be around $7,000 and is practicaly covered by insurance.

MOST COMPLETE COURSE GIVEN

Peterborough Business College Carries All Modern Training Equipment.

ACCURACY IS KEYNOTE.

"We have one of the best-equipped and finest business colleges in the province and we endeavor, with our modern equipment, to thoroughly familiarize our students in the full use of this equipment so that when they go out into the business world they can use them intelligently and to the best advantage," said J. A. McKone, principal of the Peterborough Business College to-day, in an interview with The Examiner.

The words of Mr. McKone were well borne out when the large bright class rooms were inspected. Some of the equipment on which the students get full practice are: two modern adding machines, a Dalton and a Burroughs, which are coming into more frequent use in all offices to-day; a mimeograph machine for duplicating letters; an Elliot addressing machine used especially in circular mailing; a mimescope, which aids greatly in copying printed matter. One of the most interesting of the many modern business machines in the college is the dictaphone. This has been constructed on the same principle as the phonograph; the person dictating the letter speaks into the mouthpiece, his words are imprinted on a circular cylinder, very similar to the early Edison records; the cylinder is then removed, placed upon another machine with earphones, and the stenographer hears the full message as it was spoken and types it off at a speed which she can regulate to suit herself. The dictatphone consists of a set of three machines,—the one that receives the message, the transmitter, and the third machine which shaves off the grooves of the messages from the cylinders and prepares them, that they may be used again.

Department Most Complete

The typewriting department of the school is most complete, there being a typewriter for every two students, and all the typewriters are of the most recent and improved kind. Each student gets three periods of forty minutes each at typing during the day, and as much extra time as they desire. The pupils learn to type to music, thus getting an easy and regular rhythm which helps them in accuracy and touch. The music begins slow in the first lesson and then the beat is gradually increased in succeeding lesson until a point is reached, that keeping time to the beat of the music the student does forty words a minute. In order to be graduated and receive an efficiency certificate the students must accomplish a speed of sixty words a minute.

Gregg shorthand is taught and this is one of the simplest yet most efficient shorthand courses yet discovered. The final speed required before graduation is one hundred and twenty words a minute.

time of general rejoicing and happiness no one should hold spite against another If there had been quarrels this was the season when they should be forgotten and when humanity should be united in rejoicing To the children the speaker said that although they had no fathers and mothers they had many warm friends, among whom were the members of the Rotary Club.

John Edgar for the Children's Aid Society and Mrs. Lynch for St. Vincent's Orphanage, expresed the thanks of the children and wished the Rotarians a Merry Christmas.

President W. R. Morris congratulated Rotarian Gordon S. Matthews upon his re-election to the Utilities Commission for another term and expressed pleasure in the fact that Rotarians Dr. A. Moir and Claude H. Rogers had offered their services as members of the Board of Education.

The president also called attention to and endorsed the appeal that was being made on behalf of the Boy Scouts' Association.

Rotarian Fred L. Roy, District Scout Commissioner, recommended the appeal. The Scout movement was a splendid training school for boys, he declared, and locally the organization had been successful in enlisting the services of some fine young leaders from whom good work could be expected.

Christmas greetings from Governor Bob Turnbull were read to the gathering by President Morris who also read the answer he was about to send on behalf of the club.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR

"They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy (compassion), Jonah 2, 8.

The doctrine of "endless torment" is surely one lying vanity, therefore we can understand why those who preach and propagate this God-defaming doctrine lose compassion for man and beast.

Many have the doctrine of endless torment incorporated in their creed, but who in heart do not believe it, the majority of these people have compassion.

An honest real belief in this doctrine of "endless torment" leads men into crime, despair, insanity and suicide. The statement that if men believe that endless torment and not death is the punishment for sin, it will deter them from a life of wickedness is utterly false. It is the goodness of God that leads men to repentance. To do evil that good may come is futile, therefore telling untruths to the people does not bring any good results.

She was such a dear daughter,
So patient, kind and true,
There never was a dark cloud,
But she saw the sunshine through.
Sometimes when we think of Mary,
She seems to be so near,
That we hear her dear voice saying,
don't grieve, dear, I am near.
No death can divide us from Mary,
Nor sever the cords of love,
She is resting sweetly with Jesus
In that beautiful home above.

HILL.—In loving memory of Sherman Ernest Hill, who passed away on December 24th, 1926.
We weep with grief that one so dear
No more can share our smile or tear,
But weep with joy that God has given
The hope to meet again in Heaven.
But call it not death, it is life begun.
The waters are past, the home is won;
The ransomed spirit has reached the shore
Where they weep and suffer and sin no more.

IN MEMORIAM.

Hill.—In loving memory of Sherman E. Hill, who was drowned Dec. 24, 1926:
The midnight stars are gleaming
On a lone and silent grave;
Beneath sleeps one we loved,
But one we could not save.

He bade no one a last farewell,
He said good-bye to none;
The heavenly gates were opened wide,
A loving voice said "Come."

His loving voice is silent
His true heart ceased to beat;
We miss the well known footsteps
And the face we used to greet.

We often think of the days gone by
When we were all together;
A shadow on our lives is cast,
A loved one gone forever.

IN MEMORIAM.

SCHWEIER. — In sweetest memory of our dearly beloved granddaughter and niece, Margaret Irene Schweier, who was called to higher service on December 25th, 1926

And that the one we loved so well
Is only gone before.
—Sadly missed by Grandparents and Family.

LIPSETT. — In loving memory of a dear friend, Mary Lipsett, who died December 24, 1922.
Just a token of affection,
Just a memory, fond and true;
Only a remembrance of dear Mary,
As I often think of you.
As I loved you, so I missed you,
In my memory you are dear;
Remembered always,
Often bringing a silent tear.

say that the King was definitely in a much better position than a week ago.

Assurances were given that nothing has taken place to check the course of the King's progress thus far and the doctors were stated to be satisfied with the way things are going. There was a distinct air of hopefulness among household officials this morning.

Prince Goes Hunting.

The Prince of Wales went hunting to-day with the Quorn hounds, the first time that he has been in the field since his return from Africa.

The recent improvement in King George's condition was stated to have warranted his going further afield than Buckingham Palace.

The Prince went down to his Lenton Grove farm, Nottingham, last night and this morning motored to the meet of the famous Quorn Hounds at Wymeswold. His hunters had been sent on from his stables at Melton Mowbray.

The Prince was expected back in London to-night and will have his first meeting with his brother, the Duke of Gloucester since they parted in Mid-Africa some time ago on their hunting trip which was interrupted by the King's illness.

Beg Your Pardon.

Donald Welch, who took the part of Peter Crachit in Dickens' Christmas Carol, which was presented in Murray Street Sunday School on Friday evening, was unintentionally omitted from the account which appeared in Saturday's Examiner.

At the presentation made to Mrs. Walter Magee, organist of St. John's Church in Emily, when a wrist watch was given her as a token of esteem by the congregation and choir of the church, the address was read by the rector, the Rev. Mr. Weir, and was signed, on behalf of the congregation, by T. B. Jones and E. J. Blackwell.

PEACE SEEMS CERTAIN NOW IN REPUBLICS

Bolivia and Paraguay Believed Willing To Approve Protocol.

MEDIATION PLANNED.

Draft Prepared and Court of Nine Judges Is Outlined.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press). — The peace and goodwill of the Christmas season was reflected to-day in the Bolivian-Paraguayan dispute which seemed nearer a peaceful settlement than at any time since troops clashed on the border early in December.

A special committee named by the Pan-American conference has agreed on the general terms of a protocol to be sent the two countries for approval. This action was taken yesterday after Bolivia replied to a questionnaire sent her by the special committee. Paraguay had previously sent an answer to a similar questionnaire which asked for a definition of the points at issue in the quarrel and suggestions for the make-up of the proposed conciliation tribunal.

The special committee, named for the purpose of aiding in the mediation of the controversy, said that the replies of both Paraguay and Bolivia were considered satisfactory, agreeing on basic points, and that after further information from the two governments, a report would be submitted to the conference.

To Appoint Tribunal

The hope was expressed that before the end of the week both Paraguay and Bolivia will have agreed to the protocol now in the process of formation. If the protocol is adopted by the conference, the appointment of judges on the tribunal of conciliation would follow. The work of actual mediation would be left to this tribunal.

The protocol being drafted for the consideration of Bolivia and Paraguay is in charge of a committee consisting of Dr. Martua of Peru, Minister Diez De Medina of Bolivia, and Eligio, Paraguayan delegate to the conference.

While the protocol was being shaped, other members of the conference went ahead with work in a general treaty of arbitration and conciliation affecting the American republics. The conference was called for the purpose of discussing and drafting a pact of this nature, but work was delayed somewhat by consideration of the Bolivian-Paraguayan dif-

Children Are Hit Hard

Twenty-nine Deaths Have Occurred since Epidemic Started.

UNDER CONTROL.

Health Officials Say There Are Over Million Cases in United States.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—Fourteen deaths since Christmas Eve brought the total of influenza deaths in this city to 29 since the epidemic broke some two weeks ago. Doctors and hospital officials, however, declared that the epidemic was under control. Five of the deaths included children of the Sick Children's Hospital.

While four of the deaths in the Children's Hospital were local children; one was Baby Valentine of St. Catharines.

Three deaths occurred yesterday at St. Michael's Hospital, where there are 45 cases, which number was augmented Christmas day with four light cases of the disease.

With thirty-three ill in the Western Hospital, one death occurred, several 'flu-pneumonia cases were admitted yesterday to the General Hospital where one death occurred.

Other deaths included Lieut.-Col. J. A. Allen, whose wife and other members of his family are also ill; Albert E. Carr, 45, who died after ten days illness. He was born in Belleville, and came here about two years ago, and John N. Baldwin, 82, an inmate of the Oddfellows' Home, and until 1925 in the grocery business in Ottawa.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 26. — Canadian Press. — Public Health officials said to-day that complete reports on influenza during the holiday period probably would indicate that there were more than a million cases in the United States.

Preliminary reports received to-day indicated at least 770,160 cases in 22 states, public health officials said, for the week ended December 22, compared with 18,715 cases in these states the previous week. Officials based this comparison on actual reports of 82,032 for the latter and of 103,745 for the former. They added that while last week's report showed the number of cases decreasing in some western states, the decrease is more than counterbalanced by increases in others. It is not probable, they said,

MESSAGE FROM ROYAL CONSORT TELLS THANKS

Queen Expresses Appreciation of Assurance of Canada's Devotion.

KING IMPROVES.

Christmas Day Sees Progress Made With Strength Maintained.

OTTAWA, Ont., December 26 (Canadian Press). — A message from Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace where King George is slowly improving from his serious illness, was forwarded yesterday by the Governor-General, who is spending Christmas at the Citadel, Quebec City, to Premier Mackenzie King at Laurier House, Ottawa. "On this Christmas morning," said the Queen, "my children and I thank you from our hearts."

The Queen's message was in reply to one sent by Premier King on Sunday conveying to King George Christmas greetings on behalf of the Government and people of Canada who "join our prayers to those of all parts of the Empire for the complete restoration of Your Majesty to health and strength."

The message from Her Majesty was as follows:

"Please be assured that the message of greetings which you have so kindly sent on behalf of the King's Government in Canada and the people of the Dominion will be highly appreciated and valued by the King when his progress to recovery is sufficiently advanced for him to receive it personally. The expression of love and devotion of the Canadian people the knowledge of their prayers and sympathetic solicitude during the past anxious weeks, and the messages of joy and thankfulness to God for the hopeful condition of the King touch me profoundly, and on this Christmas morning my children and I thank you from our hearts. I look forward to the day when the King will be cheered and strengthened by this testimony that the heart of Canada is with him in weal and in woe."

"(Signed) MARY R."

A Good Day.

LONDON, Dec. 26 (Canadian Press Cable).—Christmas proved a good day for the King in his progress toward recovery, and a happy day for his united family, which rejoiced with the nation in the steady, continued improvement of the Sovereign.

The bulletin of the physicians at Buckingham Palace last night gave to the public the cheerful news that the Royal patient had passed a restful day, and shown improvement in the local condition of the diseased lung. Maintenance of strength was also reported, indicating that the general condition of the King was at least holding its own despite the long siege of illness.

Brief Bulletin Issued.

The brief bulletin, the only one of the day, said:

"The King has passed a quiet day, the local condition is improving, and the strength is maintained. The next bulletin will be issued this evening." It was signed by His Majesty's regular physicians, Sir Stanley Hewett, Lord Dawson of Penn, and by his surgeon, Sir Hugh Rigby. Newspapers were not published yesterday, nor will they be on Boxing Day, to-day. The bulletin was therefore posted in the windows of post offices in all towns having telegraph stations, and it was also broadcast by radio.

Family Reunion.

All members of the Royal family except two sisters of the King, Queen Maud of Norway and the Princess Royal, were at the Palace yesterday participating in the homely family pleasures incident to the season. They attended divine service in the morning, and then all lunched together, with the exception of the Prince of Wales.

The heir to the British Throne left the Palace to make an appeal by radio in behalf of his unemployed subjects who are suffering distress as the result of the closing of the mines.

Last night Queen Mary had gathered around her four sons, her daughter and the Duchess of York in a dinner party which fittingly ended the day with quiet domestic conviviality.

The last Christmas that the Royal family had spent together at Buckingham Palace they had had the late President Wilson as their guest. This was ten years ago, when the United States Executive was on a State visit to London.

Doctor Is Guest.

Besides the sons and daughters there was another important guest at the Royal dinner party. This was Sir Stanley Hewett, the faithful physician who has been in close attendance on the King since the illness developed more than six weeks ago. Except for short intervals, he has been at the Palace day and night for weeks, and he again stayed over last night.

During the day Queen Mary and her children paid brief visits to the sick-room and saw His Majesty. It was a very quiet Christmas indeed, but there was an air of happiness and relief throughout the Palace as the result of the assurance that the King has been improving.

Maintaining His Strength.

The most encouraging feature of last night's bulletin, reporting on the condition of the King, is that His Majesty is maintaining his strength.

THREE MISSING IN OPEN BOAT

Attempt To Cross St. Lawrence May Have Ended Fatally.

SEARCHERS OUT.

CLAYTON, N.Y., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Three men of this village have been missing since Monday afternoon when they attempted to cross the St. Lawrence River, from Clayton to Gananoque, in a rowboat equipped with an outboard motor. They are, Albon Pettit, 18; Lawrence Ingerson, 18, and Arthur Anderson, 20. Pettit and Ingerson are students at Clayton High School, while Anderson is attending Clarkson College of Technology.

A search was started Monday night when the youths failed to arrive at Gananoque and to-day search parties still were patrolling the river and searching various islands, but no trace of the boat had been found. The river was calm on Monday afternoon, but rough water developed that night.

Local Man Accident Victim

Arthur R. Reynolds Driving Automobile Which Skids Against Rock.

TWO INJURED.

Second Car Piles Up in Ditch Near Scene of Fatality.

Arthur R. Reynolds, about 32 years old, of 364 Mark street, was killed at 1:30 this morning while at the wheel of a sedan car which skidded on an icy curve in the highway two miles west of the city, struck a boulder, and, coming in contact with a telephone pole, turned over. His three companions escaped serious injury.

A second car, approaching the scene of the accident had the brakes applied suddenly, and careened into the ditch, with the result that two of the five occupants were so badly injured they had to be removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. Fred Hepburn of Sutton west, is suffering from a dislocated hip, and William Broume, of Marmora, sustained head wounds.

In the car with Reynolds, who is survived by his widow and two children, were George Stevens, 364 Mark street; Charles Stevens of Napanee, and George A. Stevens of Newcastle, Penn. In the second car were five employes of the Bell Telephone Company, returning from Toronto, as were Reynolds and his companions. The five were: William Broume, R. S. Smith, A. J. Stone, Frederick Hepburn, and Enoch Bigeanoe.

Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young visited the scene soon after the accident, in company with Provincial Constable Thompson, Sergeant A. Thomas and Constable J. Napier, and, it is understood, found the icy condition of the roads responsible. There was no indication of contributory cause on the part of the drivers, and the Coroner has ordered an inquest to be held. Reynolds was dead when taken from the wrecked car.

Where Accident Occurred

The turn on which the accident took place is a rather uncertain one, particularly for the motorist coming toward the city, at night. There is a slope upward, and on reaching the top of the slight hill, the motorist must make a rounding curve to the left. The frost on the pavement made this turn quite slippery last night, as was evidenced by the fact that Constable Thompson stationed a man at the top of the hill to signal approaching cars. The driver of the second car to figure in the accident recognized the signal but applied his

CHRISTMAS IN YUKON JOYOUSLY CELEBRATED

Camp and Town, Cabin and Indian Village Join in Cheer.

CLUBS HELP.

Canadian Settlements On the Fringe of the Arctic Circle Continue Holiday.

DAWSON, Y.T. Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—In mining camp and town, in trapper's cabin, in Indian village and in road houses, along the great lone winter trails of this far northern Yukon Territory, Christmas Day was celebrated as joyously and fervently as in any other part of Canada. Throughout the entire district from the northern boundary of British Columbia to the Arctic Circle, festivities were entered into with real Yuletide spirit. Particularly in Dawson City was the festival observed, schools, churches, benevolent societies, and pioneer clubs participating in the observance of the day.

The Christmas festivities will continue until merged with the celebration that will usher in the New Year. On the night of December 31 the thirtieth annual masquerade ball and carnival under the auspices of the Arctic Brotherhood will be held in Dawson. The event this year will be more elaborate and pretentious than ever. Fantastic, unique and costly costumes, wonderful in conception and makeup, have been prepared for the occasion. The whole Klondike section of the Yukon joins in making the ball the most successful event of the year. All participants are bent on obtaining the fullest measure of enjoyment with which to start the New Year, in abundance of gladness, gaiety and goodwill.

Christmas mail, due to modern methods of transportation, including the aeroplane, into this far distant land has been greater than ever and this has been an added source of cheerfulness this Christmas.

ARCHBISHOP IMPROVING

LONDON, Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—A medical bulletin issued this morning said that the condition of the Most Rev. Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, continued to improve. The Primate has been suffering from an internal inflammation and it was stated that pain was now occurring only rarely.

INQUESTS ORDERED IN ACCIDENT CASES

Holiday Automobile Crashes Bring Investigations in Western Ontario.

THREE KILLED.

One Victim Was Hurrying To Change Gift Ring Too Large For Baby.

WINDSOR, Ont., December 26. Canadian Press. — Three inquests were ordered to open to-day into Windsor and Western Ontario Christmas automobile fatalities.

Gordon Robinson, 24, of 64 Kildare Road, Walkerville, was found dying on Christmas Eve in Windsor, apparently struck down by a hit and run automobile, when he ran out into the street to catch a motor car in which a party of his friends were going down town. Robinson was hurrying to exchange a ring which he had bought as a Christmas present for a baby and which proved too large.

Gilbert Beighey, 18, of Detroit, died in the hospital here on Christmas day of injuries received the night before when the automobile he was driving into Windsor was struck by a Canadian Pacific passenger train on the Howard avenue grade crossing. Doris Weeks, aged 18, of Windsor, was seriously injured.

Kathleen Howlett, 18, of Woodstock, was fatally injured when the car in which she was returning to her home from Windsor, was ditched five miles west of Tilbury, on Provincial highway No. 2, Christmas morning. Before she died Miss Howlett told of having been at a party at an unnamed address in Windsor, where she says she was locked in a room when she refused to drink. She says she escaped from there and met James and Harold Balloid of Detroit, one of whom she knew. They were on their way to Toronto, and agreed to give her a lift to her home in Woodstock. They escaped with slight bruises and cuts, but Miss Howlett died soon after telling her story to Dr. H. McColl of Tilbury.

League To Have Tablet Marking Act Of Peace

GENEVA, December 26. Canadian Press. — Lugano authorities are understood to be promoting a plan to have an inscription placed in the room where the Council of the League of Nations met, recalling that it was from that room that the cablegram was sent "which prevented war between Bolivia and Paraguay."

The authorities are credited with the intention of applying to the Swiss government through the government of the Canton, asking that the inscription be placed in the council's meeting place.

LONDON HAS DREAR, RAINY BOXING DAY

Only Football Fans Really Enjoy Outdoor Sport To-day.

THEATRES JAMMED.

Old Favorites Return To Draw Crowds — Few Novelties.

LONDON, December 26. (Canadian Press Cable.) — Leaden skies and an almost incessant drizzle of light rain, made outdoor amusement this Boxing Day a dismal matter except perhaps for the football fans, who enjoy their sport under any conditions.

The theatres were jammed, most houses giving two performances. The theatrical bill of fare in London comprises both well tried dishes and dainties of a novel character. Among the former the famous play "The Critic" is having a popular run. "Charley's Aunt" turns up at the Gaiety as welcome as ever.

Miss Jean Forbes-Robertson is appearing for the second year in "Peter Pan," the play drawing full houses. Julia Neilson and Fred Terry appear once more in "The Scarlet Pimpernel," and an abridged version of "Chu Chin Chow," which had a run of five years at His Majesty's Theatre, is being produced in the suburbs. Jerome's "Passing of the Third Floor Back," is presented at another theatrical outpost, and "Where the Rainbow Ends," another Yuletide hardy annual, is being performed in a music hall.

London has only two pantomines this Christmas: "Beauty and the Beast," at the Lyceum, and "Cinderella" at the Scala.

The Weather

The weather that prevailed on Christmas Day in 1928 will go down in history as of an unusual character—practically no snow being visible, and with a balmy air that was reminiscent of the latter days of March rather than Christmas Day. The temperature ranged from 30 to 43 degrees. I have been told of lilac bushes budding and other evidence of the approach of spring, but a few days or weeks may tell a different story. It is to be noted, however, that unless winter gets off to a good start and there is sleighing before Christmas, the winter seldom amounts to much. The nearest approach to the conditions prevailing yesterday was in 1877 or 1878. At the present time I am unable to state positively which year. Perhaps some of my older readers of these lines may give me the date.—W. P.

SLAYERS OF KEVIN O'HIGGINS BELIEVED FOUND IN NEW YORK

Irish Free State Leader Was Shot On Way To Mass Last Year.

HATED BY MANY.

Republican Extremists Resented Strength Shown in Repressing Disorders.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—Two of the murderers of Kevin O'Higgins, Vice-President and Minister of Justice and Foreign Affairs of the Irish Free State, who was shot on July 10, 1927, are said to have been located in New York and early arrests are likely.

Ever since the murder the Free State Government had had detectives engaged in the search for the gunmen and one of these Irish police, according to an informant here, has found two of them living in Brooklyn.

Kevin O'Higgins, who was rated one of the strongest leaders in the Free State Government, was shot down when on his way to morning Mass in his home town of Black Rock, five miles from Dublin. He died five hours later. The gunmen escaped. Several arrests were made but all the suspects were released after questioning.

In the months preceding his death O'Higgins was bitterly hated by the Republican Extremists in Ireland, chiefly because of the severity with which he repressed disorders after the establishment of the Free State. Among the rebels executed under the O'Higgins regime was Rory O'Connor, who had been "best man" at O'Higgins' wedding. When O'Connor's will was read it was found the bulk of his possessions had been left to O'Higgins, the man who had signed his death warrant. O'Higgins' comment on this act of his former friend was: "I have only done my duty."

BOY TELLS CHILDISH STORY OF HOW FATHER SHOT MOTHER

Sad Ending To Christmas Day in Toronto Home Recounted.

NO EXPLANATION.

Three Children Claps Toys As They Leave Stricken House.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 26 (Canadidan Press).—After apparently having called his three young sons from their sleep, John Williamson, 36, shot his wife, Marguerite, some time in the night and then committed suicide. This is the construction police made of the shootings at the small wooden home at 14 Claremont street. The bodies of Williamson and his wife were found by the police early to-day.

The police were called by John, 8, and Alex, 6. The third child of the couple is Isaac, 5, who stayed in the house while his brother brought the officers. John gave a childish account of the shootings, saying his father first shot his mother through the head, indicating a wound in the forehead.

"Then he shot her through here," said the boy, pointing to his mother's chest. "Daddy turned the gun around and shot himself and fell over on the bed. His legs moved, and then he lay still. My brother and I dressed ourselves and came to the police office."

The boy said his father brought the gun, a rifle, home last night. It was found in the room. No quarrel was heard before the shootings.

The children, clutching the toys they got for Christmas, were taken by the police to the home of their grandparents on Magee street.

A draft for $12,000 was found on the body of Williamson. His occupation was believed to be that of a dry goods broker.

None of the neighbors had ever seen Mrs. Williamson outside the house. The children were popular favorites around the neighborhood, and are bright and intelligent boys.

Lying on the floor near the bed on which the bodies lay, was found a note, unsigned and undated, but presumed to have been written by Williamson. It was a rambling, incoherent note, but indicated some domestic trouble. One line reads: "I could not stand it any longer." From the note it could not be judged just what was the cause of the trouble in the family.

Woman Commits Suicide Over Christmas Quarrel

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—After a quarrel with Frank Roley, at whose suite she lived in a downtown apartment block, Margaret Forest, 28, believed to be a native of St. Catharines, Ont., committed suicide Christmas Day. She drank a disinfectant.

The couple quarrelled over a Christmas dinner. During the quarrel, the young woman tore down Christmas decorations in the living room of the suite and wrecked a Christmas tree. Then she went to her room and took the poison.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

SOREL, Que., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was confined to his home here to-day with grippe. He was reported to be seriously ill.

Ratepayers Invited To Attend Meeting

Citizens are reminded of the meeting to be held to-night in the new Auditorium of the Collegiate Institute, which is called by the City Council for the purpose of giving information regarding the Gas Plant and the Johnston Motors by-laws, to be voted on by the ratepayers on January 1st next. At this meeting the Council would like the ratepayers to be well represented and to ask for the information they desire and if it is at all available it will be given without hesitation.

TWO COLLISIONS.

Cars Come Together at King and Rubidge—Bus Strikes Another.

The only Christmas Day motor accident reported to the police in the city was one which took place at the corner of King and Rubidge streets at about 5:50 p.m. A car driven south on Rubidge street by Gordon L. Dobbin of 267 Stewart street, in turning east onto King street, collided with a car driven north on Rubidge street by Harry Siddens of R.R. 8, Peterborough. Damaged bumpers and fenders resulted to both cars which came to a stop on the lawn of Fire Chief Gimblett on the north east corner.

A slight accident occurred on Charlotte street near Bethune streets at 10:50 on the night of December 24, when a Border Transit Company's bus struck the rear of a car driven by J. Gillespie. A train had delayed the bus at the crossing and it was in starting up that the accident occurred.

BATTLE HONORS FOR MILITIA TO BE EMBLAZONED ON COLORS

Department of National Defense Completes Long Task.

FIFTY BATTLES.

Canadians Participated in War On Every Front But One.

OTTAWA, December 26 (Canadian Press). — Following five years of labor, the Battle Honors Committee of the Department of National Defence, appointed in 1923, have presented to the Government their recommendations for emblazoning on the colors of Canada's Militia regiments the honors won by the Canadian Corps during the Great War.

The recommendations have been endorsed, and instructions issued to all military districts to have commanding Officers of Militia regiment, submit to the Minister of National Defence, Colonel the Hon. J. L. Ralston, C.M.G., a list of the honors they desire to have embroidered on the standards. The selection is wide, for organized units of the Canadian Expeditionary Force took part in no fewer than fifty battles of major importance in France and Belgium. Additional to this the Canadians participated in fourteen lesser actions.

Near East Also.

That is a matter of record with respect to the Western front alone. The Dominion troops actually went farther afield. Canadians were present in Macedonia under General Sarrail; they were at the Dardanelles in small but effective numbers; they operated in Egypt and Palestine with General Allenby; a group of Canadian officers were included in that extraordinary corp commanded by Major-General L. G. Dunsterville in North Persia, and known as the "Dunsterforce." Canadians fought in North Russia, while two battalions of Dominion infantry, together with a brigade of artillery, saw service in Siberia. Canadians operated in Italy Thus soldiers from this country participated as organized units on every front where fighting took place, with the sole exception of East Africa. And there is no assurance whatever that individual Canadians did not find their way there also.

Task of Delicacy.

The allotment of battle honors to the Militia has been a task of great delicacy, but regard his been had to the principle that a regiment should bear on its colors the names of the battles in which the men from the countryside, territorially associated with that regiment, fought and died. The principle is simple, but its application is complexity itself. The chief difficulty has arisen from the fact that there are more Militia regiments than there were active fighting battalions of Canadian Corps; still more complex, there were more battalions in the entire Canadian Expeditionary Force—including, of course, reinforcing units—than there are militia regiments. Each militia regiment now perpetuates one or more battalions of the C.E.F.; but there have not been enough fighting battalions of the Canadian Corps to go round in a manner that would enable every militia regiment to perpetuate one.

The case is stated as follows:

There were 250 battalions mobilized, but only 50 of them were employed as units of the Canadian Corps. This meant that 200 were used as reinforcements for those operating in France. The number of militia regiments is considerably less than 250, from which it follows that several regiments raised more than one battalion for active service. It also follows that the number of militia regiments which perpetuate reinforcing units must be much greater than the number that perpetuate active fighting units. At first sight this would seem to indicate that only 50 militia regiments would be entitled to carry colors bearing the honors won by the 50 Canadian Corps battalions which they perpetuate, leaving the other regiments without either colors or honors. And it would also seem that, inasmuch as nearly every man of the 250 battalions mobilized throughout the militia took part in at least one big engagement, an injustice would be done to those regiments which perpetuate reinforcing units only if such an arbitrary course were pursued.

Problem Is Solved.

The Battle Honors Committee have met this situation in a manner that has earned the general approval of soldiers throughout Canada. They have decreed that a militia regiment which perpetuates a reinforcing battalion can claim the battle honor for any particular engagement where it can be shown that a minimum of 250 men from that reinforcing battalion took part in the action. The solution was simple, but the amount of labor entailed in establishing the presence of the requisite number of men from each of these 200 reinforcing battalions in each of the battles on the Western front was enormous. It amounted to nothing short of examining the individual records of nearly a quarter of a million men. It was found, for example, that soldiers of a reinforcing battalion would in some cases be distributed among as many as ten Canadian corps units. The task then was to find out if these ten units had participated in the battles, in what capacity they had taken part, and how many men of the reinforcing battalion under examination had been present with each of the ten fighting units when the engagement took place.

The Peterborough militia units received the request for a list of battle honors to which they are entitled some months ago.

KINGSTON, Ont., December 24. — (Canadian Press) — Dr. Archibald R. B. Williamson, eminent specialist of this city, died early to-day at his home after a two months' illness.

SIX PERISH WHEN BLAZE SWEEPS HOTEL

Seven Others Were Injured in Akron Fire On Sunday.

TRAPPED IN ROOMS.

No Outside Escapes On Building—Guests Leap From Windows.

AKRON, Ohio, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Six persons lost their lives and seven others were injured when fire swept the basement of the Park Hotel early yesterday. The victims, along with some eighty others guests who were in the building when the flames broke through from the basement, were trapped in rooms and corridors of the hotel.

Gaseous smoke rose up a clothes chute from the basement and filled the structure. Most of the guests battled their way through the smoke, those on the lower floors escaping down the stairs.

With the exception of one man, all the victims had rooms on the third and top floor of the building.

The Dead:

Arthur Alexander, 67, retired.

Mrs. Alberta Miller Alexander, 55, his wife.

Charles King, 28, cook.

W. W. Wilson, 28, rubber worker.

Clark Burrell, 44, cook.

Lucian G. Curtis, 20, Pool room employe, formerly of Indianapolis.

King was the only one whose rooms were not located on the third floor, and he alone was burned to death, the others died of suffocation. Apperently all had realized their danger in time to attempt exits.

Six of the seven injured persons were released from hospitals last night, but Poul Locklair, aged 40, was reported in serious condition. He was suffering from severe burns.

There were no outside fire escapes on the building and the guests were forced to the windows to escape the flames and smoke. Many were injured by leaping from the second and third storeys.

Fire Chief John Mertz said he believed the flames started from spontaneous combustion in a pile of rubbish in the basement.

FAMOUS SURGEON DIES IN TORONTO

Dr. Clarence L. Starr Had Contributed Largely To Profession.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—A world-famous orthopedic surgeon, and one of the University of Toronto's most noted graduates, died in Toronto yesterday in the person of Dr. Clarence L. Starr.

Taken suddenly ill ten days ago in Chicago, where he was attending a meeting of the Canadian Surgical Society, he returned to his home and to his bed.

The late Dr. Starr was well known for his Great War work, which included responsible administrative and consulting duties in France, and for his hospital work in England and Canada. In addition he was regarded as one of the greatest authorities of his time upon surgical matters and was responsible for revolutionizing some features of surgery. For instance, he was instrumental in stopping the surgeons in general from opening tuberculous bone abscesses and putting in tubes.

Surrenders To Police After Seeing Movie

HALIFAX N.S. Dec. 26—(Canadian Press.)—The moral lesson of an underworld picture shown at a local theatre prompted Charles Meade, 19, of Boston, to surrender himself at the Halifax police station Sunday, stating that he was wanted in his home city on a charge of theft. According to his story, Meade stole $300 from his employer, a butcher and came here via Vermont and Montreal. His conscience smote him when he saw the movie and perceived the triumph of justice, so he walked into the station and told his tale.

Local authorities who queried Boston police officials regarding the case are awaiting a reply.

Mystery Man Of Skunk's Misery Breaks Jail; Sought By Police To Complete Vagrancy Term

CHATHAM, Ont., December 26— (Canadian Press). — Orville Shaw, who attracted widespread attention as the "mystery man" of the wild tract of country called Skunk's Misery, escaped on Saturday from the Kent County Jail along with Peter Brennan. Shaw was to be taken to Guelph Jail Farm to serve a term of 18 months for robberies committed in raids on stores during the period he took refuge in Skunk's Misery, while Brennan had served two months of a three-month term for vagrancy. City, county, and provincial police are searching for the couple, who escaped through a cellar window left unbarred during alterations.

MUSICAL PROGRAM PLEASES AUDIENCE

Westminster Glee Singers Present Concert at Campbellford Theatre.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 26 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Although there was not a capacity house to welcome the Westminister Glee Singers at the Regent Theatre on the night of Christmas Eve, the concert which these artists presented was generally considered to be second to none in its line ever heard here. So pleased were several of the patrons that when it was announced that a return engagement would be booked, they left their stubs at the box office for advance reservations. The date for the return engagement has been since set for the fourth day of January. The program which the singers presented consisted of folk songs, vocal dances, sailors' chanteys, madrigals, glees and national airs. There were also several solos, duets and quartettes. The singers are fourteen in number, eight men and six boys. They have been touring Canada for several months and have won much favorable comment. Music lovers of Campbellford are fortunate not only in having been given one opportunity to hear these singers, but in having been afforded a second opportunity.

NORTH MONAGHAN RETURNS REEVE

H. B. Rye Given Acclamation, But Other Contest Likely.

The ratepayers of North Monaghan on Saturday indicated their confidence in the ability of Reeve H. B. Rye, when they returned him by acclamation to that office for the year 1929. In addition, they nominated W. G. Waterman, deputy reeve for 1928, and R. A. Dobbin, defeated candidate fo last year, while the names proposed for councillors were Andrew Kent, William Whitfield, Herbert Bourne, Bert Sanderson and John Williams. The first three named were councillors during the past year, while the two new men voiced their appreciation of these men, thus indicating that an acclamation might be expected. Mr. Dobbin, on the other hand, seemed likely to contest the deputy reeveship.

All have until noon to-day to qualify.

The nomination meeting, held Monday afternoon in May's School, indicated that the ractpayers of North Monaghan are interested in many phases of community development and provided plenty of fiery discussion, mostly provoked by Mr. Dobbin's attack on what he claimed to be extravagant expenditure of money for road building. His addresses to the fairly large number of North Monaghan residents present, followed a brief but comprehensive resume of the year by Reeve Rye, while from a rather bounteous supply of newspaper and other clippings he drew much of his information.

North Monaghan.

Following his acclamation Reeve Rye expressed his gratification at the confidence reposed in him by the ratepayers. He looked back over a year of considerable progress, touch-

NUN DIES IN HEROIC ATTEMPT TO EXTINGUISH HOSPITAL FIRE

Thirty-seven Patients Driven From Building Early Christmas Morning.

FIREMAN POISONED.

Smoke Overcomes Leblanc and He Is In Critical Condition.

HULL, Que., Dec. 26.— (Canadian Press.)—Thirty-seven patients, many of them mothers with babies, some only a few hours old, were carried from the Sacred Heart Hospital here early Christmas morning when a fire in the laundry chute spread over the central portion of the building. One nun died yesterday afternoon as a result of burns she sustained when she tried to put out the blaze with a chemical extinguisher. She was Sister Cecile, formerly Miss M. Crevier of Cartierville, Que. She was 22 years of age, and took the vows two years ago.

The patients were taken to residences near the hospital, and later most of them were transferred to Water Street Hospital, in Ottawa. As far as could be ascertained none of these were seriously affected by the experience.

Fireman Captain Z. Leblanc of the Hull brigade is reported in a critical condition from smoke poisoning. He fell unconscious from the clouds of smoke, and it was some time before his comrades could rescue him from the burning building. He is in Water Street Hospital.

Sacred Heart Hospital is conducted by the Sisters of Providence, a Montreal order. Part of the building was fireproof, but the central section was not. It was four storeys, of brick, and the maternity ward was on the top floor.

Most of the Sisters, and such of the employees as could be spared, as well as many of the patients, had attended the midnight Christmas Mass in the chapel connected with the hospital. The Mass was chanted by Rev. Father A. Boulay, chaplain of the institution.

Sister's Heroic Death.

Returning to the hospital, Rev. Sister Gerrard noticed the smoke coming out of the laundry chute, and, hurrying to each of the floors, warned the nurses to be in readiness to take the patients out. Rev. Sister Cecile, who came closely after, seized the fire extinguisher on the second floor and went to the door of the chute. When she opened it a flame burst forth, enveloping her in fire. Father Boulay ran to her assistance as she hurried downstairs and out into the snow. Here the flames of her clothing were smothered, but not before she had been grievously burned. She was taken to Water Street Hospital, where she died yesterday morning.

Meanwhile the smoke poured out of the chute at each of the floors, and soon the roof was on fire. Blankets were thrown about the patalents, and they walked or were carried down the stairs or fire-escapes, and to the houses near the hospital. Crowds soon gathered, many not having retired after attending midnight Mass. They joined in carrying patients to shelter.

Carries Little Ones To Safety.

One of the heroes of the fire was Mrs. Joseph Lorento, aged 21, of Hull, who was in bed on the top floor. She carried her 2-day-old baby and a 4-year-old boy who had rushed upstairs in the excitement, one in each arm, and down the three flights of the fire escape. She was in her night attire and in her bare feet, but she carried the two children to one of the residences nearby. Her physician said he did not think she wold suffer any serious consequences.

The fire fighters saw that every one was out of the burning section of the building before the water was turned on, and in this way the fire got considerable headway. Assistance was called from Ottawa, and the fire was under control about daybreak The loss is estimated at $75,000. Both the east and west wings were undamaged, but were so filled that they were unable to accommodate the other patients.

Montreal. — It is reported that the former head office building of the Bank of British North America on James street, has been sold by the owners, the Bank of Montreal. This handsome six-storied brick and stone structure has one of the most dignified of the many fine buildings on St. James street. It is situated at No. 214, a few doors west of St. Francois Xavier street, on the south side of St. James.

It is believed that the building has been purchased to provide a headquarters for Barclay's (Canada) when this subsidiary of the leading British bank secures a charter to operate in Canada.

DOCTOR SHOWS QUICKEST WAY TO END HEAD COLDS

Many Here Who Try Hospital Method in Own Homes Get Almost Instant Relief

Quick, sure relief — than the joy of waking up without the misery caused by neglecting a cold at this season.

This experience of Miss Gertrude Cary has been shared recently by numbers of people in Peterborough and vicinity. For doctors are now recommending home use of a hospital method that ends colds quickly—often in a few hours—yet is inexpensive and pleasant to take.

Miss Cary, for example, neglected her cold until her eyes became inflamed, her nose stopped up, and congestion started spreading so fast she called her doctor. Relief began almost instantly when he advised Ayer's Cherry Pectoral — a hospital certified compound of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients used in treating even extreme hospital cases.

With the first pleasant swallow she felt its comforting, healing warmth. In an hour or so the medication was absorbed by her system, loosening up congestion. When she awoke the next morning there was practically no sign of the cold—and in another day or so congestion had disappeared entirely.

Note: See other cases—all certified by the attending physician.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. At all druggists—60c and twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

After the gifts were distributed, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr Downey for his assistance.

AT MARMORA.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Dec. 26.—St. Paul's Sunday School well maintained its good name in the annual Christmas entertainment given in the Town Hall on Friday evening and had it not come as the fourth successive nightly attraction of the week, a much larger crowd would have been present. The program put on with plenty of dash and a little delay lasted about two hours. Rev. A. B. Caldwell acted as chairman and about the middle of the program, called three young ladies to the platform in the persons of Kathleen Litt, Evelyn Rice, and Nellie Phillips. Following the reading of an address by Evelyn Rice, Nellie Phillips on behalf of the Sunday school, presented Kathleen Litt, her teacher, with a handsome music case.

The following is the program: Recitations by the children of the primary class, Tom Smith, Tom Pearce, Melbourne Hynes, Dorothy Lumsden, Randall Melville, Mae Hynes; dialogues were given by Miss Litt's class and one entitled "The Rehearsal" was given by two boys and four girls. AT MADOC

(Examiner Correspondence)

Madoc, Dec. 26.—On Tuesday, the Sunday School of St. Peter's church held its annual Christmas entertainment in the Sunday School rooms of the Church. The classes each contributed to the program, an outstanding feature of which was "The Old-fashioned Family Album" put on by the senior girls and boys, with Miss L. Connor as reader. Santa Claus distributed presents and candies from the tree at the close of the program.

Trinity Concert

The primary class with Mrs. J. Keene as teacher dramatized "Little Jack Horner" and some of the little tots gave short recitations, among them, Iris Roberts, Helen Wellman and Lorna Roberts. The junior girls has an old-fashioned country school with Miss E. Adams as teacher and with several star pupils. The junior boys put on a most exciting frog drill and songs, trained by Mrs. W. Kelly and their teacher, Mrs. Bailey. The intermediate girls gave an Indian Drill and the boys a dialogue, O'Hafferty vs. Tin Tung, both of which were well given. The senior girls presented a pantomime while "Onward Christian Soldiers was sung by O. I. Rose. An instrumental duet by the Misses Helene and Kathleen Ludbrook was much enjoyed as was the music furnished by the school orchestra during the intervals. The closing number was a pageant, "The Greatest Gift to the World" given by the young ladies' Bible Class and the Senior Boys' class. This was most excellent and showed much artistic talent in song, recitation and setting, while the costumes were most appropriate and pleasing. Staged with a choir, also of members of the classes, the music was introduced at intervals and several of the Christmas selection were beautifully sung, the soloists, Miss N. Fair, Miss G. Parker and Raymond Rivers, deserving special mention. The entertainment closed with the distribution of gifts from the tree.

AT WOOLER.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WOOLER, December 24. — The annual Christmas concert for the pupils of the Stone Schoolhouse was held on Wednesday evening, and the school was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The program was excellent, showing time and patience spent by the teacher, Miss Grace Mutton. To show their appreciation, the Trustee Board presented Miss Mutton with a cheque as a Christmas gift. The chairman was a member of the School Board, C. E. Terrill. The program was as follows:

Opening chorus by school, with ukulele accompaniment by the teacher; recitations were given by the following: Clarence Wilkins, Ray Sharpe, Jean Forbes, Charles Spencer, Kenny Horsely, Lucille Waite, Raymond Rowe, Inez Vosburgh, Isabel Horsely; dialogues included "The Minister's Mistake" by Marjorie Sharpe, Lorne Forbes, and Bertha Waite, "Uncle Hiram's cold." "Getting Rid of an Agent" by Aylmer Spencer, Frances Vosburgh, and Aletha Horsely; a monologue was given by Laura Vosburgh; songs included a motion song by nine pupils "What Would You Take For Me, Papa?" by Jean Puffer, Jean Forbes, and Aletha Horsely; musical trio, Miss Mutton, playing ukulele, Laura Vosburgh singing, and Mrs. S. L. Terrill at the organ. Bagpipe music was played by James Neal and other numbers included an exercise, "At Christmas Time" by nine pupils; drill, "Haying Time," by twelve pupils; pantomime, "A Little Town of Bethlehem," "The Running Stockings," "Christmas Advice" by four pupils, and a two-act play, "Married in Haste," in which Grace Mutton, Gladys Vosburgh, Bertram Gilling and J. Kruyf took part.

After the program, gifts were distributed from the tree by Santa Claus.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, December 26.—Warsaw School concert was held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening. The hall, with its new coat of light paint, looked very pretty with its decorations of crepe paper in red and green, the Christmas tree and other evergreens. The numbers given by the pupils showed their careful training of the teachers, Miss Young and Mr. Gardiner, and in the preparation of costumes. There were thirty-five items, planned as a two-hour program, but it lasted nearly three hours, and several items were omitted. Dr. Munro acted as chairman, and in his address he, as medical health officer, spoke on the flu, and giving its symptoms.

The numbers on the program included recitations by Jean Hawthorne, Iva Payne, The Children's Vision by three girls, Milo Payne Eva Clifford, Irwin Hawthorne, Dorcas Lloyd, Carl Digweed, Alva Darling, and dialogue, "Santa's Predicament," "A Week in Sunbonnet Land" by six little girls, "I Want My Ma" by eight boys, "Show Me the Way to Go Home," "Putting up the Clothesline,' and other numbers on the program included a chorus by the school, a song of Welcome by seven little girls; piano solo, May Payne; duet, Merl Bell and Zelda Crowe; monologue, Cora Crowe; song, Joe Watts and Cressa Payne; songs by junior school; mouth organ selection, Percy Drain; piano selection, Zelda Crowe; solo, "O Little Town of Bethlehem,' by Aileen Miles, and Christmas, by nine children. During a rather long wait Dr. Munro gave some more advice against buying on the instalment plan and living beyond one's means. Gifts were distributed by Santa Claus, Gordon Payne acting this part, each child receiving a present.

ZION SABBATH SCHOOL.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, December 24. — Zion Sabbath School and the local day school held the annual combined Christmas concert on Thursday evening in Sentinel Hall, with a splendid attendance in view of the flu' epidemic in the community. The pupils of S.S. No. 2 were trained by their teacher, Miss Nellie Bennett, while the Sunday School part was supervised by the various teachers.

The program was as follows, and Rev. F. G. MacTavish acted as the chairman. Opening chorus by the school; address of welcome, Don. Lawrence; pantomime by five girls; monologue, Willie Thomson; Christmas flag drill, by pupils; reading, Gladys Petherick; dialogue, "A Christmas Crazy Class" by pupils; recitations were given by Esther Kerr, Rena Thomson, and Pearl McLenzie. Songs included a duet by Ruth and Hazel Kerr, chorus by the school and music by Ruth and Hazel Kerr preceded the three-act play, "The Re-union at Pine Knot Ranch." The cast was as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Hall coming to visit their ranch for Christmas (George Brunton and Jennie Fry), Hall, their son and boss on the ranch (Roy Fry), three cowboys, chums of Hal (Alfred Simpson, Aylmer Petherick, and Frank Naish; Mrs. Bell, cook on the ranch, afflicted with neuralgia (Gladys Simpson); Mrs. Becker, a crabbed neighbor (Mrs. Harry Barnum); her three nieces, Gene, Cecil, and Joe, who provide the unknown element in the play (Cora Irwin, Nellie Bennett, and Alma Simpson). The play, "Too Much Christmas," was an amusing sketch of the troubles of a young boy following too much dinner with Art. Petherick as the leading actor. A "Hard Time" Drill by ten girls of the intermediate class was one of the best numbers on the program, and although two of the leading members were ill, the number was good and the costumes amusing. The minstrel number put on by boys of Fred Barnum's class proved highly amusing with jokes aimed at several in the audience. As an encore the group put on a short dialogue featuring a darky court with Fred Fry as judge, Gerald Barnum as a prisoner at the bar, Ted Owens, counsel defending, Don. Kerr, prosecuting attorney, and Arthur Petherick, court crier. The affair ended in a free-for-all, with a doubtful decision. The closing chorus by the school heralded the arrival of Santa Claus, who distributed the many presents on the tree.

(Examier Correspondence)

Millbrook, Dec. 26.—The Christmas entertainment given in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Millbrook Public school, was one of the best that has been presented here for some time, and was carried through with precision and correctness in every detail.

The costumes for the various numbers were particularly good, and when the pupils were massed upon the stage for the opening chorus, "Glad Bells of Christmas", the lighting was appropriate, and the scene a very attractive one; the bright faces, and white dresses, silver trimmed, of the little girls in the front row especially appealed to the audience.

A Christmas tree, beautifully decorated and loaded with gifts, and with many parcels piled about it, placed to the right of the stage, Christmas bells in many places, and bright colored shades on the lights gave a seasonable atmosphere to the hall, while several of the selections on the program were also of a Yuletide character.

G. E. Burnham, chairman of the school board, welcomed the audience to the annual entertainment, which for the first time was being held in the town hall rather than in the Assembly Hall of the school building, on behalf of the teachers and pupils, and also of the members of the school board, and announced the various selections as the program proceeded.

A recitation, "A Christmas Welcome", by Helen Mitchell, followed the chairman's address, and exercise, "The Smiling Regiment", by twelve of the junior boys and girls, particularly pleased the audience. The next number, a "Candle Drill", by sixteen of the seniors, was exceptionally well done, and was an unusual presentation in the way of a drill besides; the girls had their candles in red holders, and the boys green, and when the lighted tapers were held high as the various movements were gone through, the effect was both beautiful and impressive.

A recitation, "A Little Pocket Book", by Maud Raper was followed by a unique "Doll Drill", eight boys from the junior room giving this number, each carrying a 'doll baby' and lauding its virtues in the intervals of marching, singing the 'troublesome children' to sleep, and going through the varying measures of the drill.

"Selfish Tommy Tucker", a recitation by Harold Howson, preceded one of the prettiest events of the evening, a "Star Drill," by nine of the senior girls, each wearing a white dress, trimmed with gold stars, and a golden crown centered with a star, while the wands of each carried were tipped with a star and had three pendant stars, on golden cords, which swayed with every graceful motion of the exercise. Red and gold was used to wind the wands and compose the stars, except the one carried by Marguerite Hawken, who was a central figure for the drill, here a much larger star outlined in silver tinsel. The choruses included in this number were: "Shine on Christmas Star"; "If Every Star"; and "Christmas Stars".

Addresses Audience

The second half of the program was taken up by a two-act play, "The Land of Dolls", and previous to its presentation Principal B. B. Dawson briefly addressed the audience, thanking them for their attendance and loyal support, and mentioning particularly the help given by the parents in having the children attend the practices, and for readily assisting in providing the necessary costumes.

A very pretty story was unfolded as the play proceeded, the acting being well done, and the costumes entirely suitable, many of them beautiful, and some of them comical and calling forth a burst of laughter as soon as the wearer appeared. The characters were: Bryer Edmunds (Bessie) and Mary Burnham (Minnie), two disobedient little girls, who at their own wish were transported to the "Land of Dolls", by the Fairy Queen (Dorothy McDowell) and her band of fairy helpers (Dorothy Smith, Beatrice McDowell, Ruth Richards, Laureen Handley, Prudie Davis, and Mary Smith), where they met "Limpy" (Joe Thorndyke), the king of the dolls; the Queen of Doll Land, (Mary Nattress); her maid, Babette (Marjorie McDowell); the Mama Doll (Lenore Lambert); the Ladies in Waiting (Kathleen Smith), Audrey Garside, Myrtle Nattress, Gracie Sloan, Kathleen Davis); the Clown (Henry Raper); the Chinese Cook (A. T. Armstrong); Judge Scarum (Eric Abbot); and the Army (Jack Stinson; Dalton Brown; Lyal Nattress; Owen McCarthy; and John Jessup).

Convinced of their folly, the little girls, who sang very prettily together, were glad to promise better behavior, and were safely brought back to their mother, the fairy queen and her helpers appearing just in time to prevent their punishment by the soldiers, following the 'flow of sawdust' from the king when one angry girl grasped him harshly.

A concluding chorus, "Good Night To You", and the National Anthem, did not mean dismissal as the gifts from the tree were then distributed, every pupil being remembered, bags of candy being plentifully passed around, and the teachers also receiving several gifts from the scholars of their respective rooms. Principal Dawson acted as Santa Claus, and both he and the other two teachers of the public school, Miss Orchard and Miss Montgomery, are deserving of the highest praise for the fine entertainment provided and the very creditable manner in which the pupils were trained

Miss B. Montgomery, and Miss Ella Elson were the accompanists of the evening.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1928

DON'T FORGET THE MEETING.

The importance of to-night's public meeting in the new Collegiate Institute auditorium is once again called to the attention of the ratepayers.

The two by-laws which are to be voted on at the municipal election are of considerable moment and an intelligent expression of public opinion is desired.

The measures will be fully discussed to-night, questions from the audience will be welcomed and in the case of the gas plant purchase Hydro experts will be here to give the benefit of their knowledge to the citizens and to answer any inquiries that may be made in regard to the proposition.

The purchase of a public utility is a transaction that should not be decided by a mere handful of ratepayers; it is of sufficient importance to demand an expression of opinion from a very large percentage of those who have to pay the tax and it is therefore most desirable that the citizens should be fully informed before they make their decision.

The City Council and the Chamber of Commerce have taken the right course in co-operating to arrange to-night's public meeting and their action should be rewarded by the presence of a capacity audience.

CANADA'S CHRISTMAS GIFT TO THE EMPIRE.

The restoration of penny postage to Great Britain and all parts of the British Empire by the Canadian Government, as announced in Premier Mackenzie King's Christmas greeting to His Majesty is being hailed with satisfaction as a Christmas gift that will do much to strengthen the ties that hold the members of the British Empire closely together.

It was a gracious gesture of real friendship on the part of the Dominion Government made at a time when its significance would have full value and in a most fitting manner.

Its effect will not be confined to Canada—but in all parts of the far flung Empire it will be regarded as a genuine contribution to the welfare of the whole Commonwealth of British nations.

Premier King is to be commended upon this splendid Empire gift and upon choosing a particularly happy time to announce it.

His restoration of penny postage proves not only that careful financing has made it possible to lift some of the burden of the cost of government from the shoulders of the Canadian people but that Canada desires to bring the various nations of the Empire even closer together.

MUNICIPAL FINANCING.

In his address at the nomination meeting Ald. Nagle Phelan took advantage of the opportunity to point out to new candidates and the citizens generally that the City Council has a very limited field in which it can effect economies.

As a matter of fact, as the Chairman of the Finance Committee explained, the Council in regard to most of the taxes levied simply acts as a collecting agency, passing the greater part of the revenue obtained each year over to the Board of Education, the City Trust Commission and in payment of the city's share of the cost of Mothers' Allowances, suburban roads, Public Library and other services of that nature.

Less than one third of the taxes remains under the control of the Council and out of that amount it is necessary to pay for fire protection, the maintenance of parks, streets, sidewalks, bridges, etc., the cost of municipal government and many other things.

It would not be surprising if the advent of old age pensions were to be followed by another demand upon the municipal treasury.

The Examiner does not profess to be in confidence of Premier Ferguson and has no means of knowing the form of government proposal in regard to relief for Ontario's aged poor will take but it would not be a cause for astonishment were the Premier to announce that old age pensions in this province will be financed on the same basis as Mothers' Allowances, that is that half of the government's share of the cost of the scheme will have to be met by the municipalities.

This is admittedly a guess but it may not be far off the mark.

TOWN PLANNING ADVOCATED.

A resolution passed by the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Legion at its annual meeting this week shows that Peterborough's returned soldiers, who have had an unique opportunity of observing what is done in other parts of the world, are interested in the welfare of their home city and anxious to see its interests promoted.

The Legion is asking the City Council to pass a town planning bylaw that would make it impossible for such business plants as gas stations to intrude in neighborhoods that should be reserved for better things.

Like The Examiner, the ex-service men are not satisfied that a gas station, no matter how pretentious it may be, will fit into the general scheme for the beautification of Confederation Square, and in order to prevent such invasions as this the Council is being asked to take steps to decide upon a systematic town planning policy.

Under th epresent conditions there is little or no protection.

Gas stations, service stations, garages, automobile salesrooms and that kind of thing are apparently allowed to be established about where their owners like, with little consideration of the safety of the public or for the general appearance of the city.

The gasoline invasion is under scant control, and in general there is need of a policy such as has been brought forward by the Canadian Legion.

THE COCK-SPARROWS IN SOUTH AMERICA.

The continued tension between Bolivia and Parraguay, and the enthusiasm for war manifested in both countries, constitute a warning to all of us elsewhere that war is not a matter of national calculation or of real injury to anybody. It is a matter of the tendency of mankind to start a fight. We all carry chips on our shoulders. What real thing have the masses of the Bolivian and Paraguayan people to fight about? The quarrel is over territory which is practically uninhabited, and at present of n oproducing value, and each country has a great deal of that kind of territory. The disputed area is supposed to be potentially rich in forests, minerals and water power; but even if it is, of what point is that to the masses of Paraguay and Bolivia? Individually, if there be war, not one in a thousand of the winning side will ever profit directly, and few indirectly.

The two countries are such petty affairs, nationally, that the general effort which civilization is making to prevent them fighting seems all the more striking as an evidence of the general feeling in the world that war, even of the smallest kind, should not be allowed to get under way without earnest protest.

Bolivia has a total population of three millinos, of whom there are two millions mostly of mixed blood, and a million Indians. The national revenue is fifteen million dollars a year, not much more than double the revenue of the city government of Ottawa. The regular army is only 5,000 strong, but there is alleged compulsory militia service which is supposed to make every citizen serve under arms for a year. The law is said to be pretty much a dead letter. Paraguay is much less imposing statistically. The population is mixed blood of about a million, outside of a comparatively small number of Indians; the national revenue is about $5,000,000, or less than the revenue of Ottawa; there is a regular army of only 3,000, but, as in Bolivia, there is supposed to be compulsory military service for a term for every man.

Bolivia thus seems to be much the stronger of the two puny nations, but the Paraguayans, judging by their record, are gluttons for punishment in the way of fighting. Half a century ago they got into a broil by their own fault with Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay all combined, and fought the big crowd for five years, from 1865 to 1870, before they acknowledged they were licked. Half a million of the small Paraguayan population perished. One would imagine that this was still remembered in Paraguay.

Bolivia and Paraguay are both inland—neither touches a coast, or has a port with access to the sea—and both countries combined have less than half a million of pure white population, Spanish or foreign stock. They count for little in the world. But the important part of the world does not want to see them or anybody fighting. The thing is too contagious. Mankind's temperament being what it is, a war anywhere, even of the least initial consequence, is liable to prove like a lighted match to gunpowder. Somebody else may get drawn in, and then nobody knows where it will stop. The recent object lesson in the World War is not forgotten yet by those nations which were engaged in it, particularly the big ones.—Ottawa Journal.

IN MEMORY OF "DAD"

No man who has passed on can have a finer monument than the grateful remembrance of his children. Such a remembrance, while being a splendid tribute to the departed, is a blessing to those possessing it, and a benefit to the community. Those sons and daughters who cherish the memories of their fathers are better citizens, more helpful to their fellow-men, than those who have no inspiring recollections of those gone before. Veneration presupposes that those venerated lived helpful, kindly lives, and that the living have not forgotten the example left them. And because of this, their lives are fuller, richer, nobler than they would otherwise have been.

Fortunate is the man whose father has left such an impression upon him that he is inspired to good deeds by the memory of the helping hand stilled, perhaps long since, by death. Fortunate, too, are those who come in contact with him, for they will find him radiating hopefulness and friendliness.

No better illustration can be had of this than the words used by a contributor to a Santa Claus fund in Toronto. These words were: "In Memory of Dear Old Dad." To us these words speak volumes. They tell of a man who was the chum as well as the father of his children. They tell of a man who was of his family as well as the head of it; of a man who entered heartily and affectionately into the lives of his children, inviting and inspiring their confidence, counselling with them, admonishing them when necessary, but always kindly if firmly, sympathizing with them in their childish reverses, rejoicing in their victories whether in school or on the playground and praising wholeheartedly when praise was due.

They tell, in short, of a man who realized that being a good father is the greatest responsibility and the greatest privilege a man can have, and that there is no reward, no pleasure equal to that which comes from possessing the love and loyalty of one's children.

We feel that in the present days, with so much to detract a man's time and attention, true fatherhood is becoming a lost art. But it should not be. Every man who begets a family should take a greater, a more helpful interest in it than in anything else in the world. If he does not, he is falling down badly. He may be too busy seeking wealth and honor to bother with his family, forgetting that, no matter how much fortune may smile on him, he is indeed poor if—he has forfeited, through neglect, the love and devotion of his offspring.

Blessed in the sight of heaven and earth is the man whose association with his children is such that when he is gone they will be inspired to good deeds by his memory, and blessed are the children whose recollections of their fathers are such that they will be constrained to do good "in Memory of Dear Old Dad." And blessed are the communities in which such fathers and sons reside.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT

And now we can take a look at the municipal candidates and make up our minds as to how our ballots are to be marked.

The weatherman's contribution may have been out-of-season but a good many people enjoyed it nevertheless.

It must be admitted that yesterday's brand of Christmas weather was tough on the children with new sleighs and toboggans to try out.

Canada's inauguration of penny postage was a real Empire Christmas gift.

Don't forget to-night's meeting. The opportunity to hear all about the two by-laws should not be missed by citizens who desire to use their franchise intelligently.

The social service organizations and Santa Pals did a great deal to make yesterday a Christmas full of genuine joy in Peterborough.

Make your New Year's resolutions early; then they'll last longer.

Anyway those Christmas ties add a touch of color to the drabness of the day after Christmas.

A Thought

PERSONALITY

Do you know that you carry your rating in your face, your personality? You are as good an advertisement of what you really are as if you were rated in Bradstreet. Everything about you is a telltale of what is inside, and I can tell the first time I meet you, what influences have been moulding you in your present shape. I can tell what your environment has been, whether you have lived in an ignorant, poverty-stricken and illiterate community or whether you have been reared in the midst of refinement and culture, and have made friends with good books and good companions. Your conversation, your vocabularly, will betray the source of your intelligence. I can detect Shakespeare, Dickens, Emerson, in your conversation if you are educated cultured, as I can detect the lower type of man if you are ignorant and unread.—O. S. M.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Thursday, Dec. 27, 1928.

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

(C. McClure Newspaper Syndicate).

Although two adverse aspects are seen in to-day horoscope the dominant aspects are benefic, according to astrology.

Under this sway it is important to exercise tact, especially where social engagements are concerned, for women may be easily offended.

This is not an auspicious rule for business transactions of importance. It is better for closing what belongs to the past.

The sway should be invigorating and should be auspicious for routine work in the home as well as the shop or office.

Newspapers should benefit for there will be extraordinary interest in them at this time and advertising will be heavy, despite the post-holiday conditions.

Small deceptions may be prevalent under this direction of the stars which inclines both men and women to crave approbation.

It is not a favorable day for entering into engagements to marry, for the contract may be easily broken while this configuration has influence.

Again oil comes under a planetary rule that presages agitation and even trouble regarding exploitation of new wells.

Women are warned to beware of speculation at this time when they will have many temptations to invest Christmas money.

The rule also is supposed to incite small social rivalries and enmities that are fortunate in small communities.

Business and professional women have the auguary of a year of real progress. Among them many will gain fame, and several will rise as able financiers.

Travel will continue to be more common among all classes of persons than ever before and in favorable climates there will be a gain in the number of airplane passengers, astrologers predict.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will gain much in the coming year which seems to promise much prosperity and many benefits.

Children born on this day probably will have very definite talents. Mathematicians are born under this sign which makes for material success. The subjects of Capricorn are efficient in serving humanity and adapted to the carrying out of ambitious projects.

! Why We Do What We Do.

WHY THE HAIRS STAND ON END WHEN WE ARE SCARED.

Introducee a fox terrier to a common cat and you will see a curious change in the cat. Almost instantly he becomes twice his normal size by arching his back and swelling his tail and ruffling up his hairy coat. The object seems to be to frighten his enemy by assuming a ferocious appearance.

This is one way of avoiding a fight.

Cats and dogs and man ruffle up their hair to impress enemy or prey. But man has almost lost this art. He has learned to use other methods to overcome his enemy and no longer needs to frighten him into submission by changing his size in artificial ways.

Still, man is able, under the stimulus of certain types of fear, to make his hair stand on end. A noted scientist states that on one of his hunts for wild game he heard a noise which made his blood run cold and the hair on his head stand up so as to lift his cap completely off his head.

This strange ability is due to the fact that at the root of each hair in the scalp is a little muscle, which, if it should contract, makes the hair stand up. Ordinarily this muscle does not function. It is vestigial, a left-over organ from the prehistoric past when there was real use for it.

However, it can be made to contract under special condition. One of these conditions is a certain type of fear. When we experience this type of fear, the muscle contracts reflexly. It is the same kind of muscle that is found in the skin of the cat except that in the cat the muscle is not vestigial, but can be made to contract at will.

"Goose-flesh," a peculiar puckering up of the skin on the body, is an attempt of the cells in the skin to pull up into an erect position so as to make the hair on the body stand up.

The real force back of the hair-standing-on-end phenomenon and that of goose-flesh is in the adrenal glands which inject a powerful substance into the blood stream, causing changes in the organism calculated to prepare the animal for a hard fight.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

XVII.—RENNY'S SYMPATHY.

To Marna's relief, she and Hugh arrived at the Blairs' first.

"George must have had a puncture," she said. She laughed shakily. "Oh, won't Harnigan be angry! He has been priding himself that so far he hasn't had one puncture this year."

"The roads are so very bad just now," Mrs. Blair said. She was trailing round in a velvet dress which looked as if it had been lifted bodily from an Early Victorian portrait, and as usual she wore her dog-collar of pearls. She touched Marna's cheek with a kind hand.

"You look very tired," she said sympathetically. "All those young people are too much for you. I should send them away if I were you, and take a rest cure."

Marna shivered.

"They're all going soon," she answered, with a forced little laugh. "They're all going to desert us. Even Mr. Hubbard is tired of us, and has booked his passage back."

Mrs. Blair looked at Hugh.

"So soon?" she asked.

"So soon!" he echoed. "I've been home several months! I'm sure I must have worn out my welcome long ago."

Young Blair dashed up to them, followed by Renny Martin.

"Mr. Martin's come!" he announced. "It appears they've had two punctures, one within half a mile of the other, so Mr. Martin came on to reassure Mrs. Paget that everyone was all right, and not lying in the ditch."

"George thought you might all be anxious," Martin explained casually. He looked at Marna. "I tried to persuade the girls to walk with me, but they were afraid of spoiling their shoes." He bent down to her. "May I have the pleasure of the first dance?" he asked.

Marna shot a swift glance at Hugh Hubbard, but he was not looking at her.

"Thank you," she said mechanically.

There was a gramophone playing in a room which had been cleared, and a dozen young couples were already dancing.

"So you kept your word and made Hubbard get here first," Renny Martin said. He looked down at Marna with hot eyes. "What magic did you use, I wonder?"

"As a matter of fact," Marna answered composedly, "we didn't come at any great speed. I missed the turning and we had to go back some way."

She did not trust Renny Martin, and to-night she was afraid of him, but then, in her unnerved state, she felt that she was afraid of everything and everyone.

And yet, what did it matter what people thought or said? The only living, feeling part of her was with Hugh Hubbard, suffering with him.

They danced the length of the room twice without speaking again, then Martin said abruptly:

"They generally leave the carriage-gate open, don't they?"

"Yes, I think they do," Marna answered absently. "But to-night it was shut when we got there, Mr. Hubbard had to open it."

"So I saw."

"Did you?" Then, with a sudden shock, she realized that there was a subtle meaning in his quiet voice. She looked up with startled eyes, the color rushing headlong to her white cheeks.

"What do you mean?" she asked breathlessly.

Renny Martin shrugged his shoulders.

"Only that I was the unwilling witness of a very touching little scene at Mrs. Blair's gate—the proof positive of something which I have all along vaguely suspected and been in sympathy with."

Marna stood quite still, her hand falling from his shoulder. She felt as if someone had struck her over the heart, and she knew that she was trembling.

A laughing couple bumped into them, and apologized cheerfully.

"We are rather in the line of fire," Renny Martin said. He took Marna's hand. "Shall we go and sit down somewhere?"

She went with him apathetically, and he found two chairs in a corner of a greenhouse, built out at one end of the long room.

It was dimly lit, and fragrant with exotic perfume.

Marna sat down and closed her eyes. She tried hard to steady her shaken nerves, but they seemed to have stampeded far beyond her control. She wanted to say: "How dare you say such things to me? If my husband knew——" but how could she? If George knew, it would mean an end of everything for them all.

"An end of everything," she told herself fiercely, and longed for that ending to come. No more subterfuge and lying and pretending. They would all be out in the open together, with the truth laid bare before them.

For a moment the temptation to face the exposure seized her in its grip. Anything would be better than what she was enduring now, and must go on enduring. George would be kind to her, no matter how badly he suffered—George would always be kind to her, she was sure, even when he knew the truth.

Yes, and that was the reason why he must not know! The reason why she could never be honest and go to him and say: "I love someone else. I'm sorry, so deadfully sorry, but I can't go on living with you, be generous and let me go!"

With a supreme effort she opened her eyes and looked at Renny Martin.

"May I ask what use you propose to make of your eavesdropping?" she asked cuttingly.

He looked taken aback. He had never really understood Marna, and he had expected tears and pleadings, and perhaps an attempt to silence him.

"I can only assure you that I am a most sympathetic onlooker," he said with a detestable smile "I envy Hubbard his good fortune, even while I despise his cowardice. To have so much lying within his grasp and to refuse it, either means that he is afraid to take what the gods offer him, or that he does not sufficiently appreciate the gift."

He laid his hand over Marna's, in a close grip.

"If it had only been me!" he said in a whisper.

Marna drew her hand sharply away, as if he had hurt her. Her first chill fear of this man was swallowed up in such a feeling of loathing, that she could hardly speak, but after a moment she found her voice.

"You will please leave my house to-night and never come back."

She rose to her feet and Martin rose too, but he was smiling and unconcerned.

"Isn't that rather inviting gossip and speculation?" he asked amicably. "I assure you that I haven't a single uncharitable feeling toward you, Marna. But if you insist that 'I leave your house to-night,' as you so dramatically express it, I shall have to explain matters to your husband, and then—— Ah, here he comes!"

George Paget had entered the conservatory, and now came anxiously towards them.

"I'm so sorry, m'dear," he said to Marna. "Two confounded punctures within a mile. Harnigan nearly cried. But we've got here safely. Glad you walked on, Martin—Marna might have been worried, don'tcherknow!"

"Yes," Martin agreed. "I'm very glad I walked on." He looked at Marna. "I was just telling Mrs. Paget that I feel I really ought to take myself home to-morrow. The length of my visit must be a positive infliction."

Marna tried to speak, but her lips felt dry. She looked at her husband, and the adoration in his eyes brought a choking sensation to her throat.

With an effort she forced a little laugh.

"What nonsense! We're only too pleased to have you," she said lightly. After all, it was for such a very short time longer. Hugh would soon be gone, and then nothing would matter any more.

Renny Martin was close behind her.

"Does that mean I am to stay?" he asked, with mock humility.

Marna laid a hand on her husband's arm. It gave her a sense of comfort and security, to feel him beside her.

"Of course. We want you to stay!" she said.

Obituary

HENRY HALCOMBE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 26.—The late Henry Halcombe, who passed away at Holloway, Ontario, on Friday, December 14, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. R. Mitz, was a former well known and highly respected resident of the Township of Belmont. The funeral was held on Monday, December 17, interment being made in Preneveau cemetery. A very impressive service was conducted at Holloway by Rev. Mr. Snell of Foxboro circuit, whose text Psalm 91, verse 16: "With long life will I satisfy him and show him my salvation" dealing with the security of the Godly was a very fitting tribute to the life of the deceased. The pall-bearers were six grandsons, namely: Raymond Wilde and Harold Wilde of Havelock, Ralph Patterson of Toronto, Berson Mitz, James Deslor and Stanley Prest, of Foxboro.

Mr. Holcombe was in his 95th year and was born in the Township of Richmond near Napanee. He was one of the pioneers of the Township of Belmont coming with his parents to Lot 10, Concession 3 in his early manhood. Here he helped his father clear the land which was very heavily timbered. In the year, 1860 he married Miss Elizabeth Sexsmith of Selby, Ont. and after his marriage moved to Round Lake settlement where he also had to clear the land. In 1872 he purchased the old homestead at what is now known as Victoria, east of Havelock, the present owner of the farm being Floyd Steinburgh.

His wife preceseased him thirty-seven years ago and five children of a family of seven survive, namely: Mrs. T. Patterson of Toronto, Mrs. G. R. Mitz of Holloway, Mrs. C. Wilde of California, Mrs. Walter Wilde and one son, J. W. Holcombe of town. Two boys died when very young.

Mr. Holcombe lived a quiet life. A Methodist in religion, he and his family were regular attendants at the church services, taking a deep interest in all Christian activities and through all the years his home was always open to the ministers of the gospel. A few years after his wife's death he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Mitz, but was a frequent visitor to the other members of the family. Death came suddenly at six o'clock on Friday morning, December 14, as he was able to partake of his evening meal at the table with his daughter the night before.

WILLIAM HUBBEL.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 26.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Following a period of failing health William Hubbel died at his home here yesterday morning. Mr. Hubbell was in his eightieth year and had been a resident of Campbellford for the past forty-five years. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hubbel of Rawdon township, where he resided till he came to Campbellford. He was a charter member of the local preceptory of the Black Knights of Ireland and and honorary member of L.O.L. 36. He was a member of the Methodist and now United church, and a regular attendant of the services till recent years when failing health would not permit him to be about out of doors. For many years he was an employe of the Doxsee Plaining Mill and later was employed by A. J. Meyers. For the past five years he has been employed during the summer seasons by the Parks Commission of the city of Windor. The funeral will be held from his late residence, Centre street, on Wednesday, December 26 at two o'clock. Following service in St. John's United church the remains will be interred in Mount Pleasant cemetery. The last rites will be under the direction of the Orange Order.

MRS. WILLIAM BANCROFT

The many friends of Mrs. William Bancroft, widow of the late William Bancroft, will regret to learn of her death at Mr. John Guthrie's in Harvey on Sunday, December 16, in her seventy-third year. Mrs. Bancroft was one of the earliest settlers of the Township of Harvey and subsequenty was appointed postmistress at Rockcroft post office.

The late Mrs. Bancroft had many friends who sympathized deeply with her in her prolonged illness. She leaves to mourn her loss seven daughters and two sons. The children are: Mrs. John Guthrie, Harvey; Mrs. James McDonald, Peterborough; Mrs. Fred Bayliss, Toronto; Mrs. James Wilson, Mrs. John Eastwood, Mrs. Art Richardson, all of Toronto; Mrs. Ernest Sutton of Detroit, Mich.; Ernest, Toronto; Stanley of Lakehurst.

The funeral took place on Wednesday, December 19, at Bobcaygeon cemetery.

THOMAS McAVEILLA

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 26.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—The remains of the late Thomas McAvella were brought from Peterborough on Saturday afternoon at half past one for interment in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Cemetery. Mr. McAvella was an old and respected citizen of the township of Seymour. For many years he was noted for his physical prowess and industry. Of late years he was forced to abandon his chosen occupation, farming, owing to failing health. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Father Phelan. Mr. McAvella is survived by one son, Thomas of town, and two daughters, Rose of Peterborough and Mary of Toronto.

ROBERT TODD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 26.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence)—The funeral of the late Robert Todd was held yesterday afternoon from the A. D. A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

THE Christmas of 1928 has passed into history and a New Year will soon be ushered in. Let us resolve to make 1929 even better than 1928 and to make the very best of our lives during that year.

* * * * * * *

It is very surprising to know how many little children were made happy yesterday by the thoughtfulness of our readers, and as a result their strong faith in Santa Claus still remains.

* * * * * * *

Now that Christmas is over, do not forget to keep a list of all the gifts which you have received with the names of those who sent them, so that notes of thanks may be sent. Children, in their eager rush to see the contents, often disregard the names and they are destroyed.

* * * * * * *

It is very nice to keep all Christmas cards received in a definite place and to make a list of them. This, you will find, is a wonderful help in making your own list next year.

* * * * * * *

Economical housewives, too, will save the pretty ribbons and cord when pressed out, will make ribbon flowers, or they may be used in which come with the gifts. Often the ribbons are wide enough so that dressing dolls.

* * * * * * *

If they cannot be used in this way, they may be kept and used next Christmas. And if you think you will not have any use, whatever, for them, keep them and pass them on to someone else who will have use for such things.

* * * * * * *

Do not forget this, it is important. Write all your little notes of acknowledgment for Christmas gifts before January 2. It is important because it is the courteous thing to do, and also because the longer they are put off, the more embarrassing the task becomes.

* * * * * * *

I know of people who throw away their Christmas cards after they have finished looking them over. But do not do this. They will make excellent and pretty scrap books and will bring sunshine if sent to sick children in hospitals.

* * * * * * *

Of course, do not leave names on the cards, but remove them if this is at all possible.

* * * * * * *

In this very modern age, Christmas cards are made very prettily and consequently they are really worth saving for yourself. Make a selection of the most attractive ones and sometime when you are not very busy, paste them on a box or posteboard scrap basket, lacquering them over to keep them preserved.

* * * * * * *

The new corduroy berets are very popular and easy to make. Instructions for making these may be obtained by sending the coupon with a two cent stamp, to Marion.

* * * * * * *

Hospitality in Peterborough flourishes at a high degree around Christmas. Perhaps the same degree does not reach this high pitch all year around, but there are always those families where it seems like this, where it has been handed down throughout the generations.

* * * * * * *

In a discussion at one time, someone said that hospitality has only come into existence within the past few years. At one time it seemed that places of amusement would take entertainment away from the homes.

* * * * * * *

But this does not seem the case now, and families are throwing open their homes at this time of the year for the entertainment of friends. Small house parties and informal teas are being given throughout the season and the habit is growing everywhere.

* * * * * * *

During the holiday season there is a very great demand for table decorations, favors, attractive dishes and so on, which bears out the fact of the great amount of entertaining done by housewives in Peterborough.

* * * * * * *

There are those women who entertain very largely for their own amusement and who do not pay much attention as to whom the guests are.

* * * * * * *

Then other housewives entertain for the business advantage it gives their husbands. Usually these people regard the cost of such an entertainment as a good investment, which it usually is.

* * * * * * *

And still some people entertain with the idea in mind of maintaining or even strengthening their own social standing in the community. Such people desire very much to have the names of their guests in the social register.

* * * * * * *

Perhaps these guests may not be worth anything in the business way, but their presence is enjoyed and repays the hostess for her effort to entertain.

* * * * * * *

These kinds of hospitality I have mentioned are only minor ones, which I know, do not exist at this season of goodwill. There is a much higher, more worth-while kind of hospitality than any of these.

* * * * * * *

This last kind is based on friendship and sociability—the kind that is enjoyed by everyone and the sort that is on the increase with the many housewives in Peterborough and district.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

DECEMBER 26, 1928

To-day's selection is suggested by 'Sheila's' husband, to whom we are indebted.

THE OTHER WISE MAN

was written by Henry Van Dyke, who was born in Pennsylvania, in 1852.

There was silence in the Hall of Dreams, where I was listening to the story of the other wise man. And through this silence, I saw, but very dimly, his figure passing over the dready undulations of the desert, high upon the back of his camel, rocking steadily onward like a ship over the waves.

Through heat and cold, the Magian moved steadily onward.

It was the third day after the three wise men had come to that place and had found Mary and Joseph, with the young child, Jesus, and had laid their gifts of gold and frankincense and myrrh at his feet.

Then the other wise man drew near, weary, but full of hope, bearing his ruby and his pearl to offer to the King. "For now at last," he said, "I shall surely find him, though it be alone, and later than my brethren.

This is the place of which the Hebrew exile told me that the prophets had spoken, and here I shall behold the rising of the great light. But I must inquire about the visit of my brethren, and to what house the star directed them, and to whom they presented their tribute."

The streets of the village seemed to be deserted, and Artaban wondered whether the men had all gone to the hill pastures to bring down their sheep. From the open door of a low stone cottage he heard the sound of a woman's voice singing softly. He entered and found a young mother hushing her baby to rest. She told him of the strangers from the Far East who had appeared in the village three days ago, and how they said that a star had guided them to the place where Joseph of Nazareth was lodging with his wife and her newborn child, and how they had paid reverence to the child and given him many rich gifts.

"But the travelers disappeared again," she continued, "as suddenly as the yhad come. We were afraid at the strangeness of their visit. We could not unders' nd it. The man of Nazareth took the babe and his mother and fled away that same night secretly, and it was whispered that they were going far away to Egypt. Ever since, there has been a spell upon the village; something evil hangs over it. They say that the Roman soldiers are coming from Jerusalem to force a new tax from us, and the men had driven the flocks and herds far back among the hills, and hillen themselves to escape it."

Artaban listened to her gentle, timid speech, and the child in her arms looked up in his face and smiled, stretching out its rosy hands to grasp at the winged circle of gold on his breast. His heart warmed to the touch. It seemed like a greeting of love and trust to one who had journeyed long in loneliness and perplexity, fighting with his own doubts and fears, and following a light that was veiled in clouds.

"Might not this child have been the promised Prince?" he asked within himself, as he touched its soft cheek. "Kings have been born ere now in lowlier houses than this, and that favorite of the stars may rise even from a cottage. But it has not seemed good to the God of wisdom to reward my search so soon and so easily. The one whom I seek has gone before me; and now I must follow the King to Ekypt."

The young mother laid the babe in its cradle, and rose to minister to the wants of the strange guest that fate had brought into her house. She set food before him, the plain fare of peasants, but willingly offered, and therefore full of refreshment for the soul as well as for the body. Artaban accepted it gratefully; and, as he ate, the child fell into a happy slumber, and murmured sweetly in its dreams, and a great peace filled the quiet room.

But suddenly there came the noise of a wild confusion and uproar in the streets of the village, a shrieking and wailing of women's voices, a clangor of brazen trumpets and a clashing of swords, and a desperate cry: "The soldiers! the soldiers of Herod! They are killing our children."

The young mother's face grew white with terror. She clasped her child to her bosom, and crouched motionless in the darkest corner of the room, covering him with the folds of her robe, lest he should wake and cry.

But Artaban went quickly and stood in the doorway of the house. His broad shoulders filled the portal from side to side, and the peak of his white cap all but touched the lintel.

The soldiers came hurrying down the street with bloody hands and dripping swords. At the sight of the stranger in his imposing dress they hesitated with surprise. The captain of the band approached the threshold to thrust him aside, but Artaban did not stir. His face was as calm as though he were watching the stars, and in his eyes there burned that steady radiance before which even the half-tamed hunting leopard srinks, and the fierce bloodhound pauses in his leap. He held the soldier silently for an instant, and then said in a low voice:

"I am all alone in this place, and I am waiting to give this jewel to the prudent captain who will leave me in peace."

He showed the ruby, glistening in the hollow of his hand like a great drop of blood.

The captain was amazed at the splendor of the gem. The pupils of his eyes expanded with desire, and the hard lines of greed wrinkled around his lips. He stretched out his hand and took the ruby.

"March on!" he cried to his men, "there is no child here. The house is still."

The clamor and the clang of arms passed down the street as the headlong fury of the chase sweeps by the secret covert where the trembling deer is hidden. Artaban re-entered the cottage; he turned his face to the East and prayed:—

"God of truth, forgive my sin! I have said the thing that is not, to save the life of a child. And two of my gifts are gone. I have spent for man that which was meant for God. Shall I ever be worthy to see the face of the King?"

But the voice of the woman, weeping for joy in the shadow behind him, said very gently:—

"Because thou hast saved the life of my little one, may the Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make His face to shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace.

Three and thirty years of the life of Artaban had passed away, and he was still a pilgrim and a seeker after light. His hair, once darker than the cliffs of Zagros, was now white as the wintry snow that covered them. His eyes, that once flashed like flames of fire, were dull as embers smoldering among the ashes.

Worn and weary and ready to die, but still looking for the King, he had come for the last time to Jerusalem.

Artaban joined company with a group of people from his own country, Partian Jews who had come up to keep the Passover, and inquired of them the cause of the tumult and where they were going.

"We are going," they answered, "to the place called Golgotha, outside the city walls, where there is to be an execution. Have you not heard what has happened? Two famous robbers are to be crucified, and with them another, called Jesus of Nazareth, a man who has done many wonderful works among the people, so that they love him greatly. But the priests and elders have said tha het must die, because he gave himself out to be the Son of God. And Pilate has sent him to the cross because he said that he was the 'King of the Jews'."

How strangely these familiar words fell upon the tired heart of Artaban! They had led him for a lifetime over land and sea. And now they came to him darkly and mysteriously like a message of despair. The King had arisen, but he had been denied and cast out. He was about to perish. Perhaps he was already dying. Could it be the same who had been born in Bethlehem, thirty-three years ago, at whose birth the star had appeared in heaven, and of whose coming the prophets had spoken?

Artaban's heart beat unsteadily with that troubled, doubtful apprehension which is the excitement of old age. But he said within himself, "The ways of God are stranger than the thoughts of man, and it may be that I shall find the King, at last, in the hands of His enemies, and shall come in time to offer my pearl for His ransom before He dies."

So the old man followed the multitude with slow and painful steps towards the Damascus gate of the city. Just beyond the entrance of the guardhouse a troop of Macedonian soldiers came down the street, dragging a young girl with torn dress and disheveled hair. As the Magian paused to look at her with compassion, she broke suddenly from the hands of her tormentors, and threw herself at his feet, clasping him around the knees. She had seen his white cap and the winged circle on his breast.

"Have pity on me," she cried, "and save me, for the sake of the God of Purity! I also am a daughter of the true religion which is taught by the Magi. My father was a merchant af Parthia, but he is dead, and I am seized for his debts to be sold as a slave. Save me from worse than death!"

Artaban trembled.

It was the old conflict in his soul, which had come to him in the palm grove of Babylon and in the cottage at Bethlehem—the conflict between the expectation of faith and the impulse of love. Twice the gift which he had consecrated to the worship of religion had been drawn from his hand to the service of humanity. This was the third trial, the ultimate probation, the final and irrevocable choice.

Was it his great opportunity, or his last temptation? He could not tell. One thing only was clear in the darkness of his mind—it was inevitable. And does not the inevitable come from God?

One thing only was sure to his divided heart—to rescue this helpless girl would be a true deed of love. And is not love the light of the soul?

He took the pearl from his bosom. Never had it seemed so luminous, so radiant, so full of tender, living lustre. He laid it in the hand of the slave.

"This is thy ransom, daughter! It is the last of my treasures which I kept for the King."

While he spoke the darkness of the sky thickened, and shuddering tremors ran through the earth, heaving convulsively like the breast of one who struggles with mighty grief.

The walls of the houses rocked to and fro. Stones were loosened and crashed into the street. Dust clouds filled the air. The soldiers fled in terror, reeling like drunken men. But Artaban and the girl whom he had ransomed crouched helpless beneath the wall of the Praetorium.

What had he to fear? What had he to live for? He had given away the last remnant of his tribute for the King. He had parted with the last hope of finding Him. The quest was over, and it had failed. But, even in that thought, accepted and embraced, there was peace. It was not resignation. It was not submission. It was something more profound the searching. He knew that all was well, because he had done the best that he could, from day to day. He had been true to the light that had been given to him. He had looked for more. And if he had not found it, if a failure was all that came out of his life, doubtless that was the best that was possible. He had not seen the revelation of "life everlasting, incorruptible, and immortal." But he knew that even if he could live his earthly life over again, it could not be otherwise than it had been.

One more lingering pulsation of the earthquake quivered through the ground. A heavy tile, shaken from the roof, fell and struck the old man on the temple. He lay breathless and pale, with his gray head resting on the young girl's shoulder, and the blood trickling from the wound. As she bent over him, fearing that he was dead, there came a voice through the twilight very small and still, like music sounding from a distance, in which the notes are clear but the words are lost. The girl turned to see if some one had spoken from the window above them, but she saw no one.

Then the old man's lips began to move, as if in answer, and she heard him say in the Parthian tongue:—

"Not so, my Lord! For when saw I Thee and hungered, and fed Thee? Or thirsty, and gave Thee drink? When saw I Thee a stranger, and took Thee in? Or naked, and clothed Thee? When saw I Thee sick or in prison and came unto Thee? Three and thirty years have I looked for Thee; but I have never seen Thy face, nor ministered to Thee, my King."

He ceased, and the sweet voice came again. And again the maid heard it, very faintly and far away. But now it seemed as though she understood the words::—

"Verily I say unto thee, inasmuch as thou hast done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, thou hast done it unto Me."

A calm radiance of wonder and joy lighted the pale face of Artaban like the first ray of dawn on a snowy mountain peak. One long, last breath of relief exhaled gently from his lips. His journey was ended. His treasures were accepted. The other Wise Men had found the King.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

It is such a convenience for the busy housewife to have a tool kit of her own. Unless she is something of an expert the tools need not be at all expensive or numerous. She may have a tool kit that compares with a real tool chest as a bachelor's mending kit compares with a housewife's sewing outfit.

I would suggest a basket—with a handle, as this can be carried around so easily. My own is a medium-sized "market basket" lacquered red—really quite attractive.

Most of the tools you will need you can buy for as little as ten or fifteen cents apiece. Here is a list:

Case opener—which you will need to open packing boxes.
Small chisel.
File.
Gimlet.
Medium-sized hammer—with a small tack hammer, if you can afford two.
Pliers.
Small saw.
Screw driver.
Wire cutter.
Box of assorted nails.
Tacks of various sizes.
Box of assorted screws.
Spool of wire.
Sand paper.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office

"Dear Marion:

I would be delighted if I thought I could give some young girl advice. There were times when I was in my 'teens I wished for someone to advise me. But then, do we always take advice offered us, unless it corresponds with our own wishes?

Here are a few suggestions that may come in handy to some of the readers. I make three pads, quilted on the machine, of flannelette and cotton batting, size about 18 inches by 27 inches, to use under the baby in bed or in the carriage. They will absorb quite a lot, and I find the flannelette makes a softer pad and is easy to wash.

Children that play on the floor are so hard on their stockings. I have found that I now buy two pairs of stockings the same shade, and when the knees wear out I cut the leg off between the ankle and the knee of one pair and then sew them over the knees of the other pair. Of course they are only good, then, to play in.

I saw some little time ago where a reader wanted a recipe for pie crust. I find I have real good luck with my pies if I add a tiny bit of baking powder and let my crust set for a while before I roll it.

I wonder if many of our readers have tried making marshmallows? They are so simple to make, and so cheap. I go by a recipe that comes in a box of gelatine.

Lastly, here is a cheap Christmas decoration. Buy colored paper and cut it into strips an inch wide, and six or eight inches long, and make chains of them using different colors for the links.

Dear Marion, I am sure you will be out of patience by now, so will say 'Merry Christmas' to you.

Sincerely,
Rae."

Indeed, "Rae," I thoroughly enjoyed your letter, with its wealth of ideas that I am sure all neighbors will appreciate. Thank you very much. The helps you give are well worth saving in the scrap book.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I am very sorry to have to say I have not had time to thank you for those helps you sent me but I have been busy sewing. You see, I make all the things for the house, baby and myself. I never buy very much ready made, as I find great pleasure and pastime in sewing. I have just finished making baby a small coat to play in.

Well, Marion, I think the idea of Santa's Pals is wonderful. My, it is nice to think of our neighbors doing this, and I know they will all be glad if they can help in any way. I am sending some cards to some dear old friends. I know it's not much, but, Marion, I think old people like to be remembered that way, don't you? I enjoy reading the 'Whatnot' every night, and I was terribly disguisted with 'Thinker's' letters. Really, there was no truth or foundation that I could see in either of them, and only hope we don't have to have our page marred with such silly thoughts again.

I am going to try out some recipes I have for candy for Christmas. Of course they are all from the paper, or I should say 'The Women's Page.'

Well, Marion, I think I have taken up enough of your precious time, but believe me I am going to write again soon.

Yours sincerely,
Icicle."

It is nice to hear from you again, "Icicle," and I hope you do not defer that next letter too long. You must be a very busy woman indeed, with all your sewing. You have the right philosophy; when you enjoy doing a thing it doesn't seem like work, but a pastime.

I'm glad you like the idea of Santa's Pals. Of course, with all my other work I couldn't give it the time I should, but it was nice to see the pile of parcels growing every day. And how pleasant it is to think of our neighbors doing so much kindness!

* * *

"Dear Marion:

It is often said that the world is growing worse; but when we read in The Examiner of the number of societies and organisations that are planning and systematically trying to shed cheer and happiness at the Christmas season; seeking to have every family and child in the city of Peterborough share in the Yuletide joys, we realize that this old saying is false and that the spirit of the Christchild is abroad in the land.

Not only are churches and the Salvation Army engaged in this purpose but the men's organizations are doing splendid work along this line and helping those less fortunately situated.

It is truly following the example of the Man of Galilee who went about doing good, for after all every deed of kindness and helping hand given to others is just the outward expression of our innate sense of what God expects of us.

His was the first and greatest Christmas gift—a Saviour.

I enjoy your page very much and wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Ruralite."

I liked reading your letter, "Ruralite," and think your sentiments are just splendid. It is, indeed, wonderful what good work these organizations do, and I am so glad that The Examiner this year took up my plan to help them out.

Thank you for the recipe for almond icing for the Christmas cake. I'm afraid it may be a little late, but the neighbors will wish, I am sure, to clip it for their scrap books.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I am a constant reader of your page, and I enjoy it very much. I suppose you are a very busy woman, are you not? I hope you do not get too rushed with work, as that would be a calamity.

I would be lovely to have a page for men. I wonder what those 'Thinkers' would do? They would probably stop quarrelling about women, and stop to think of the great women whom men committed suicide over. I wonder what Helen of Troy, Cleopatra, and others would say to those 'Thinkers' if they were living. I also wonder what Solomon would say—the man who knew so much about women and their ways, and how they arranged many doings so perfectly.

What is more fickle than a man, or at least the two 'Thinkers'? They are absolutely hopeless, poor things. What do you think?

It is early yet, Marion dear, but just the same: 'A Merry Christmas'.

Yours truly,
Binny."

I DO manage to keep working nearly all the time, "Binny" (or is it "Benny"?) but I have the idea that one cannot do too much work, so long as it is pleasant. And this answering of letters and conducting our pages is certainly pleasant.

If we had a page specially for men, my dear, do you know what they would do? "Fold their tents like the Arabs, and silently steal away." The editorial page is the men's page, traditionally, but how often do you see a letter from a man on it? Come in every turn of the moon perhaps. And look what the women are doing!

I must stop that, or someone will be coming along to say I really AM a man-hater. Of course I can always bring forward one man, at least, as a witness that I AM NOT—if I wish!

Thanks for your good wishes, "Binny." You didn't send your name and address, so I can't book your pen for you.

CHEESE COMPANIES HAVE GOOD YEAR

Prosperous Statements Read at Annual Meeting of Stirling District Factories

(Examiner Correspondence.)

STIRLING, December 26. — Farmers who are in the dairying business are wearing smiles these days as the annual meetings of the various cheese factories are being held and all report a year of great prosperity in their statements issued to the patrons. As an example, Evergreen Cheese and Butter Company report having received 2,417,969 pounds of milk, from which was made 209,731 pounds of cheese. This was sold for $44,303.43, an average price of 21¼ cents per pound. A reserve of 25 mills is taken off, also $2,021.40 paid for milk drawing, the balance of $37,063.76 being distributed to the fifty-three patrons of the factory, according to the pounds of butterfat their milk contained as per a monthtest made by C. F. Levin, dairy instructor for the district. What used to be a lost item is of considerable value as a revenue to all cheese factories now—that is, "whey butter." The whey is separated at Evergreen Factory, and from the cream was made 2,153 pounds of butter, the value being $821.00 and 3,061.8 pounds of butterfat bringing in $994.15. After a reserve of $782.97 was taken, $1,032.15 was paid the senders of milk to this factory. John N. West was the maker of the cheese and butter, and Thomas Donnan, the president and salesman of the company for 1928. The price for milk paid to the patrons of the factory was $49.12 with an additional $1.87 to those who own stock in the company.

At the annual meeting held on Thursday, December 20, all the officers were re-elected for 1929. Messrs. Murdoff, manager of the local branch of the Royal Bank, and Mills, manager of the Montreal Bank, were present, and were very optimistic in their remarks regarding the cheese industry. Mr. Levin in his remarks gave words of encouragement, and advocated another way whereby increased benefit would come to the shareholders if a cold storage plant was installed, which would pay for itself in a short time by increasing the quality of the product of the factory.

MESSAGE FROM ROYAL CONSORT

This is essential to his progress toward recovery and may be taken as an indication that his condition is satisfactory. The extreme slowness of his progress still continues and any rapid stride forward is therefore not to be expected.

"Our first thought yesterday morning was that of newborn hope of our King's recovery, which has gone on steadily, increasing in strength these recent days," declared Dr. Archibald Fleming in his sermon yesterday at St. Columbus (Church of Scotland), South-West London. "We are still conscious of the perils that beset the King on the long and trying path he has still to tread, and remain constant in our prayers on his behalf. We acknowledge with thankfulness the Divine goodness which so far has responded to our desires. Each day of his illness we have learned to honor our King more and count him precious. Therefore, more earnestly than ever, we still shall pray, 'God Save the King'."

ing on such points as the disposal of the Good Roads grant, and expenditure on road machinery, and in the latter connection stressed the fact that further expenditures on good roads must be expected and prepared for, in keeping with the trend of the times.

Reeve Rye also answered several questions from the ratepayers, and concluded by wishing all the compliments of the season.

W. G. Waterman.

Brief but interesting were the remarks of the 1928 Deputy-Reeve, Mr. Waterman, who thanked his mover and seconder and wished all a merry Christmas. He, too, looked back over a year harmony in the council and expressed the hope that it would continue so.

Deplores Expenditures.

Pointing out that, in his opinion, the high taxation for the purpose of good roads was detrimental to the values of homes in North Monaghan, in that the high taxation was not encouraging to farmers, R. O. Dobbin, who contested the deputy-reeveship last year, spoke to considerable length. He criticized the expenditure of what he considered a large sum of money for a grader, expressing the belief that a cheaper one would have answered the purpose just as well. He felt that there was too much "bunk" talked at the Good Roads convention in Toronto, and that the road foreman in North Monaghan had not done the grading in a suitable manner.

Mr. Dobbin declared that he was for efficiency with economy and would work to that end as a member of the township council.

Andrew Kent.

As a member of the council for the past two years, Andrew Kent spoke of the functioning of that body, pointing out that there will always be problems which will necessitate careful handling. He considered the building of Confederation school a triumph for the township, and appreciated the support accorded him by the ratepayers during the past two years.

Oppose Mr. Dobbin.

Thanking his mover and seconder, William Whitefield declared "We cannot get something for nothing. We did our best in the purchase of the grader and other expenditures. Herbert Bourne, also speaking of Mr. Dobbins attack on the past administration, declared that the grader had been purchased after careful consideration. He gave full credit to Reeve Rye as a capable official.

Bert Henderson and John Williams both favored the return of the 1928 council for another year. They felt that the affairs of the township had been well administered. Thomas Henry and T. Lillico also urged an all-round acclamation previous to the close of the meeting.

CHEESE COMPANIES HAVE GOOD YEAR

Prosperous Statements Read at Annual Meeting of Stirling District Factories.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

STIRLING, December 26. — Farmers who are in the dairying business are wearing smiles these days as the annual meetings of the various cheese factories are being held and all report a year of great prosperity in their statements issued to the patrons. As an example, Evergreen Cheese and Butter Company report having received 2,417,969 pounds of milk, from which was made 209,731 pounds of cheese. This was sold for $44,303.43, an average price of 21¼ cents per pound. A reserve of 25 mills is taken off, also $2,021.40 paid for milk drawing, the balance of $37,063.76 being distributed to the fifty-three patrons of the factory, according to the pounds of butterfat their milk contained as per a month-test made by C. F. Levin, dairy instructor for the district. What used to be a lost item is of considerable value as a revenue to all cheese factories now—that is, "whey butter." The whey is separated at Evergreen Factory, and from the cream was made 2,153 pounds of butter, the value being $821.60 and 3,061.3 pounds of butterfat bringing in $994.13. After a reserve of $782.97 was taken, $1,032.15 was paid the tenders of milk to this factory. John N. West was the maker of the cheese and butter, and Thomas Donnan, the president and salesman of the company for 1928. The price for milk paid to the patrons of the factory was $49.12 with an additional $1.87 to those who own stock in the company.

At the annual meeting held on Thursday, December 20, all the officers were re-elected for 1929. Messrs. Murdoff, manager of the local branch of the Royal Bank, and Mills, manager of the Montreal Bank, were present, and were very optimistic in their remarks regarding the cheese industry. Mr. Levin in his remarks gave words of encouragement, and advocated another way whereby increased benefit would come to the shareholders if a cold storage plant was installed, which would pay for itself in a short time by increasing the quality of the product of the factory.

This is essential to his progress toward recovery and may be taken as an indication that his condition is satisfactory. The extreme slowness of his progress still continues and any rapid stride forward is therefore not to be expected.

"Our first thought yesterday morning was that of newborn hope of our King's recovery, which has gone on steadily, increasing in strength these recent days," declared Dr. Archibald Fleming in his sermon yesterday at St. Columbus (Church of Scotland), South-West London. "We are still conscious of the perils that beset the King on the long and trying path he has still to tread, and remain constant in our prayers on his behalf. We acknowledge with thankfulness the Divine goodness which so far has responded to our desires. Each day of his illness we have learned to honor our King more and count him precious. Therefore, more earnestly than ever, we still shall pray, 'God Save the King'."

ing on such points as the disposal of the Good Roads grant, and expenditure on road machinery, and in the latter connection stressed the fact that further expenditures on good roads must be expected and prepared for, in keeping with the trend of the times.

Reeve Rye also answered several questions from the ratepayers, and concluded by wishing all the compliments of the season.

W. G. Waterman.

Brief but interesting were the remarks of the 1928 Deputy-Reeve, Mr. Waterman, who thanked his mover and seconder and wished all a merry Christmas. He, too, looked back over a year of harmony in the council and expressed the hope that it would continue so.

Deplores Expenditures.

Pointing out that, in his opinion, the high taxation for the purpose of good roads was detrimental to the values of homes in North Monaghan, in that the high taxation was not encouraging to farmers, R. O. Dobbin, who contested the deputy-reeveship last year, spoke to considerable length. He criticized the expenditure of what he considered a large sum of money for a grader, expressing the belief that a cheaper one would have answered the purpose just as well. He felt that there was too much "bunk" talked at the Good Roads convention in Toronto, and that the road foreman in North Monaghan had not done the grading in a suitable manner.

Mr. Dobbin declared that he was for efficiency with economy and would work to that end as a member of the township council.

Andrew Kent.

As a member of the council for the past two years, Andrew Kent spoke of the functioning of that body, pointing out that there will always be problems which will necessitate careful handling. He considered the building of Confederation school a triumph for the township, and appreciated the support accorded him by the ratepayers during the past two years.

Oppose Mr. Dobbin.

Thanking his mover and seconder, William Whitefield declared "We cannot get something for nothing. We did our best in the purchase of the grader and other expenditures. Herbert Bourne, also speaking of Mr. Dobbins attack on the past administration, declared that the grader had been purchased after careful consideration. He gave full credit to Reeve Rye as a capable official.

Bert Anderson and John Williams both favored the return of the 1928 council for another year. They felt that the affairs of the township had been well administered. Thomas Henry and T. Lillico also urged an all-round acclamation previous to the close of the meeting.

TORONTO LEAFS DEFEAT MAROONS 4-1

TORONTO CLINCHES VICTORY IN FINAL MOMENTS OF PLAY

Both Line-ups Depleted During Game By Injuries Suffered By Players.

MANY PENALTIES.

Chicago Hawks Defeat Boston Bruins 2-1 in Vicious Struggle.

TORONTO, December 26. — In one of the most strenuous National League games staged here in some years, one in which twenty-three minor penalties were handed out by the officials and fines amounting to $115 were imposed by Referee O'Leary, the Maple Leafs defeated the Montreal Maroons for the second time this season, once again the score being 4 to 1. The victory was one in which the Leafs outlasted the visitors. Both teams took the ice minus a regular defence man, Art Duncan still being confined to his bed with tonsilitis, while the Maroons had to play without Babe Siebert, who is nursing a sore shoulder.

The depleted ranks of both teams were further reduced during the game. In the first period Reg. Horner fractured his right hand and the latest recruit to the locals will be an absentee for some time. In the second period Happy Day and Dave Trottier fell to the ice together in front of the penalty box and Day's skate caught the ex-Varsity Grad on the neck, inflicting a long cut which narrowly missed the jugular vein. In addition Art Smith sustained a cut on the head in one of his many clashes with Hooley Smith and he played the last two periods with his head swathed in bandages. Every other player who was in the game with the exception of the two custodians, carried away souvenirs of the battle.

HAWKS BEAT BRUINS.

BOSTON, Mass., December 26. — The Chicago Black Hawks, the tail-enders in the National Hockey League, made Christmas a merry occasion here last night by defeating the Boston Bruins, 2 to 1, in a vicious struggle. The victory, the third the Black Hawks have won in 13 starts, was mainly due to the marvellous work of Chuck Gardner, guardian of the Chicago cage.

AMERICANS BLANK RANGERS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Easily the fastest game of the local hockey league season, played before the biggest crowd of the year, with the most desperate finish seen since hockey came to stir the blood of New Yorkers, was won last night by the New York Americans from the Blue Devil Rangers. The score was 1 to 0 and there was not a still minute in all the sixty minutes in which the teams battling for the New York championship as well as for places in the National Hockey League sun.

CANPRO LEADERS RALLY FOR WIN

Detroit Scores Three Goals in Last Period To Defeat London.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press). — The League-leading Olympics defeated the flu-riddled Panthers here last night, 3 to 0. The Detroiters scored their three goals all after the halfway mark in the third period had been reached and with rather ridiculous ease against the papier-mache defence that Voss and Arbour presented.

Battle to Tie.

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—When the Windsor Bulldogs were named, no mistake was made. They took a firm hold on the Tigers here last night and renewed the grip after a temporary shaking in the opening session and then stuck with a fighting Hamilton aggregation through an overtime period to finish with an even break. The final score was 1-1, with the devision of points being well earned by both outfits.

Crennan's Saxon Wins Christmas Handicap

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—M. J. Crennan's Saxon scored an impressive victory in winning the Christmas Handicap, a mile and a sixteenth, at Jefferson Park, yesterday, but he was all out to win. The race was run over a lightning fast track, the winner stepping the distance in 1.47 flat. Saxon carried 120 pounds, and conceded much weight to his field. Galahad was second and Old Slip third. The race carried a net value of $3,850. Some 15,000 persons saw the race.

THREE IN TIE FIRST PLACE

Howie Morenz, Nels Stewart and "Ace" Bailey Lead Scorers.

N.H.L. STATISTICS.

MONTREAL, Que., December 26 (Canadian Press). — Howie Morenz, dashing centre-ice player of Canadiens, and leader last season in the race for scoring honors as Canadiens piled up a record goal-total and an astonishing array of successive victories, is again making his presence felt as the present season develops. The scoring statistics, which include games up to Sunday night, released on Monday from the office of President Frank Calder, of the National Hockey League, reveal that Morenz, slow to begin, is now in a tie with Nels Stewart, of the Maroons, and "Ace" Bailey, of Toronto, for first position in the Canadian section of the race, a position which Stewart previously held without challenge.

All three of those engaged in the tie have eleven points, but Stewart has scored the most goals, nine having been despatched from his elusive stick. Morenz and Bailey each have scored six, but each is credited with five assists. Jimmy Ward, the fast-skating right wing of the Maroons, who has been playing in fine form this season, is right on the heels of the leaders. The former Fort William amateur has had seven goals and three assists for a total of ten points. Four are tied for fifth position, all with eight points, these being Billy Burch, of the Americans, Aurel Joliat, the Canadien left winger, Reginald "Hooley" Smith, Montreal centre, and Andy Blair, the rangy Toronto centre, who broke into the big league only this season.

Bill Cook, dashing right-wing star of the world's champion New York Rangers, still holds the scoring lead in the American division of the race, though he added only one point to his total. Cook has scored six goals and furnished three assists for a total of nine points. Carson Cooper, the "shovel shot" of Detroit, also added to his list. He, too, has scored six goals and with one assist gets a point total of seven, which ties him with Frankie Boucher, centre-ice player of the Rangers. Boucher's unselfish play is emphasized by the fact that he has had five assists, but only two goals. Herbie Lewis, Detroit forward, and Harry Oliver, Boston right wing, each have had four goals and two assists. They are tied for fourth position.

Leads in Penalties.

Lionel Conacher is the most heavily penalized player in either section of the race. The stalwart captain of New York Americans now has spent 55 minutes on the penalty bench. This gives him a wide margin over "Red" Dutton, dynamic defence player of Montreal Maroons, though Dutton's time on the bench eclipses that of any player except Conacher in either section of the league. He has served 39 minutes. Bailey, of Toronto, is next with 36, this also exceeding the total penalties of any player in the American section, which equals the time served by Eddie Shore, leader in penalties in the American section.

An odd development of the week was that neither Shore nor Aleck McKinnon, of Chicago Black Hawks, added a single minute to their previous record. Shore's total still remains at 35 minutes, and McKinnon has lost 28 minutes, the same total gleaned by "Puss" Traub, of Detroit Cougars. Frank Frederickson, who recently figured in a trade which sent him from Boston to Pittsburgh, is fourth among the penalized players in the section. He has served 24 minutes.

WINNER AT DRAW.

Miss Geraldine Moore Draws Lucky Number in Contest.

HAVELOCK, Dec. 26 (Examiner Correspondence). — Miss Geraldine Moore, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Moore, was the winner of a large turkey at a drawing held on Friday evening in Reeve Curtis' store under the auspices of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church. Mr. Curtis conducted the drawing. About eighty dollars was realized from the sale of tickets.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

Peterborough's intermediate hockey team fought its way as far as the intermediate O.H.A. semi-finals before it met defeat at the hands of the Berlin (Kitchener) Dutchmen.

The Petes invaded Berlin first and were beaten 9 to 1, playing below form and running into some tough breaks that robbed them of good chances to score while on the other hand the Dutchmen got several soft counters.

It was a different story when the Berlin team came back to Peterborough for the return fixture and the game which was won by the Petes 5 to 3 ranks among the best of the battles that Brock street rink has housed.

It was featured by the fact that "Uncle Peter" Gross, one of the last of the old time lifting defence men scored two goals for Berlin by hoisting the rubber high into the air from his position on the defence and dropping it into the Peterborough net.

The game was played on March 3 and was a hard fought, somewhat strenuous battle in which both teams showed a tendency to mix freely.

Eight goals down on the round the Petes faced an uphill task that was made even more strenuous when after eight minutes' play Goldie Cochrane, star rover of the Dutchmen stickhandled close in and beat Wasson at close range. The Peterborough team fought back bitterly and Morgan evened up the core on a pass from Cavanah. Before half time the latter had put the homesters in front with one of his bullet shots.

Early in the second Cochrane of the visitors was injured and retired, Chris Graham being dropped with him, and the game finished with the teams playing six men each. Then Mister Gross introduced his lifting specialty, scooping one from his position at cover point that landed behind Wasson and that worked so well that he tried it again with the same results and the Dutchmen were ahead.

The Petes weer determined to save the game even if the round were lost and they staged a fighting finish. Morgan broke away and went around Gross and Forest to tie the score, and then Wallie Parnell dashed down and gave Cavanah a pass for the goal that put the homesters in front.

Cavanah, who was the big scorer of the night, wound up by tallying by shooting a fast past Bricker and the final count was 5 to 3.

The line up:

AUSTRALIANS PREPARE FOR THIRD MATCH

Antipodeans Plan Changes in Team Roster For Contest.

MAY REPLACE RYDER.

British Need One More Victory For Custody of Championship "Ashes."

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press Cable—The members of the English cricket team touring Australia spent Christmas day here and to-day will begin preparations for the third test match which opens on the local grounds on Saturday. The Englishmen had good reason for feeling considerable joy during the festive season because they have already won two of the series of five test matches and, if they can annex the third, they will have successfully defended the championship "ashes" and will be their custodian until 1931, when the Australians challenge them again on a tour in England.

Australian cricket followers have had an uncertain time since the test match. It is believed that a change in the teams which have been representing Australia is coing because of the poor showing made at Brisbane and Sydney. At the former city the antipodeans were beaten by 675 runs, the heaviest defeat in runs in the history of international cricket. At Sydney England put on a first innings score of 636, a record for all tests, and won by eight wickets. Antipodean cricket lovers are wondering whether the bad luck which has followed the Australian teams will come here. At Brisbane J. M. Gregory, fast bowler, and C. E. Kelleway, all rounder, had to retire in the middle of the game, while at Sydney, W. H. Ponsford, one of the greatest batsmen of all time, was injured and dropped out. It is doubtful whether the smashed finger Ponsford received will have healed sufficiently to let him bat in the third test. The Australian Board of Control which governs cricket is evidently considering the question of the next team to meet England very carefully, because no announcement of even their provincial selection has yet been made.

The English team which will play here has not been announced either, but A. P. F. Chapman, captain of the tourists, has made it a practise not to finally decide on his eleven until the morning the match commences.

May Replace Ryder

The Australian board of control has been under fire from the critics and it is under stood is considering whether or not to continue J. S. Ryder as captain. Ryder made his debut in this capacity at Brisbane, everything has gone wrong for him, through his plucky effort in the match at Sydney, when he helped save Australia from a single innings defeat, shows him to be a courageous batsman. On their showing in the test matches only W. M. Woodfull, R. L. Hendry, Ryder and P. A. Oldfield deserve inclusion in the next team on their batting strength. The Australian bowling so far on the whole, has failed, though there were moments in both matches where it looked as if England was on the run. Three new bowlers have been tried out to supplement the work of the veteran, Clarence Grimmett, Dr. Northling, D. J. Blackie, and H. Ironmonger. They look to be about the best Australia has just now.

Some critics think if V. Richardson is made captain and Dr. Bettington, an Oxford "blue" recently returned hime, is selected, a stronger team can be put in the field.

Andy Blair of Maple Leaf Hockey Club Spends First Christmas Away From Home

WINNIPEG, Man., December 26 (Canadian Press). — On his first Christmas Day away from home, Andy Blair, most valuable "find" to join the National Hockey League this season, played for Toronto Leafs against Montreal Maroons last night. Sitting down to their first Christmas dinner without Andy, his mother and 18-year-old sister Doris missed the 21-year-old lad who made good from the face-off in the fastest hockey played.

Ordinarily, Mrs. Blair and pretty little Doris might have been saddened by the absence of the family's only boy, but a Christmas gift from Andy has filled their hearts, rather with excitement, for the rangy centre ice star of Connie Smythe's sextette has sent home a radio set on which the latest moves of the Leafs may be followed.

With Andy away, it might have been a sad Christmas at the Blair home, across the street from the St. John's College Rink where the Manitoba Varsity star first learned his hockey. But little Doris and his mother, at the dial of the shining new radio set, were "rail-birds" at the Leaf-Maroon game last night.

ROGERS HORNSBY LEADS BATTERS

Former Boston Club Player Has An Average of .387 For Year.

(By Birna Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26. — Rogers Hornsby, formerly manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, captain of the New York Giants and manager of the Boston Braves, and now a high private in the ranks of the Chicago Cubs, led the National League in batting for 1928 with an average of .387. To show the way along the highway of hits for the seventh time, Hornsby displaced Paul Waner, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the 1927 leader, by a margin of 17 points.

If Hornsby can mount to the top of the ladder again, he will equal the record of another great right-handed batsman, Hans Wagner, who while shortstop of the Pittsburgh Pirates, led the National league in batting eight times.

Although Paul Waner surrendered his batting crown and had to be satisfied with the runner-up position, the Waner family well well to the front in the averages. Brother Lloyd went to the bat more than any other player and in his 659 chances cracked out the most one-base hits, 180. Paul scored the most runs, 142, and led in two-base hits, with 50.

Fred Lindstrom, Giant third baseman, made three more hits than any other player. His safeties of all degree totalled 23. Pie Traynor, Pittsburgh, topped the sacrifice hitters with 42, and Kiki Cuyler, Cubs, led in base-stealing with 37.

Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first sacker, who won the most valuable player award, led in two departments and tied in another. He made the most triples, 20, accumulated the highest total of bases on hits, 362, and was in a deadlock with Hack Wilson of the Cubs on home runs with 31.

Forty-seven players batted for averages of .300 or better; two less than in 1927. George Sisler, of the Braves, was among the .300 hitters with an average of .340 for 118 games, this figure entitling him to fourth place among the players who participated in 100 or more games. In 20 games for Washington, Sisler was able to hit only .245.

The leaders of the eight clubs based on play in 100 or more games:

Hornsby, Boston, .378; P. Waner, Pittsburgh, .370; Lindstrom, New York, .358; Herman, Brooklyn, .39; Hafey, St. Louis, .336; Stephenson, Chicago, .324; Allen, Cincinnati, .305; Leach, Philadelphia, .304.

Pittsburgh led in team batting with .309, with New York second at .293. The pennant-winning St. Louis Cardinals batted for an average of .281 with Cincinnati only a point behind although the Reds had no regular among the first thirty batsmen.

The Chicago Cubs were the best defensive outfit on the face of the official returns. Their opponents scored only 615 runs.

PAULINO UZCUDUM GIVEN DECISION

Basque Heavyweight Defeats Jack Renault in Second Bout.

CALI, Colombia, Dec. 26 (Canadian Press). — Paulino Uzcudun, Basque heavyweight, won the decision over Jack Renault of Canada in a ten-round bout here yesterday afternoon before a crowd of 30,000.

Paulino led all the way and gave Renault a severe beating in several rounds. At his best the Canadian was barely able to hold Paulino on even terms.

During the fifth and sixth rounds Renault made his strongest bid, making the Basque retreat with a furious attack in the fifth and drawing blood from his nose in the sixth with one powerful wallop while holding off Paulino's attack.

In the last four rounds Paulino set the pace to win by a wide margin. He battered the Canadian all around the ring, landing almost at will with his right hand in the final frame. Renault devoted his efforts to a successful attempt to avoid a knockout.

Worn down by Paulino's punishing body attack during the early rounds, Renault seldom could land a telling blow toward the end.

Paulino outweighed the Canadian by five pounds. He tipped the scale at 200 pounds to 195 for Renault.

SHEFFIELD LEADS SOCCER LEAGUE

No Change in Position of the First Division English Teams.

LONDON, England, December 26 (Canadian Press Cable).— No change will take place in the position of the leading teams in the First Division of the English Football League as a result of yesterday's soccer games. Sheffield Wednesday are on top, with Derby County second and Blackburn Rovers third. Derby County could only draw with Huddersfield Town, but the Rovers won handsomely from Arsenal. The two are now level in points, but Derby County has the better goal average.

Surprise results were Bury's win over Leicester City by the good margin of three goals to one and Aston Villa's fall down at Portsmouth.

The three first teams in the Second Division also remain unchanged in the standing. Notts County drew with Southampton, but they had a safe lead in the first place. Middlesbro' registered a crushing defeat against Preston North-End to hold on to second place, Chelsea retaining third berth. There is only a fraction goal difference between Middlesbro' and Chelsea.

Plymouth Argyle collect two points for beating Gillingham, and stop at the top of the Third Division, Southern Section.

Most of the teams engaged yesterday play the same opponents on the latter's grounds to-day (Boxing Day).

WESTWARD HO!

All good Canadians realize that Canada is a country to be proud of, but how many however, have tried to visualize the remarkable variety and vastness of this far flung Dominion? It is only through travel that the immensity and outstanding natural beauty of our great heritage is realized. Travelling westward to the Pacific Coast we pass mighty rushing rivers innumerable lakes and dense lumbering regions thence across the wide prairies and through the magnificent Rockies a revlation of peerless scenic grandeur—then Vancouver and Victoria, those gems of the North Pacific, where the warm Pacific winds made year round golf possible.

Travel facilities are of the best. Every day the year round "The Vancouver Express" widely known Canadian Pacific transcontinental train, leaves Toronto at 9.00 p.m., making the through trip to Vancouver in 4 days. Schecule provides for good connections to all western points and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly arrange for reservations and tickets on request.

Nine Judges Proposed

The creation of a panel of nine judges to determine causes and responsibilities for the Paraguayan-Bolivian dispute is proposed in the text of the protocol of conciliation adopted by the Pan American conference's special committee on the controversy and submitted to the two governments for their approval.

Of the nine judges, each of the two disputing countries would appoint two and the arbitration conference here would appoint five.

The panel would hold its first meeting in Washington for organization purposes.

The conciliation commission would be allowed six months to complete its work, with a possible extension of six months more if necessary. It would study the controversy and suggest means of amicable solution. Should this conciliation fail, the commission would be charged with issuing a report stating the facts as found through its investigation and fixing responsibility for the events which led to the rupture of diplomatic relations.

The duties of the commission would be limited exclusively to the events which gave rise to and followed the armed clash at Fort Vanguardia between Bolivia and Paraguay in the Chaco Boreal.

In Close Agreement

The Bolivian and Paraguayan replies to the original inquiries by the arbitration conference's special committee about their wishes as to how the conciliation proceedings should be conducted, were in close agreement.

This greatly facilitated early settlement on the general lines of the protocol as now submitted to the two countries. The actual draft of this was prepared by Dr. Victor Maurtum of Peru, chairman of the special committee, in collaboration with Minister Diez De Medina of Bolivia and Dr. Eligio Paraguayan delegate to the conference. The draft protocol has already been dispatched to the two governments and replies are expected from Asuncion and La Paz in the next few days.

Cowboy Movie Actor Dies At Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press). — Fred G. Thomson, screen actor, featured in western roles, died here shortly before midnight last night.

An ordained pastor in Nevada and chaplain of the 145th Field Artillery, 40th Division, in the World War, Thomson often said that he had entered motion pictures because he felt he could deliver as great message through clean, wholesome films, as from the pulpit. He met Francis Marion, scenario writer, in Paris and married her November 2, 1919. Soon afterwards he started motion picture work. His first western release was filmed in 1923.

C.G.E. SOCIAL CLUB PLEASES CHILDREN

Entertains 900 At Christmas Party in Legion Hall.

Never probably in the history of Peterborough has there been held a Christmas tree entertainment on so large a scale as was staged at the Canadian Legion Hall, Murray street, on Saturday last when the social and athletic club of the Canadian General Electric Company held the first Santa Claus party for the children of the employes in the local plant. This entertainment serves as a pleasing climax to a perfect year's work for the association, which was formed about a year ago, and the large crowd of almost 900 kiddies who taxed the capacity of the big hall to its very utmost is a good illustration of the growth which the club has enjoyed during its first year.

The first part of the afternoon was taken up by a program of several clever vaudeville acts by talented artists from among the employes. E. Hardie, acting as master of ceremonies, announced the different numbers, the first being a song entitled "A Tack" by a quartette composed of Messrs. Lee, Turner, Baldry and Worrall, who sang in a very entertaining manner and replied to the encore with "The Dish Ran Away With the Spoon." They were followed by Ted Markham in comedian costume with red nose and flat derby who made a decided hit with the kiddies by his humorous makeup and comical actions. He sang "On a Cold and Frosty Morning," and for an encore appeared attired in a flaming red wig to sing "Cabbages, Cabeans and Carrots" which went over even bigger than his first song. C. T. McDermott provided a great deal of amusement in the role of magician putting over several clever tricks in professional style.

The presence of L. D. W. Magie and Carl Salmonsen was appreciated by the committee in charge and Mr. Calmonsen was presented with what it is hoped will be a very useful gift, a tiny hobby horse. Mr. Magie has shown considerable interest in the activities of the club and appreciated the spirit of the program very much and at the conclusion forwarded the association a substantial cheque with his best wishes for its continued success.

An added feature to the program was a monologue entitled "A Little Ship," which was recited by J. John, who was introduced to the audience asc "Joe John, the Tea Man," and for a second number he recited "The White and Black Bootblacks," in his usual pleasing manner, the latter number being a tongue-twister that evoked much laughter.

Several messages received during the course of the program kept the audience informed of the progress which Santa Claus was making in his journey to the hall, one of which contained a query with regard to the disappearance of the guns from Confederation Square.

Santa Claus arrived at about 2.30 o'clock and immediately proceeded down the chimney, re-appearing through an opening at the bottom to be greeted by Ted Markham in clown costume, who received as a gift a large Spanish onion. The clown proceeded at once to sing a snappy song and was assisted by Santa, who danced a jig in his own comical style even though he appears to have grown very corpulent since his last appearance.

Santa Claus spoke briefly to the children, promising many presents, which several men proceeded at once to hand out; the kiddies forming a line and passing in front of the stage where they received their gifts, and from there went directly upstairs, getting oranges and candy on the way from a committee composed of about fifteen young ladies who also were responsible for the clothes which were checked. Thus the children were able to leave the hall with very little crowding or hurrying, which system was greatly facilitated by a large safety committee.

The several members of the association who gave their time and assistance toward making this event the success it was are being congratulated on the efficient manner in which all of the arrangements were carried out, and the officers in charge wish to thank the firemen who were present and any others who assisted in any way.

CARS CROWD ROAD UP TO BETHLEHEM

Little Town of Nativity Is the Scene of Impressive Services.

BETHLEHEM, Palestine, Dec. 26.—(Associated Press).—This little town of the Nativity was the scene of impressive services on Monday night as thousands of tourists and natives visited it to partake in solemn Christmas celebrations.

Hundreds of automobiles, their headlights making one great shaft of light, blocked the road over a great distance.

At the Church of the Nativity the heads of the Bethlehem Municipality and other prominent persons headed by choir boys intoned hymns for two hours and then followed the procession to the Grotto while along the steps and walls black-robed nuns knelt in silent prayer. After ceremonies at the Grotto by the Patriarch the procession left the Grotto by the opposite side.

The neighboring Franciscan Church was packed with crowds from the late afternoon. At midnight the Latin Patriarch, clad in a purple robe, entered the Franciscan Church and celebrated Holy Mass in the presence of the Governor of Jerusalem, and the consuls of the Catholic powers, remaining in prayer until yesterday morning when a new Pontifical Mass was begun.

The night was beautiful and clear with a bright moon and shining stars adding to the impressiveness of the ceremonies.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

CLEVER FOX PLAYERS WORK TOGETHER ON NAVY PICTURE "SHARP SHOOTERS"

George O'Brien and Lois Moran, now playing at the Regent Theatre, in Fox Films "Sharp Shooters," a scintillating comedy-drama of French East Africa and New York City, with a navy background.

Exteriors for the foreign sequences were filmed off the Pacific Coast, in Los Angeles harbor and at Royal Palms. The Moroccan scenes, taken at Royal Palms, are some of the most beautiful shots ever taken.

O'Brien is excellent in the role of the hard-boiled gob who has made it a point to have a new girl in every port. He has already proven his ability and versatility and in this production gives one of his best performances in lighter drama as the fighting gob.

Lois Moran changes her personality in this production as a nautch girl in a smoky dive in Morocco. She is exquisite in the Oriental costumes of the dancer and appealng and sympathetic in her love for the handsome American.

The supporting cast is well suited to their respective roles and includes Gwen Lee, William Demarest, Noah Young, Tom Dugan and Joseph Swickard. J. G. Blystone directed.

In "Sharp Shooters" the script called for a French girl who was a dancer in a cafe in Morocco. Lois became elated. At last she could really dance again before the grinding of the cameras. Louis was to be a nautch girl and, although she had never danced this native dance of India, she started to lear nits graceful rhythms with fervor.

The result was that with the flaring skirt and the bangles and the swaying to the music, Miss Moran blossomed from a very sweet young girl to one of the most bewitching nautch girls in the land of make-believe.

AT THE CAPITOL.

EDDIE JACKSON, RADIO TENOR, OPENS AN ENGAGEMENT OF SEVERAL WEEKS AT THE CAPITOL TO-MORROW. BEBE DANIELS IN HER LATEST COMEDY, "TAKE ME HOME," ON THE SCREEN.

Eddie Jackson, of Toronto, radio tenor, and known all over the province as the "man with one thousand songs," will open an engagement of several weeks at the Capitol tomorrow. Eddie has personality plus, and is sure to become a great favorite with Capitol patrons.

"Take Me Home," the latest Bebe Daniels picture which opens at the Capitol to-morrow, will be a delightful surprise. A surprise in the sense that Bebe Daniels has cast off the slapstick type of role for a better dramatic one, and her characterization in her new role as a stage actress was exceptionally well done.

Those of her fans, however, who like Bebe giving one of her characteristic performances in a light comedy vein will not be disappointed with her latest offering. There is comedy in the picture, and it is handled by Miss Daniels in her own excellent way. There are many light moments when the audience last night was lifted with laughter proving that comedy has not been clipped out of the Bebe Daniels picture altogether.

"Take Me Home" is a comedy drama of back stage life. It is a story of a chorus girls and a love affair which brought her success.

There is a smashing climax to the story. The spectacular fight between the chorus girl portrayed by Miss Daniels and the leading lady of the show done by Lilyan Tashman is one of the classics of the screen.

There is a strong supporting cast. Neil Hamilton, as in "Hot News" is Bebe's leading man. Lilyan Tashman, Doris Hill and Joe E. Brown completes the cast of featured players.

GAS PLANT BY-LAW

The information given from time to time in these columns respecting the Gas Plant, and the By-law to authorize its purchase, has been given in The Examiner for the information of the electors, and is not inserted by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. This is stated to correct an erroneous impression that some appear to have received.

The gas mains on the city streets are in good condition. The majority of them have been laid within the last fifteen years, and those laid prior to that have all been gone over and the joints repaired and placed in A1 condition.

The amount of shrinkage between the quantity of gas manufactured and the quantity sold and paid for is below the average, taking into consideration the number of miles in use. There is always some shrinkage, part of it being accounted for by the gas being sent out from the gas plant at one temperature and being delivered to the customer at another temperature. Yet the shrinkage is about 10 per cent, which as stated, is below the average.

The distributing system is very efficient with an economical lay-out. The city is divided into districts and these districts, all but the very centre of the city, are supplied by what is called the high pressure mains. These districts are fed directly from the plant to the street governors located at or near the centre of each district. This enables the operator at the plant, by means of a pressure booster. to supply each district governor with the necessary gas at a pressure which will at all times be adequate for the needs of the district.

These districts are all coupled together so that valves may be opened and one district operated with another if necessary or the whole distributing system can be run as a unit if required.

249 CASES IN TORONTO

Fifteen Deaths Have So Far Been Reported From Influenza.

FEW NEW CASES.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—While three new deaths were reported over the week-end, bringing the total to fifteen, hospital authorities, officials of the Department of Public Health and physicians throughout the city are optimistic regarding the abatement of the present influenza epidemic.

Twenty-five new cases were admitted to hospitals over the week-end and two on Monday, which following a census of hospitals brings the total of hospital cases to 249.

Those dead:

Mrs. Bridget Maloney, 55, died Saturday.

Mrs. Hilda Fraser, Mimico, admitted to a local hospital Friday, died Saturday night.

Waldemar Car Klozt, 49, superintendent of the Canadian Ammonia Company, died Saturday morning.

Hospital and physicians' staffs were getting back to normal with the return of numerous members who had been ill with the disease.

Eighty-one members of the police department are off duty with influenza or heavy colds.

81 DEATHS IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press—Official figures on Monday tended to show that the influenza epidemic is on the decrease. Cases reported Saturday and yesterday totalled 70 with nine deaths. Figures for the previous week end, were 185 cases, and 24 deaths. Total figures since December 15, show 619 cases with 81 deaths. The heaviest toll of the week was taken Tuesday with 177 reported cases and 13 deaths.

GUIDE RETURNS WITH MESSAGE

Louis Coutu Refuses To Divulge Information About S. S. Kamloops.

FOUND NOTE.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press)—Louis Coutu, the Soo trapper and guide, who during the week found a bottle on the shore of Lake Superior, just west of the mouth of Agawa River, containing a note written, it is claimed, by one of the crew of the ill-fated steamer Kamloops, arrived here Sunday night.

Coutu refused to part with the note or divulge its contents in full. He said he had a duty to perform before he could allow anyone to see the note. However he did say that the founder-ing of the Kamloops took place almost exactly as reported, and almost at the spot where she was seen by the steamer Quedoc, on the 6th of Dec., 1927.

The man who wrote the note, sealed it in a whiskey bottle, and threw it overboard, said that he was the last man alive, and was slowly freezing to death. No intimation is given on the note, Coutu says, as to how long the vessel lasted after she smashed upon the rocks. The note is signed 'Al.' who is now dead.

Coutu says there appears to be a code message following the name, which he cannot decipher, and the date, December 6, is followed by a question mark, as if the man were in doubt as to the day of the month. The man was on the vessel when he wrote the note.

Coutu picked the bottle up on the beach about 150 miles from the spot where the Kamloops foundered.

LEADER'S WIFE HEADS PARTY

Conservative Forces Oppose Democrats Who Wish To Depose General Booth.

DISSENSION IN ARMY.

(By Henry Somerville, Special Cable Copyright)

LONDON, England Dec. 26—Owing to the illness of General Bramwell Booth it falls to his wife to lead the Conservative forces of the Salvation Army against the so-called Democrats who wish to depose the general as unfit, and to cancel his appointment of a successor. Decision rests with the High Council of sixty-four members but as the majority required to depose the general is three-fourths, Mrs. Booth needs only seventeen votes to make her husband's position impregnable and to safeguard his succession according to his will. The general's supporters say that if his retirement only had been desired, on gounds of incapacity, through ill health, this could have been secured without calling the high council from ends of the earth, but those who have called the high council wish also to deprive the general of the power of appointing his successor.

They have a further object in view, which is to limit the autocratic powers ordinarily possesses by the general. They are on strong ground in demanding that the general shall cease to be the sole trustee for all the vast properties held by the Army, since English law allows no power of attorney in case of the trustees' illness. A board of trustes is likely to be appointed, reformers desire to appoint a new general, not for life, but for a term of years. If his re-election should depend on the high council there will be an effective check on his autocracy, it is pointed out.

UNITED STATES TO CO-OPERATE

Members Will Serve Upon Experts Committee To Serve Reparations.

CHOOSE REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—The Washington Government has given its assent to the appointment of U.S. experts to serve upon the expert committee in the settlement of the German reparations with the understanding that the U.S. representatives are to be chosen and appointed by the allied and German Governments.

Mr. Kellogg was with the President for some time and afterward authorized this statement.

"Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, called upon the Secretary of State this morning and informed him in the name of the six governments interested in the reparations problem that they wished to inquire whether the United States Government will agree to U.S. experts taking part in the work of the proposed committee which is to deal with the final settlement of the problem, and whether, if so, the United States Government would be ready to propose the names of such experts.

"The British Ambassador explained to the Secretary of State that if the United States Government agrees to this the experts proposed will be appointed jointly by the Reparations Commission and the German Government, but if the United States should prefer to leave the choice of American experts to the six powers, the latter will then agree on the names of the experts to be invited. In that case the experts will also be appointed jointly by the Reparations Commission and the German Government."

Small Demand Lowers Chicago Wheat Values

CHICAGO, Ills., December 26 (Canadian Press). — With the Liverpool wheat market closed until to-morrow and no big demand for wheat in sight anywhere, wheat values here underwent an early setback to-day. Wheat selling was led by houses with connections northwest Opening unchanged to ¼ cent off, wheat afterward showed moderate declines all around. Corn and oats displayed relative firmness, with corn starting at ¼ cent lower to ⅛ cent advance, and subsequently holding near to initial figures. Provisions kept about steady.

ABITIBI PASSES COMMON DIVIDEND.

MONTREAL. — At a directors' meeting of the Abitibi Power and Paper Co., Limited, the action in passing the dividend on the common shares for the current quarter caused little surprise. In view of the conditions which have prevailed and still prevail in the newsprint industry this action was somewhat discounted. The company enjoys a strong position and under present conditions it is good judgment that this be maintained. A re-assuring note to shareholders is struck in the company's statement to the effect that during the last quarter of the year the combined newsprint output of the company's mills has been running about 20 per cent. over that of the former quarters of the year.

The regular quarterly dividend of 1 1-2 per cent. on the 6 per cent. cumulative preferred shares was declared, payable Jan. 21, 1929 to shareholders of record at January 10th.

G. R. Gray was elected a vice-president off Abitibi.

Lull In Trading Follows Holiday

TORONTO, Ont., December 26. — Canadian Press. — Prices were irregular on the Toronto Mining Exchange to-day. While there was a general lull in tradingg numerous issues had good turnovers and registered fair gains, while none suffered severe losses. Noranda took on a stronger tone, and rose as high as 64.10 only to react toward noon to 63.40 for a net gain over Monday of 16 cents to 3.64.

Abana was a strong issue and gained 116c to 3.64; McIntyre went up 75c to 20.50, Lake Shore 35 to 18.25, Dome Mines 10 to 9.50; Hollinger Consolidated 10 to 8.50; Mining Corporation 15 to 3.75; Sherritt Gordon 10 to 6.35, Sudbury Basin 10 to 7.90, and Wright Hardgreaves 5 to 1.60.

Amulet gained 8 to 3.18; Dunkin 2 to 16; Honey Gold 2 to 1.04; Kirkland Lake 6 to 1.41; and Simcoe 1 to 90; while Gold Hill was down 1 at 5; Granada Rouyn 1 at 18; Malartic 1 at 85; Teck Hughes 10 at 8.40, and Vipond 1 1-2 at 70.

Osisko advanced 6 to 44, Mandy 5 to 1.20, while Pend-Oreille was down 20 to 9.80; Jackson Manion 4 to 21; Big Missouri 1 to 68 and Central Manitoba 1 to 64.

Call Money Rate Jumps To Ten Per Cent.

NEW YORK, N. Y., December 26. —Canadian Press.—High money rates brought about some irregularity in price movement in to-day's stock market, was the main price tendency was upward on a resumption of pool activities in several of the high priced specialties, rubbers, oils, foods, rails and electrics. A dozen or so issues were marked up 5 to 21 points, and a long list of 1 to 5 point gains were interspersed with a sprinkling of 1 to 10 points declines.

Call money renewed at 9 per cent., and advanced to 10 when banks call—$25,000,000 in loans. The stringency in money was due to the heavy year-end demand for funds by large corporations to meet dividend and interest payments and the usual "window dressing" by banks in anticipation of the December 31st bank call, with about one billion dollars to be distributed around the year end; operators for the rise looked forward to an unusually heavy January reinvestment demand.

Trade news continued favorable. The price of copper was advanced from 16 to 16 1-4c a pound.

National Bellas-Hess soared 20 3-4 points to a new high record at 238, and International Harvester jumped 20 points. R. H. Macy and General Electric each ran up more than 7 points to new high records at 187 3-4 and 205 1-2, respectively. Goodyear Tire ran up more than 5 points to a new high at 131, and Allis-Chalmers 4 to a new top at 175.

In the mid-day selling movement Radio broke 11 points, National Tea 10, International Silver 9 1-2, American International 6 1-2, and Union Carbide, Green Cananes Copper, Warner Bros., John Manville and Gotham Silk Hosiery down 3 or more points.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE QUIET.

New York, December 26. — Canadian Press. — Foreign Exchange quiet; demand rates (in cents), Great Britain 484 3-4; Canadian dollars at 1 1-4 of 1 per cent. discount.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL-MOND

Final details having been completed re the International Nickel-Mond merger, Lord Melchett, chairman of the Mond Company, announced over the week-end that the Mond directors tentatively have accepted the offer of International Nickel Company of Canada. Final consummation of the deal will take place when the Mond shareholders have ratified the decision made by their board of directors.

COPPERS

Probably the strongest group of stocks on the New York market are the coppers at the present time. The unprecedented demand for the red metal has reduced available supplies of refined copper to ten days world's consumption. Many keen students of the metal situation predict that 17 cent copper is quite probable early in the new year. Noranda is the acknowledged leader among the Canadian copper stocks and in view of the excellent demand for its product, in conjunction with the functioning of a strong pool, Noranda undoubtedly has the backbone for another major advance during the first three months of 1929.

WAINWELL OILS

Notice has been received by shareholders of Wainwell Oils, Limited, that the stock of this company, which was approved some time ago for trading on the Standard Mining Exchange, will be called in the near future. The No. 1 well, according to latest despatches, is reported to be producing approximately 500 barrels per day.

FROOD ORE BODY

The Frood extension, that part of the Frood ore body which belong to Mond Nickel, has shown on the 3,100 foot level a width of 300 feet of massive sulphides highly mineralized with chalcopyrite or copper pyrites, according to a wire received from a north country mining service. The despatch states that there has been no sign of the hanging wall or rock inclusions as yet.

BUCKINGHAM

A vein three feet in width carrying heavy free gold was cut in Buckingham's west drift on Saturday. This is regarded as a decidedly important development by the management.

INQUEST OPENS INTO DEATH OF SISTER CECILE

Dies As Result of Burns Received in Sacred Heart Hospital Fire.

THREE OTHERS INJURED.

Officials Believe Fire Started From Matches Being Left in Clothing.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—An inquest was opened this morning into the death of Rev. Sister Cecile, who died as a result of burns she received when she attempted to fight the fire in the Sacred Heart Hospital, Hull, on Christmas morning. The central portion of the hospital was badly damaged by the fire, but the 37 patients, a number of them from the maternity ward, were carried to safety.

Attempted to Fight Blaze.

Sister Cecile, formerly Miss M. Crevier, of Cartierville, Quebec, aged 22 years, seized a fire extinguisher and sought to fight the flames when she noticed the smoke coming out of the laundry chute. However, when she opened the door to the chute flames belched forth and her clothing caught on fire. She was so badly burned that she died in Water Street Hospital, Ottawa, yesterday afternoon. Three others injured in the fire, Capt. Z. Lablanc, Deputy Chief Emile Bond and Miss Jeanette David, are making satisfactory progress today.

Fire officials in Hull think that the fire was started by matches being left in the pockets of clothing going down the chute and the friction caused them to ignite. The damage to property is valued at $75,000. A considerable portion of the hospital was fire-proof and it was not damaged.

THIEVES TAKE NOTED STATUE

Bronze of St. Francis, Attributed to Donatello, Is Lost.

IN FLORENCE.

FLORENCE, Italy, December 26. — Canadian Press. — A bronze statue of St. Francis attributed to Donatello, was stolen during the night from the villa of Walter Spellman, an American. The thieves scaled a wall surrounding the property and made away with the statue and other works of art.

Donatello was born at Florence about 1396 and died there in 1466. He became one of the leading spirits in the art movement of the fifteenth century. His monuments are regarded ed as a supreme expression of the spirit of the early renaissance in sculpture, and they exercised a potent influence on the painters of that age. His mastery was acknowledged by Michelangelo, Raphael and other giants of the late renaissance.

FRIEND OF KING DIES IN ESSEX

Keen Rival of His Majesty at Horticultural Show Passes Away.

81 YEARS OLD.

LONDON, December 26. Canadian Press. — Lord Lambourne, one of King George's old friends, died at Bishop's All Ear Romford, Essex, today, aged 81 years.

He was an enthusiastic horticulturist, and was a keen rival of the King at Horticultural Shows, the two exchanging banter many times on the respective merits of their estates in Essex and Norfolk.

One of Lord Lambourne's most recent acts indicated his great regard for King George. Lambourne strongly opposed the building of King George's Hospital, at Beonte, Essex, but withdrew his opposition in deference to the King's wishes. In a letter announcing his action, Lord Lambourne wrote: "My motto has always been: 'The King can do no wrong,' and I desire to carry this out."

PILOT IS SLIGHTLY INJURED

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec. 26. —(Canadian Press).—An airplane from Hamilton, driven by William Vangorder, of Jordan Station, crashed near Jordan this afternoon. Vangorder's nose was broken and his head badly cut. His mechanic was rendered unconscious. Both were taken to George Smith's House near by.

TWO ARE DEAD; THIRD MAY DIE

Gruesome Murder and Suicide Takes Place Near St. Paul, Alberta.

POLICE INVESTIGATE.

EDMONTON, Alberta.— (Canadian Press Bulletin.)— Two persons are dead, and a third is now in hospital at St. Paul, Alberta, and may die, in one of the most gruesome murder and suicide tragedies reported to the Alberta Provincial Police for some time.

Mrs. Hyrshka (or Kruska), 28, living some six miles from Lafond, Alberta, was brutally murdered at her home and then decapitated by the murderer, Harry Ewaschuk, 55, between 2 and 3 a.m this morning. John Triska, 22, visited at his home by the slayer after Mrs. Hyrshka's murder, was shot in the leg, and may die from loss of blood.

Returning home, Ewaschuk told his wife what he had done and then committed suicide.

Alberta Provincial Police Constable Wilson, of St. Paul, and Coroner Dr. Gagnon, also, of St. Paul, are conducting an investigation.

No cause other than family quarrels can yet be assigned to Ewaschuk's action in killing the woman, and then shooting young Triska.

Early this morning Ewaschuk rose and left the house, taking with him a 24-40 rifle. He went over to the Hyrshka home and in the absence of the husband, John Hyrshka, who was working at Brosseau, a neighboring settlement, he entered the house.

Mrs. Hyrshka's daughter, aged 13, was an eye-witness of events which ended in Ewaschuk sending bullets crashing through the woman's head as she lay in bed. Three other small children, it is said, were also in the house.

Then, taking a knife, Ewaschuk cut the woman's throat and finally severed the head from the body.

Bearing his ghostly trophy with him, Ewaschuk left the house. Police are still searching for the severed head.

Ewaschuk then went to the Triska home, where he shot young Triska through the leg. It was this shooting which first roused the settlement and brought police and coroner over from St. Paul.

The slayer then went back to his own home, where, after telling his wife what he had done, he turned the rifle on himself, shooting himself through the head, and dying immediately.

THREE FOR MAYOR

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—Three men were nominated this morning for mayor of this city for 1929. They were His Worship Mayor D. A. Christie, seeking re-election after one year and some months in office, Ald. W. S. Glendenning, and ex-Alderman Freeman MacRobert. Mayor Christie has already announced his intention of seeking a second full term, but whether either or both the other nominees will seek the honors is not yet known.

36 For City Council

Thirty six were nominated for twelve seats on Owen Sound council for 1929 and seventeen for five places on the Board of Education. All the members of both bodies whose terms expire this year were nominated for re-election. John Parker received the only acclamation of the day, being elected to the Public Utilities Commission without opposition.

CHRISTMAS AT HOME

O, give me the sky scenes near my home
When the sun sinks down to rest,
With the purple and gold and rose tints rare
And the hues of the rainbow at best;
Where the grass is green and the blue violets gay
And the wild flowers bloom near the rill,
Where in summer bobolinks and chickadees sing
And the river flows on past the mill.

'Neath the light of the stars where the old home stands
Is the dream place of them all,
Where a dear mother nods in the old arm chair
And dad's picture hangs on the wall.
There's no home just like the old home,
Nor a Christmas vision so fair,
Where the night winds whisper their songs through the trees
For the joy and the peace which are there.

And when Christmas comes to the old home
It's the holly and mistletoe time—
There are wreaths in the parlor windows
And forget-me-nots intertwine.
In my dreams I'm back in the old home,
Back again with Mother and Dad—
So at Christmas I'm going to be left alone,
Again I'll be mother's "wee lad."

HOWSON—EASTWOOD.

An evening wedding which was solemnized quietly and simply, owing to the illness of the bridegroom's mother, took place at half past eight o'clock last night at Murray Street Baptist church, when Jean Millicent, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs Vincent Eastwood, became the bride of Arthur George Howson, M.D., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Howson, of 137 London street. The marriage service was read by the pastor, the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties. The Baptistry was decorated with calla lilies, while rose and pink cyclamen and springii fern formed a background for the ceremony Mr. L. Collinson played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an evening ensemble of white chiffon, with coat of ivory spanish lace, cap of silver mesh and silver slippers and hose. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Claire Mason, ore seagreen chiffons, with bandeau of brilliant and silver slippers and hose. She carried a sheaf of Ophelia roses.

Mr. Ernest H. Howson acted as best man for his brother.

After the church ceremony, a Christmas dinner was served to the families of the bride and bridegroom, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eastwood, Belmont avenue. The table, centred by the bride's cake, was arranged with large Dresden baskets of pink roses and lilies of the valley and blue candles in silver candlesticks.

Dr. and Mrs. Howson left on the midnight train for Quebec, the bride travelling in a gown of acquamarine blue Rodier crepe, with hat to match and fur coat. On their return, they will live at 513 Hunter street west.

OBITUARY

MRS. HERMAN C. TIPPET

A brief illness terminated fatally on Tuesday morning, December 25, when Mary Kennedy, beloved wife of eHrman C. Tippet, 147 London street, passed away in this city. Born in Smith township, she came to Peterborough from Lakefield ten years ago. Deceased was 22 years of age, a member of George Street United Church and of the Sunday school orchestra.

Left to mourn are her sorrowing husband, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kennedy; two sisters, Mrs. H. H. Tamblin and Miss Bernice Kennedy, both of Peterborough, and one brother, Alexander E. Kennedy, also of this city.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Thursday, December 27, from the family residence, 147 London street, to St. John's cemetery, Ida, the Rev. J. E. Todd of George Street United Church conducting the services.

MRS. MARY BARCROFT.

(Contributed).

After a long illness, the death occurred in Harvey Township, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Guthrie, on Sunday, December 16, of Mrs. Mary Barcroft, in her 74th year. She was one of the oldest settlers in the township, being highly respected and loved by all who knew her. The late Mrs. Barcroft was a Christian woman, always ready to lend a helping hand. Her husband predeceased her sixteen years ago. For twenty-two years the deceased kept the Rockcroft Post Office.

She leaves to mourn her loss two sons and seven daughters: Mrs. John Guthrie of Harvey Township, Mrs. James MacDonald of Peterborough, Mrs. Fred Baylis of Toronto, Mrs. John Eastwood of Toronto, Mrs. Jas. Wilson of Toronto, Mrs. Ernest Sutton of Detroit, Mrs. Arthur Ritchason of Montreal, Stanley of Harvey Township and Ernest of Toronto. She is also survived by two sisters and one brother of Toronto.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Guthrie. The services were conducted by the Rev. C. Bray, and burial was made in Verium Cemetery.

MATTHEW BOYCE.

One of the city's oldest residents passed away on Monday, December 24, in the person of Matthew Boyce, of 540 Mark Street. The old man, a harness maker by trade, and known throughout the district in which he has spent most of his life, had not been in good health for some time, and died just nine days after his 94th birthday.

One daughter, Mrs. Harietta Jobe, at home, and a second daughter, Mrs. Jennie Leaney, mourn his loss. The funeral took place this afternoon, December 26, at 2.30, from his late residence to Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

The late Mr. Boyce was gifted with an accurate memory, and when, one afternoon last September, an Examiner reporter called on him, he was able to relate many incidents of his life and in the history of Peterborough. "I was born near Selwyn, in Smith Township, shortly after my parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Boyce had come to Canada from the United States," said the late Mr. Boyce on that occasion. "Seventy years ago I came to Peterborough and went in to serve my time as an apprentice with William McBurney. Peterborough was not much of a place when I came here first. Only one or two brick houses were standing, and I served my time in a building on the site where now stands the Grand Hotel. There was a blacksmith shop where the English Canoe Company later located on Charlotte Street. And I can remember when they put in the 'missing link' railway between Lindsay and Peterborough."

The late Mr. Boyce was a member of St. Andrew's Church, and attributed his longevity to moderation in eating and all his habits.

MRS. GERALD McFADDEN.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Gerald McFadden took place from her residence at 391 Smith street, on Monday, to St. Peter's Cathedral, where the Requiem High Mass was sung at nine o'clock by the Rev. Father Lynch, assisted by the Rev. K. Corkery, Deacon, and the Rev. C. Carroll, sub-Deacon, with the Rev. J. Finn as Master of Ceremonies. In the sanctuary were the Rev. Dean F. O'Sullivan, of the Church of the Immaculate Copception, the Rev. J. McAuley, of Ennismore, the Rev. P. Galvin, of Downeyville, the Rev. J. Garvey, of Lakefield, the Rev. Jas. McGuire, of Hastings, the Rev. P. Costello, of St. Peter's Cathedral, and the Rev. J. J. O'Brien and the Rev. C. Maloney of the Church of the Sacred Heart Owing to the press of Christmas ceremonies, the Rev. V. McFadden, of Trout Creek, brother-in-law of the deceased, was unable to be present. At the graveside in St. Peter's Cemetery, the Rev. Father Finn, assisted by several other priests said the prayers.

The funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. P. Costello, who spoke eloquently in tribute to the virtues of the late Mrs. McFadden and the manner in which she discharged the manifold duties of a wife and mother. She was content and faithful in her efforts to bring up her family in the proper Christian manner and her life was a model of Catholic womanhood.

Pall-bearers were Messrs D. Donoghue, W. Thomas, C. McDonald, V. McCabe, G. Rutherford and Dr. E. M. Crough.

The choir of children from St. Peter's School sang during the progress of the Funeral Mass.

The funeral was conducted by Orville Falls, assisted by J. Kane and J. Mackey, Funeral Directors, of Lindsay, and Comstock Brothers, of Peterborough.

A large number of spiritual and floral offerings were received and a great many messages and telegrams of condolence arrived from friends and from brother funeral directors of the husband of the deceased.

Suriving are her sorrowing husband, five children; Joseph, Mary, Margaret, Lareen and Teresa, her mother, Mrs. William Kennedy, of Pinckney, Michigan, three sisters, Mrs. Brock Cole, of Detroit, Mrs. William A. Haslam of Windsor, and Mrs. E. Mansfield, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., and four brothers, Charles Kennedy, of Detroit, William, Claude and Raymond Kennedy, of Pinckney, Michigan. Another brother, Joseph, died some years ago.

DEATH TOLL REACHES 235

Influenza Epidemic Is Believed On Wane in Southern California.

7,540 CASES.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., December 26.—(Canadian Press.)—Influenze attacks, which reached epidemic proportions here two weeks ago, were reported on the wane on Saturday in Southern California after having taken 225 lives here this month.

Health Department figures fixed the number of cases reported yesterday as 103, the lowest since the peak of 800 cases in one day last week. The total number of cases this month was reported as 7,540.

Dr. W. M. Dickie, State Health Officer, arrived yesterday from San Francisco for a conference on the situation.

CHILDREN ARE ENTERTAINED

Oddfellows Hold Jolly Christmast Party For 300 of Peterborough's Youngest.

DECORATED TREE.

What a treat—movies, music, candy, oranges and, best of all, Santa Claus himself with his jolly manner—such was the treat provided for nearly three hundred children by the Oddfellows on Saturday afternoon.

Children arrived in large numbers and by two-thirty the record crowd of three hundred of young Peterborough citizens were there. Everything that could be wished for, including a gaily-decorated Christmas tree with a present for everybody made up a scene to please everyone.

In the lodge room there was a picture show operated by Wilbert Ward and Jack Wolstenholme. There were several comedies, travel pictures and other educational pictures which were enjoyed immensely.

But best of all in the auditorium there was served a sumptuous supper at long tables all dressed up in real Christmas style. Everything to eat, too, just like Christmas itself.

After supper Santa Claus arrived in all his splendor to the accompaniment of screams and shrieks of delight from the little tots. He then distributed his presents to all the good children and there must have been some who were super-good, because there were three hundred and twenty-five stockings given to slightly less than that number of children.

Those responsible for the entertainment were: Chairman, G. Worboy, C. C. Mowry, Harry Lemming, C. H. Hotson, Ernie Stanley, George Benton and Joe Lancaster.

Tea was served by Mesdames B. Watts, C. Mowry, E. E. Mowry, Londerville, H. Strickland, Robert Murduss, Martin, Kimberly, and Miss May Carol.

CHILDREN GIVEN NIAGARA CARAMELS

Hundreds of Young Folk Visit Santa Claus at Dean's Candy Store.

Santa Claus came to Dean's Candy shop, 301 George street on Saturday afternoon last at 1.30 in the afternoon and before he had left three-quarters of an hour later, he had given away to hundreds of children, Niagara carmels in wholesale quantities.

The bewhiskered gentleman from the north was kept so busy and the store was crowded with children to such an extent that it was found necessary for him to go to the front of the store and give the candies to the boys and girls outside.

CHRISTMAS MAIL IS ALL DELIVERED

The Christmas mail has been delivered, the letter racks, rural boxes and package tables have been completely cleared of the mail that has overflowed them for the past week. Upon being interviewed by The Examiner this afternoon, the postmaster, Charles Lacheur, stated that there had been an increase of twenty per cent. over last year's mail, the biggest that has ever passed through this office. Over 220,000 letters were sent out of the office, while 400,000 were received; the parcels averaged about 10,000 a day, bringing the total to 60,000 handled by the mail clerks during the Christmas rush.

Mr. Lacheur expressed his appreciation in the way the public cooperated with the post office by having the packages properly bound and clearly addressed. Great advantage was also taken of the insurance on parcels this year. Mr. Lacheur said that not one Christmas parcel or letter was left undelivered on Christmas Day except letters which had been received at this office improperly addressed.

During the rush, the letter carriers commenced work at 4 o'clock in the morning and worked till 11 o'clock, the mail clerks also working day and night in order to get the mail delivered early. The city box collectors worked overtime, making extra trips during the day, which they had to do in order to handle the mail; also we might mention the Customs mail officers, who worked almost continuously during the Christmas period examining the foreign mail.

Bill:—"I see you are using MAPLE LEAF ANTI-FREEZE. Didn't you have trouble during the last warm spell?"

Jack:—"You don't have trouble with MAPLE LEAF at the beginning of the season, provided you don't put in more than is recommended. I put a gallon in my Buick Master Six about the middle of October. This was safe for zero weather—and now it is still good for five degrees above zero."

Bill:—"Don't you find that it costs more for MAPLE LEAF than for these so-called everlasting anti-freezes which you are supposed to buy only once and carry over from year to year?"

Jack:—"Decidedly not! I will probably need not more than one gallon of MAPLE LEAF ANTI-FREEZE to finish the winter. I never worry about a fluctuation of five or ten degrees. With MAPLE LEAF in my radiator, I am safe from damage because of freezing. And after all danger of frost is over, my radiator mixture will probably be strong enough for ten degrees above zero. I could drain the radiator and save the mixture until next winter, but why bother with such a trifle?

"Another thing: if my car gets really cold from parking outside in sub-zero weather or standing in a cold garage, I always warm up the engine before starting out. This should always be done, regardless of the anti-freeze you use, because it is unfair to misuse your car by trying to run it cold in sub-zero weather.

"Why don't you try MAPLE LEAF ANTI-FREEZE and use the ALCO-METER SERVICE? The Alco-Meter man is very obliging. He will tell you the exact condition of your radiator mixture an I just what you need to strengthen it.

"By the way, Bill, where is that can of anti-freeze that you saved from last winter and kept kicking around the garage all summer. Did you use it?"

Bill:—"No. On account of its being expensive, I made a pretense of carrying it over; but it was a nuisance to have around and I dumped it out."

IF YOU CANNOT EAT

and enjoy your meals, you can be sure that the activities of your stomach are below normal. The truth is that

YOUR STOMACH NEEDS STRENGTH

and its only means of securing that strength is through the nerves that feed it. A weak stomach has weak nerves. Weak nerves are often the result of spinal derangements which may have resulted from a fall, strain or from sitting in an unnatural position. This derangement can be corrected by and normal nerve force will be restored to the tissues of the stomach. When this is accomplished, your stomach will be capable of digesting food and you will be able to enjoy your meals as a normal person should.

CHIROPRACTIC SPINAL ADJUSTMENTS

SEVEN CARS DERAILED IN TRAIN WRECK

Accident Is Believed To Have Been Work of Train Wreckers.

ON SANTA FE RAILROAD.

Three Sleepers Are Thrown Over Fifteen Foot Embankment.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—Sheriff Shea of San Bernardino County this morning was informed by Santa Fe officials that derailment of the "Navajo," Los Angeles-Chicago flyer, at Hesperia, Cal., with serious injury to at least two persons, was the work of train wreckers.

Railroad officials told the sheriff that all the spikes had been removed from one rail and that the angle-iron which connected that rail with the next had been unbolted and removed. Two crowbars and a wrench, with which the track tampering was declared to have been done, were stolen from the Santa Fe tool house at Hesperia, the officials said.

The "Navajo" hit the weakened track about 1 a.m., while travelling at high speed down into the Mojave desert from Cajon Pass. The locomotive and seven cars left the rails. Three sleepers went over a fifteen foot embankment, two of them rolling over on their sides. A fourth sleeper fell on its side athwart the track.

Mrs. P. J. Mackie of Los Angeles, wife o fthe Assistant General Manager of the Santa Fe, and W. H. Surbage of Winslow, Ariz., Santa Fe Attorney, were the first two passengers reported hurt. Mrs. Mackie suffered an injury to her neck, and Burbage received a hip injury.

Relief Trains Sent.

Three relief trains, one from San Bernardino, one from Baraton, and another from Los Angeles, were despatched to the scene. Before the trains were made up, physicians and nurses were sent from here and Victorville by motor.

Hesperia is 35 miles north of San Bernardino.

F. E. Farley, a deputy sheriff at Victorville, one of the first to reach the wreck, said that 6 or 8 persons had required medical attention when doctors and nurses arrived. Many other passengers were bruised and shaken, Farley said.

The deputy reported that he had found, in the ditch alongside the railway embankment the spikes which had been removed from the rail. Santa Fe officials declared they had no clue as to the identity of the person or persons who had tampered with the track.

Only the high speed of the train, which was going about sixty miles an hour, prevented the locomotive from plunging over the embankment and taking the entire train with it, Farley said the train crew had told him. The locomotive sped across the weakened spot before the loosened rail fell aside and was pulled from the track only when the cars behind struck the ties.

As physicians and officials went about among the wreckage they expressed amazement at the few serious injuries. Of the two persons found most seriously hurt, only Burbage required special attention, doctors said. Mrs. Mackie's injuries were said to be not serious.

F. J. Mackie, assistant general manager of the Santa Fe, who was on the train with his wife, praised the presence of mind and ability of Engineer A. C. Long. He described the locomotive driver as the hero of the wreck, and credited him with preventing great loss of life.

"Long brought the train to a dead stop in 15 car lengths," said Mackie. "It was one of the greatest feats of locomotive engineering I have ever seen, and prevented a catastrophe."

Burbage was thrown from his berth into the berth of another man. He told the officials that he and the other man had engaged in an argument over whose fault it was before either realized the train had been wrecked.

Hydro Man Explains Plant

Only About One Hundred Citizens Attend Meeting in Collegiate Auditorium.

QUESTIONS ASKED.

Several of Municipal Candidates Deliver Short Addresses Explaining Their Platforms.

Despite consistently re-appearing notices in the press, the attendance, only about one hundred ratepayers, was disappointingly small at the public meeting, held in the Collegiate Auditorium last evening, for the purpose of discussing and making available information relative to the proposed purchase by the city of the local gas plant, now owned by the Hydro Electric Power Commission. Not only had the Mayor and the City Council, who are backing the purchase of the plant, made this meeting possible, so that the ratepayers might gain whatever information they desired, but they had secured an expert in F. W. Drewry, Hydro Municipal Engineer. Despite the poor attendance there was much that was beneficial about the meeting and those sufficiently interested to attend were repaid in increased knowledge of details of the purchase.

Mayor Denne Presiding.

That this meeting had been called for the benefit of the citizens, but that apparently it had come to a pass where it would be necessary to have a banquet or a bun feed in order to bring them out, was the manner in which His Worship Mayor Roland Denne, referred to the small attendance at last night's meeting. As chairman he was pleased to welcome Mr. Drewry, while his handling of the discussion to which he threw the meeting open almost immediately, made it possible for anyone present to gain desired information.

"When the Hydro bought the power it had to take the gas plant and other rights, and because it is not interested in anything but electric power, this meeting is being called tonight. If the citizens of Peterborough don't want the gas plant, it will pass into the hands of a private organization," said His Worship. He went on to review the negotiations which had gone on between the City Council and the Hydro Electric Power Commission, touching on the fact that the purchase price, originally set at $365,000, had been cut down to $335,000, included in this price being several other properties.

Referring to the second bylaw on which the public will pass judgment on January 1, the Johnson Motors Company bylaw, His Worship spoke of the stability of that firm, which he believed would ultimately fill the entire plant of which it now occupies a major portion. He believed that several other prospective industries were waiting to see how the Johnson Company would fare at the hands of the ratepayers before locating in Peterborough.

Courtesy to Candidates.

His Worship was not alone on the platform for he invited to share it with him not only members of the 1928 Council present, but candidates for the Board of Education and of the aldermanic contest for 1929, some of whom spoke briefly during the evening. Among these was James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who said:

"The Chamber of Commerce is always pleased to assist any effort that will better Peterborough, and so we have watched with interest the negotiations for the purchase of the gas plant. The final figure secured by the Council seems an excellent bargain, and if properly handled should carry itself without any burden on the taxpayers. The equipment is modern in every respect, and the system has a capacity capable of supplying the needs of a much larger Peterborough."

Mr. Dutton was optimistic in his attitude toward gas consumption in the future. He felt that with the local plant owned by the city, the possibility of lower rates would lead to increased consumption by industries as well as for domestic uses. He hoped that the vote would heartily endorse both by-laws so carfully considered by the Council.

Questions Answered.

In accordance with the Mayor's declaration that the meeting was open to discussion, one person inquired regarding the increase or decrease in consumption and the number of subscribers during the past years. Mr. Drewry, in reply, instanced the last ten years, stating that in the year

POLICE CALLED OUT TO PATROL DIAMOND FIELD

Clashes Are Reported Between South African Officers and Prospectors.

DEFY ORDERS.

People Demand That Government Throw Open 34 Acres of State Lands.

CAPETOWN, South Africa, December 27. Canadian Press. — Two hundred policemen to-day were patrolling the diamond fields of Namaqualand, where diamonds were only recently discovered. Threats were made that the people would start prospecting in defiance of government orders against it. Reports were current here of clashes between the police and the people who have been reduced to desperation by a prolonged drought, which ruined their crops. No definite information, however, was obtainable.

Two thousand persons at a recent meeting at Port Nolloth demanded that the government throw open 34 acres of state diggings, or else employ additional diggers. It is understood that the people threatened that if these demands were not granted by Friday the state diggings would be rushed.

The Namaqualand member of the House of Assembly motored from Port Nolloth to confer with the Ministers of Mines and Justice. He said that poverty was rampant in the district. He added that unless the government took immediate and tactful action a serious outbreak, accompanied by considerable bloodshed would be inevitable. Later a body of picked police were rushed to the area by motor bus, bringing the forces there up to 200 men.

The government has insisted upon restricting prospecting in order to protect the diamond industry.

LAPOINTE SICK WITH "FLU."

Pants Burglar Hears Birds Sing Christmas Eve; When Intended Victim Gives K.-O. Hit on Jaw

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec 27.—(Canadian Press).—A man travelling under the names of John Moore and John Lawrence and who claims to be the pants burglar from Hamilton came to grief when he attempted to hold up Captain Ralph Snetsinger, who is former physical instructor of the public school cadets, was holding a party when he observed a shadow on the window.

Investigation showed a man crouching in the dining room. As soon as Snetsinger approached, Lawrence shoved his hand into his pocket and pointed something resembling a gun, but which later proved to be a knife. The physical instructor delivered a powerful blow on the intruder's jaw that put him down and out for fifteen Minutes. When he came to he was in the arms of a policeman. When searched, a quantity of silverware was found in his pockets. He was remanded this morning for a week while his record will be investigated.

MAN IS BURNED IN HOUSE FIRE

Former Principal of Port Perry High School Dies at Niagara Falls.

OTHERS ESCAPED.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Thomas Henry Follick, 67, was burned to death early to-day, when fire gutted the residence of his brother-in-law, where he had been visiting. Other occupants of the house dressed and got out of the building, thinking that Follick was with them.

When his absence was discovered it was too late to re-enter the house. The charred body was found in the debris of the bathroom. He was principal of the Port Perry High School for fifteen years until last June, when he retired. He had previously taught in St. Mary's, Ont., St. Catharines, and in this city.

He and Mrs. Follick came to this city yesterday to visit with the former's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Johnson. The cause of the fire is unknown. An inquest will be held to-day.

PERMIT IS GRANTED FOR NEW BUILDING

J. J. Duffus Will Erect New Storehouse at Rear of Service Stataion.

The issuance from the City Engineer's office of building permits has not been extensive during the past week or so, but there has been one permit granted for the construction of a storehouse by J. J. Duffus Ltd., at 300 Aylmer street. The new building, which will be 50 feet in length and 48 feet wide, will be of galvanized iron on cement piers, with tar and gravel roofing, and will cost approximately $1,600.00. It will be completed by February 1, 1929.

BRANCH LINES ARE PROPOSED

C.N.R. Management Will Have Large Program To Offer Government.

LARGER THAN IN 1927.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—The Canadian National Railways, it was officially announced to-day, will ask Parliament when it re-assembles in February for authority to construct additional branch line mileage, the program presented to be carried to completion within the succeeding three years.

Sir Henry Thornton, chairman and president, and S. J. Hungerford, vice-president in charge of operation and construction, have made a close study of the branch line needs of the National system and their recommendations are now being completed.

While no details are forthcoming at present, it is definitely known that the extension from Aberdeen to Melfort, Saskatchewan, will be requested and it is understood that the new branch line program may be somewhat larger than that presented to Parliament in April, 1927, when 506 miles of new lines were included. Due to the fact that Parliamentary sanction was forthcoming in the early spring of 1927, excellent progress was made in that year and in 1928 on the work authorized.

As a coincidence, working forces and construction equipment will be available early in the summer of 1929 for the new construction admittedly necessary to keep pace with agricultural and other development. It is the opinion of the railway executives that the increase in land under cultivation, the consequent growing production and the protection of the company's traffic, amply justify the provision of additional railway facilities at an early date instead of delaying the consideration of these new lines until the session of 1930.

DOCTORS HAVE CONFIDENCE IN NEW STRENGTH

Bulletin Emphasizes Slowness of Improvement in His Majesty's Condition.

LESS ANXIETY.

Members of Royal Family Leave Palace For Various Places in England.

LONDON, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press) —Although the slowness of King George's progress was still emphasized in his doctors' bulletins it was understood to-day that his general improvement was very marked compared with a week ago. His doctors were believed to have a confidence in the recuperative powers of the king which had not existed previously during the course of his illness.

There were indications that the anxiety of the royal family was lessening. The Daily Mail to-day said that Princess Mary would leave London during the day to join her husband, Viscount Lascelles, at Harewood Castle, near Leeds. The Daily Express said that the Prince of Wales was hunting in the Midlands yesterday.

A too-enthusiastic greeting by 2,000 holiday onlookers when the Prince arrived at the meet almost caused him to be thrown from his horse. The crowd cheered and waved their hats and handkerchiefs and the horse, becoming frightened, reared. The Prince controlled the horse with difficulty and smilingly acknowledged the greetings by raising his hat.

No Public Report

The King's doctors made no public report yet on the ray treatment being given their patient which has not been administered for the last day or two, but it was understood that the discontinuance was only temporary. The doctors' evening bulletin, which was the only one of the day, said:

"His Majesty had a quiet day, the slow progress in general and local condition is maintaind. No bulletin will be issued until tomorrow evening."

Apparently it is intended from now on to issue only one bulletin in 24 hours and this is considered an indication that the doctors believed that the King would maintain his slow progress.

Announcement was made officially that because of the illness of the King the Prime Minister would be unable to make the customary submission for the New Year honors' list and that consequently the list would be postponed.

An important event at Buckingham Palace yesterday was a tea party given by Queen Mary for her granddaughter, the little Princess Elizabeth, and four-year-old Lady Mary

Farmer Is Missing; Cattle Are Found Grazing In Fields

Morley Murray, Rawdon Township Agriculturist, Had His Barn Burned Last Night and Nothing Has Been Seen of the Man Since.

ATTENDED SCHOOL MEETING IN FORENOON LATER DISPOSED OF HIS AUTOMOBILE

On Investigation Neighbors Find Meal All Set in Murray's Home—Clothes Apparently All There and Bed Undisturbed—Search Is Started.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

BONARLAW, Ont., December 27.—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Morley Murray, about 48 years of age, a farmer living on the Ninth Concession of Rawdon, who has been missing since yesterday.

The facts so far ascertained are: Murray's barn burned down during the night, with fourteen pigs, one calf, and almost all the farm implements; he attended the school meeting which was held yesterday morning, and afterward sold his car to a man named Thain; he was missed at the fire, but neighbors noted the missing car and supposed that he had gone visiting; to-day the cattle were noticed in pasture, and because of Murray's habitual solicitude for his splendid stock, suspicion that all was not well was aroused. On investigating, neighbors found a meal set out on the table in Murray's home, his clothes apparently all there, and his bed undisturbed. A thorough search of the house and farm failed to uncover any trace of the missing man.

Added to these facts is the mystery of disappeared papers, money and watch, known to have been owned by the missing man. It is believed that he received a note and some money in payment for the car yesterday, but these cannot be found. The pockets of his garments were empty.

Sought in Vain.

Attracted by the fire, about nine o'clock last night, neighbors rallied to assist in quelling it, but failed to find the owner. Then, noticing the absence of the car, they thought he had gone visiting, and proceeded with their work of salvage and their endeavor to prevent the blaze spreading. In spite of all the heroic efforts made to rescue them, fourteen pigs and one calf perished in the blazing barn, but some of the impiments were saved. The barn itself was of frame structure, with a sheet metal roof stone foundation, and cement floor. When Murray lost his barn by fire about eleven years ago, the neighbors gathered to erect this building in its place.

A search of the house and other buildings failing to locate the missing man this morning, after a neighbor had noticed that the stock had not been housed during the night, telephone calls were tried in an endeavour to locate Murray at Stirling or Campbellford, without success. Then, finding that his bed had not been slept in, that a meal was set out on the table, and that his clothes were apparently all in the house, the provincial police at Belleville were called. Pending their arrival, no extensive search of the still smouldering ruins was attempted.

Murray, who was about 48 years of age lost his wife by death a few years ago, and since then has lived alone on his farm. He had no children, but has one brother, John, a cheese inspector, who lives on the seventh concession of Seymour township; two sisters, Mrs. Melville Fitzgerald, Springville, and Mrs. Blake Ketcheson, of the fourth concession of Rawdon. One brother was killed overseas.

Mr. Murray was considered a friend to every one and his neighbors have only good to speak about him.

SCIENTISTS ARE IN CONVENTION

Rev. R. E. Knowles Tells of Meeting Being Held in New York City.

INTERVIEW FALLS SHORT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (Special to The Examiner, by R. E. Knowles).—Dr. Robert Norwood, Canadian preacher and poet and now a bright and shining New York light, said to me last Sunday, "The Americans are the most spiritual and idealistic people of any epoch in the world's history."

"Sometimes, even a Canadian almost believes this, especially when, if ever, Chicago and Detroit cease temporarily from their 'Vesuvius' symtoms. One of these reassuring hours is just now on in this seething 'Babylon.' For 5,000 men of learning are gathered here in an earnest and truth-seeking conclave. They are scientists, assembled to teach and to learn at the mammoth convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The preliminary meetings were held last night. To-day's papers almost give the great gathering right of way in their columns. Americans, doubtless, are keen after the almighty dollar, but nevertheless no nation under heaven is more keen after the almighty truth.

"Last night's meetings, as all of these meetings, were held at the Museum of National History, a building of its kind surpassed alone by the Smithsonian Institution at Washington.

BRITISH TROOP-CARRING PLANES RUSH FOREIGNERS FROM RABUL

Evacuation Will Continue Until All Women and Children Are Removed.

REFUSES TO LEAVE.

Nothing in Latest News To Indicate That Position is Growing Worse.

LONDON, Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press.)— It was understood to-day that evacuation of foreigners from Kabul, Capital of Afghanistan, would continue until all were removed. Brief despatches from Peshawar, India, sent by way of Delhi and Lahore recorded the arrival of many women and children of several nationalities. They were brought from Kabul by British planes.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from from Peshawar said that Madame Feit, wife of the French Minister, refused to leave her husband and would stay in Kabul.

A dispach to the Daily Mail from Karachi said that two more British troop-carrying planes had arrived at Karachi from Irak and that these would probably go northward to aid in the evacuation.

There was nothing in the latest news to indicate that the position of Kabul was growing worse because of rebel activity and lately it had been assumed that the position was growing better. It was stated that Queen Souriya was at Kandahar, but that

REPRESENTATIVES WILL DISCUSS CONTROL OF BORDER SMUGGLING

Canadian and United States Officials Will Hold Conference in Ottawa.

WILL SUBMIT REPORT.

Refusal of Clearance Papers On Boats Carrying Liquor Will Be Discussed.

OTTAWA, December 27. (By Canadian Press.) — Representatives of the governments of Canada and the United States will be in Ottawa on Monday, January 7th, to discuss steps for the control of commercial smuggling. Announcement to this effect was made from the Department of External Affairs this morning.

The purpose of the conference, it is announced, is to bring about general expression of views on commercial smuggling, and to consider remedies. The names of those persons who will represent the two countries were not announced to-day. In the case of both Canada and the United States, however, all the representatives will be officials of the departments of governments interested. No members of the cabinet of either country will be present at the conference. Each section will submit to its government a report of the discussion which takes place and any proposals put forward.

While the purpose of the conference, as announced, is to consider commercial smuggling, it is practically certain that a large part of the time will be devoted to dealing with the smuggling of liquor from Canada into the United States. The departments

Passing of the Old C.G.E. Gatehouse Marks End of Forty Years' Service and Sentiment

Great changes in additions to plant and machinery are going on in the plant of the Canadian General Electric Company, and while many hundreds of thousands of dollars (in fact, running close to two million dollars as announced) is to be spent in the extension program now under way before the end of 1929, the general public cannot appreciate altogether what is going on. Buildings are grow up here and there on the large acreage owned by the company, and new machinery is being installed which is fast bringing the plant to one of the most up-to-date on the continent.

There is just being completed an outside improvement that all can see and appreciate. The old wooden fence has been torn down and replaced by a new and sightly factory wire fence, and all the old sheds that have stood for years near the street are gone, but there is still another change that many old employees, both present and past, cannot help but notice with a feeling of sentiment to the old order of things. That is the tearing down of the old gate house through which thousands of employees have been passing, some for longer periods, some for shorter, over a space of more than forty years. What a story could be written by the gatemen, if they were but to do it, of the old C.G.E. gate house, of the employees who have passed through. Happy faces, studious faces, some altogether care-free, others with sorrowful faces, probably because of illness at home, others intently discussing a coming picture, sport event, a show, social or personal events, or company business in which they were interested. Many who hear of the passing of this old gate house will no doubt heave a sigh as it brings back many happy memories of by-gone days as they themselves were passing through.

However, such changes must come, and the old C.G.E. gate house is now being torn down and a handsome new building has been erected north of the old one, and is already in use.

When Man Tries To Play Santa Claus By Plane He Flies Too Low; Escapes With Broken Nose

ST. CATHERINES, Ont., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—William Van Gorder, pilot, and Frank Crowe, mechanic, both of Hamilton, were reported progressing favorably in hospital last night, following injuries received when their plane crashed yesterday near Jordan. Van Gorder is believed to have been flying low in an attempt to drop a Christmas parcel over a friend's home when the crash occurred. He suffered a broken nose and a gash on the head. The pilot was unconscious when picked up. He was bruised and may have suffered internal injuries.

Mute Talks After Thirteen Years; Lost Speech As Result Of Shipwreck

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 27.—(Associated Press).—After having sat in a cell for more than two weeks without uttering a word, Jack Farnun, 25, an alien held for deportation, astonished his fellow prisoners and officers by talking last night.

Questioned by authorities who had thought he was deaf and dumb, he said he lost his speech and hearing in 1925 when he was shipwrecked on the coast of Scotland after having been adrift in a storm for sixteen hours.

His voice returned to him last night, but he is still unable to hear, he said.

Farnun, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., entered the United States illegally in October and is to be deported to Canada.

INFLUENZA DID NOT CAUSE DEATHS IN TORONTO LATELY

Says Medical Officer of Health, Who Blames Broncho-Pneumonia.

RESEARCH FRUITLESS.

World As Helpless Against Influenza As Against Cancer, Says Hastings.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press.) — Dr. C. J. Hastings, Medical Officer of Health for Toronto, stated last night that not one of the deaths which have been reported during the last few weeks as due to the influenza were actually caused by that disease. Broncho-pneumonia or a heart condition aggravated by a severe cold or a mild attack of what has been described as influenza were the actual cause of the numerous deaths recently attributed to influenza, said Dr. Hastings.

With this statement Dr. Hastings reiterated his opinion that there was no real epidemic in the city of Toronto and deplored the unnecessary alarm which was being spread about and so causing "a general lowering of vitality which makes people susceptible to any disease which might be going."

"We know no more about the influenza germ that we did twenty-five years ago. Ten years ago we had a world-wide epidemic which carried off more people than the World War. Since that time every nation in the world has been spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on research work on influenza," he said. "We are as helpless in fighting against influenza as we are in fighting against cancer." Dr. Hastings stated that the increased number of deaths reported was nothing unusual as the percentage of pneumonia deaths at this time of the year is very high. The virulent germ of the 1918 epidemic is absent from any of the present cases of so-called influenza he said.

BIG PAPER MILL CHANGES HANDS

Canadian Interests Purchase Port Arthur Properties From American Owners.

225 TONS DAILY.

WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—The Consolidated Water Power and Paper Company, the main offices of which are situated here, have sold their Port Arthur, Canada, properties to combined Canadian interests, the two principal companies of which are the Abitibi Power and Paper Company and the Canadian Power and Paper Company, George W. Mead, President of the Consolidated announced yesterday.

The sale turns over, among other thing, the main mill at Port Arthur, which produces 225 tons of newsprint paper daily. The consideration involved in the transaction was not made public.

With the sale of the properties goes all rights of the Crown grant to cut timber on government land.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—The Consolidated Water Power and Paper Company, of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., which has sold its local properties to a Canadian syndicate, operated the Thunder Bay Paper Company, having acquired the mill and properties of the Kaministiquit Pulp and Paper Company at Current River in 1922. A new mill was opened at Port Arthur on June 4, 1927, and following the placing of new plant equipment, it has a capacity of 250 tons of paper per day.

Extensive timber rights were granted the Consolidated Company in 1926 by the Ontario Government, and it is understood these will be taken over by the purchasers. The Canadian syndicate will take possession of the properties on January 1.

No statement of the value of the properties could be obtained locally, the paper company officers here stating that such a statement would have to come from L. R. Wilson, managing director of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, one of the principal companies in the syndicate, of Montreal.

HYDRO TO BUY?

Purchase of Dominion Power and Transmission Company Is Reported.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—A Toronto paper carried the following in its news columns today: "Purchase by the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission of the Dominion Power and Transmission Company of Hamilton is expected within a comparatively short period. This action is conditional upon the price and terms of the Dominion concern being acceptable in the light of reports now being prepared by Hydro engineers."

While the official word from the Hydro offices is that the report to the above effect is inaccurate in its reference to "immediate purchase," the understanding elsewhere is that the Dominion Power and Transmission, the last of the larger privately owned power companies in Ontario, has at last, owing to Hydro's keen competition, decided to come to terms with the Hydro.

Commander Byrd and Party Of Explorers Carry American Flag Into Great Mysterious Ice Barrier

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd has sent the following wireless message to Secretary of the Navy, Curtis D. Wilbur, through the New York Times, The St. Louis Post Dispatch and Associated Newspapers:

"We have reached to-day the great mysterious ice barrier. It presents to us an ice cliff higher than the mast of the ship. On Christmas Day we are thankful and proud to report that we have been able to carry the American flag several hundred miles farther south than it has ever been, and it seems fitting that an aeroplane that instrument of good will, should reach its farthest south on Christmas Day.

"We are 2,400 statue miles from the nearest human dwelling in the only area in the world where a ship can get so far from civilization. That we are here safely is due to Providence and my loyal and stout-hearted shipmates who have worked together unselfishly as a unit. It will probably be some days before we get ashore on account of ice that will be in Bay of Whales.—"Byrd."

DOGS SHOT BY FARMER

Three Animals Found Worrying Sheep of Warsaw Farmer.

TWO SHEEP LOST.

WARSAW, Dec. 27 (Examiner Correspondence).—There has been a certain amount of sheep killing going on at times in Warsaw district and on Thursday forenoon, three dogs were caught. William Crowe noticed three dogs worrying sheep belonging to Bert Ray and two of the dogs were shot, the other escaping. Mr. Crowe, Mr. Ray and his two sons, together with D. Miller went to where the sheep was and found it badly torn, but not dead. Tracks of blood showed the paths of the wounded dogs, and the party followed the hound and one collie. The hound was badly wounded and the owner had her put out of pain.

The owner of the collie did not know it was shot until told by the men. Returning, the two men met a fourth dog carrying a piece of a sheep that had been killed the day before, but of course it could not be proved that this dog had a part in worrying the sheep. The owner, however, had the dog destroyed. A search was made but only one sheep was found dead and it had apparently been dead about a day.

The other boys succeeded in making their way to the shore but James was drawn under the ice by the current.

James' younger brother nearly met a similar fate at the same time several hundred yards up stream but was saved by three young girls who at the risk of their own lives pulled the little chap to safety after he had broken through the ice.

Heavy Mail Record At Lakefield Office

ICE GIVES AWAY; BOYS DROWNED

Two Brothers Drop Through Ice On Lachine Canal.

BODIES RECOVERED.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press.)— Charles and Robert Gladhill, brothers, 12 and 14 years old, respectively, were drowned yesterday when they crashed through the ice covering the Lachine Canal. Two other boys escaped the fate of their companions. The bodies were recovered

The four boys were taking a short-cut home when the accident occurred. They had safely negotiated about three-quarters of the width of the canal, when the Gladhill brothers, who were in the van of the quartette, disappeared from view when the ice gave away beneath them. The companions, Robert Wood and William Mayou, attempted to reach the victims but were forced to give up their efforts when other sections of the ice started to crack. By this time passers-by had been attracted by the screams of the two boys, but owing to the dangerous footing it was impossible to reach the scene of the tragedy.

Four hours later the bodies were recovered by police with the aid of grappling irons. An inquest will be held today.

Driver Escapes Injury On the Campbellford-Havelock Highway.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, December 27. — An Imperial gas and oil truck driven by Ross Sherwin, Campbellford, met with an accident on Wednesday afternoon, on the Havelock Road, near the property of John Garneau.

The truck was on its way to Havelock, and at this particular spot a bolt dropped out of the steering rod, causing the driver to lose control of the wheel.

The big truck ran off the road and toppled over into a deep ditch filled with ice. The driver escaped without any serious injury through the glass in the cabin, which was broken.

The tank was filled with about 500 gallons of gas, together with the oil, which was a total loss.

The wreck still remains until ways and means are found of hoisting it up on the road again.

The decision to hold the 1929 Plowing Match in North Monaghan in accordance with the principle of moving the match from one township in the county to another, from year to year, was reached at the annual meeting of the Peterborough County Ploughmen's Association, held last week in the Department of Agriculture Office, George street. Together with this the election of new officers and the reception of reports comprised the main business of the meeting.

COUTU REFUSES TO SHOW NOTE

Official of Canada Steamship Lines Believes Document Is Not Authentic.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—The mystery surrounding the character of the note which Louis Soutu, a trapper, said he found in a bottle at the mouth of the Agawa River recently, deepens as Coutu refuses to show it to officials of the Canada Steamship Lines or to newspapermen. The trapper says that the note was written by one of the crew of the lost freighter Kamloops, which disappeared a year ago in a storm, all hands being lost. The exact fate of the Kamloops has been a mystery. Coutu avers that his note gives details of the disaster which overtook the freighter and that he will reveal the contents of the note in his own time.

G. H. Shanks, local agent of the Canada Steamship Lines, yesterday expressed a doubt that the note was authentic.

"I don't think the Canada Steamships Company will take any action in the matter," Mr. Shanks said. "I don't think the note is genuine."

Detectives Capture Wanted Murderer In Rochester After Two-Year Chase

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—A pursuit that had taken Rochester detectives to every large city in the East for two years was ended yesterday by the arrest of Anthony Merlo, 40, wanted for the murder of his brother, Ernest of New York City, January 10, 1926, while he was a visitor at the Merlo home here.

Merlo's return to the city he fled two years ago was avowedly to revenge the slaying of his daughter, Angelina Spitels, who was killed in front of her home on November 14 as the result of a bootleg feud.

Merlo stoically accepted his arrest and the charge of first degree murder he had successfully eluded for the past two years, and fear of which had kept him from his wife and daughter.

"I came back only to take vengeance upon the slayers of my Angelina," he freely told police, admitting the slaying of his brother.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—With contracts outstanding for delivery of a huge amount of corn here before January 1, the corn market ruled decidedly active and much higher yesterday. Latest figures available showed that by the last of December 14,736,000 bushels of corn would either have to be handed over to new owners here, or that existing bargains would call for equivalent cash instead of whatever the prevailing quotations may be at the year-end.

Faced by this dilemma, corn yesterday closed strong at the day's top-most figures, scoring 1⅛ to 2⅛ cent a bushel net advance. Wheat finished unchanged to ¼ cent higher; oats ¼ to ½ cent up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Deliveries of corn in Chicago yesterday to meet December contracts amounted to only the relatively scant total of 160,000 bushels inasmuch as but four more business days are left in which to settle this month's contracts, whereas receipts of corn here meantime promise to be comparatively meagre, the trade flocked to the purchase side of the market. A circumstance which added impetus to buying demand was the fact that a period of much colder weather is generally regarded as a necessity for an increased movement of corn away from farm, mild temperatures meantime being a hindrance making fieldwork and roads different.

Although yesterday's arrivals of corn in Chicago amounted finally to 478 cars, and the Chicago stock of corn was shown to have been augmented 1,546,000 bushels in the last week, these facts appeared to have little if any influence against the upward trend of the market. The receipts were considered disappointing, and country offerings were reported light. Nervousness on the part of traders, who found themselves short of corn, was further intensified by word that some corn export buying 15,000 bushels had taken place here yesterday, and that Kansas reports were at hand telling of serious delays to husking. The total stock of contract corn in Chicago at present is only a trifle more than 2,000,000 bushels.

Wheat prices rallied in the late dealings. Strength was borrowed from the corn market. Earlier, wheat values had shown a tendency to sag, owing in some degree to expectance that enlarged movment of newly-harvested wheat from south of the equator would bring about more general pressure to sell. Oats were firmer, sympathizing with corn.

Provisions reflected higher quotations on hogs.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—The domestic trade in cash grain showed no improvement yesterday, but the tone of the market for Manitoba low grades of wheat was firmer and prices were advanced ½c per bushel, with car lots of No. 6 wheat quoted at 99c; feed wheat at 95c per bushel, ex-store. American No. 4 yellow corn was also strong at an advance of 2c per bushel at $1.05. Other grades were unchanged.

The trade in spring and winter wheat flour contined quiet, but the undertone to the market was steady.

A moderate amoutn of business was done in all lines of millfeed and values were firm. Standard grades of rolled oats were unchanged.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in butter, but prices were well maintained. Receipts were 354 packages.

The trade in cheese was dull and prices were nominally unchanged. Receipts were 604 boxes.

Little business was done in eggs, and prices for all grades were inclined to be easier. Receipts were 2,486 cases.

A firmer feeling prevailed in the potato market and values were higher. Prince Edward Island Whites sold at 78c, Green Mountains at 85c per 90 lbs in bags.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, December 27. — Trading on the post-holiday butter market at Toronto, while not unduly active, was firm in trend. In a jobbing way fresh supplies of finest creamery were being turned over on spot at from 41¼c to 41¾c per pound, which levels are steady, with prs-Christmas quotations.

Dullness again prevailed in the market for cheese and dealers reported inquiry from all sources limited. The quotable range for No. 1 large colored, paraffined and Government graded is from 21¼c to 21¾c per pound delivered, which is steady with a week ago.

Unsettled and easier conditions in all grades of fresh and storage eggs was a feature of this market at midweek. Dealers reduced their buying prices one cent per dozen for fresh extra grades at the bottom of the spread, with a maximum bid at 53c. Quotations to the retail trade were cut to 58c to 60c per dozen for fresh extras, loose, with firsts selling downward to a range of from 48c to 50c. Storage firsts are slightly easier at from 36c to 37c per dozen. Mild weather conditions and only fair demand are advanced as contributory causes for the drop in prices.

Young's Point

YOUNG'S POINT, Dec. 26 (Examiner Correspondence).—Miss Kathleen Young, who has been teaching school near Windsor, returned to her home in the village on Friday.

Mr. W. G. Morrison of Lakefield was in the village on Friday on business.

The local school concert was held in the school on Friday afternoon. A short program was given of songs and recitations, followed by a gift for every child in the school.

The auction sale of stock and farm implements of the late Lorne Northey, which was held on Monday last proved very satisfactory in spite of the bad weather. Cows sold averaged $75.00 each. The farm, which was put up for sale, is not sold as yet.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

"I saw a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and sent for a free sample. I got relief from it so I bought more and after I had used them for three months I was healed." (Signed) Miss Beatrice Aiken, Highwater, Que.

FILMS FIT FOR CHILDREN.

If Ontario children next year go to see moving pictures that are not suitable for young patrons of the silver sheet productions their parents will be to blame.

It has been announced that the Provincial Secretary has decided that films considered proper for family viewing will be so marked; those not designated should therefore be put on the forbidden list, if parents are apprehensive of the effect of such pictures upon their children.

There is to be nothing compulsory in the system; the pictures will be labelled and fathers and mothers thus given a clue as to the characters of the films being displayed.

If they do not choose to act upon this information they must be prepared to accept the consequences should their sons and daughters be harmfully influenced by seeing pictures not fit for juvenile viewing.

Undoubtedly there are many films being shown that are pretty strong fare for children, pictures that stress sex or crime and exploit objectionable features.

The new plan will warn parents against these and provide them with an opportunity to intelligently supervise what their children are allowed to see.

BECOMING INDEPENDENT.

While the marketing of Alberta coal in Ontario has not as yet met with the success that was hoped for, it is nevertheless reassuring to read in a recent bulletin issued by the Dominion Fuel Board that Canada is fast on her way to independence in the matter of her fuel supply.

In fact during the past five years Canadians have learned to use substitutes for United States anthracite to such an extent that this country is no longer in a position to have to deal with a fuel famine should American production be tied up by a strike as was the case in the not far distant past.

We still import a great deal of anthracite but such development has been made in the use of coke, a certain amount of Canadian coal, peat and other fuels that there is not the same reason to fear cessation of the supply from across the line.

This more favorable condition can be still more improved by a more successful promotion of the sale of Alberta coal in the East, which should be facilitated by the decision to increase the time of the test rates to six months in each year.

Once the movement of a large quantity of western fuel in Ontario at reasonable rates is assured, this country can feel satisfied that she has nothing to fear, no matter what may happen in the Pennsylvania coal fields.

SHOULD BE CARRIED.

It is The Examiner's opinion that the ratepayers will be making a mistake if they do not approve of the two by-laws upon which they are asked to vote on New Year's Day.

In regard to the by-law to assist the Johnson Outboard Motors Company by a fixed assessment for ten years there does not seem to be a valid reason why this concession should not be granted to a most promising industry, as similar concessions have been granted in the case of other local industrial concerns.

The decision of the Johnson Company to establish a manufacturing plant here to take care of the Canadian and British trade and eventually to manufacture in Peterborough for export to other parts of the British Empire assures this city of an industry with a bright future and apparently sure prospects of expansion and development.

To reject this chance would be folly and The Examiner is confident that the ratepayers have no intention of refusing to approve of the concession that is proposed.

The purchase of the gas plant would seem to be in the public interest.

It is the concensus of opinion that the utility is being offered at a reasonable price, with other property of value to the city included and that it would be good business to acquire the plant on such terms, and at the same time to reclaim the franchise granted many years ago to the Petreborough Gas Company.

The purchase can be financed without any cost to the taxpayers, as the proposition will take care of itself and indeed leave a surplus.

The ratepayers would be well advised to vote "Yes" on both these questions.

THE CIVIL WAR OF MOTOR ACCIDENTS

The Toronto Bureau of Municipal Research, which has conducted many useful inquiries into municipal matters, has been investigating to some purpose the death toll inflicted by automobile accidents and the figures thus compiled are arresting.

If one morning in 1927 we had read that 864 people had been killed in some part of Canada we would have been appalled.

An inquiry as to causes would have been held and public opinion would have demanded the adoption of measures to prevent a recurrence.

As a matter of fact the bulletin tells us that 864 persons of all ages were killed in Canada last year in motor accidents, duly reported in the press.

The most spectacular cases, perhaps, awakened momentary horror, but in the main the procession of such tragedies in the nsw columns tended to deaden rather than to arouse the sensibilities.

In the Great War, which lasted four years and three months, the number of Canadian and United States soldiers killed or who died of wounds was 103,313.

In the years, 1923-27 inclusive, the motor fatalities in the United States and Canada numbered 109,007.

In other words the civil war of motor accidents has killed more people on this continent in five years than Canada and the United States lost in the world war although, of course, when the figures for Canada alone are considered there is a different showing.

The Canadians killed or died of wounds in the war numbered 52,803 while the motor fatalities in the period considered totalled 2,590.

On the other hand the United States lost 50,510 soldiers through the war and had 106,417 citizens killed by motor accidents.

DRUGS AND DRINK.

After eight years of the prohibition enactment in the United States it must seem strange to its original advocates to open a New York newspaper to-day and see on the front page a long list in parallel column of the prices of liquor in that city. Obviously it is not a wine merchant's advertisement; it is a list submitted by bootleggers to likely buyers.

From it we learn that the bootleg rate of imported liquors runs at $7 to $8 a quart for Scotch whiskey, $4 for port wine, $8 to $11 for champagne, and $3 for gin. Many of the well-known brands are listed and, in addition, the prices are given for home-made brands which the buyer may drink at his peril.

Moreover, the paper quoted bootleg price lists in cities all over the United States, showing that the rates were practically the same on the Pacific coast as on the Atlantic coast.

What is the inference? It is that bootleggers are not working as individuals, although they no doubt are in many cases, but that there is a gigantic, organized industry which has its head offices and regional salesmen, with a universal scale of prices.

On top of that, another paper calls attention to the fact that within one week the narcotic squad had seized over $7,000,000 worth of drugs in various large cities, and cites this as evidence of the belief that if the people are deprived of one social habit they will get their "kick" in another, and worse, way.

It is estimated that via Lake Erie alone, something like $1,000,000 worth of liquor finds its way across every week.

The Republican party included the strict enforcement of the Volstead Act in its platform. Mr. Hoover as the head of that party will be responsible for that pledge. He has undertaken tasks that might have scared Hercules and succeeded, but none so difficult as the task of making prohibition prohibit.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

A NEW BANK FOR CANADA.

Announcement is made in the Canada Official Gazette that an application will be made to Parliament at the coming session for a charter for a new bank. A new bank, that is, for Canada. The application will be made on behalf of Barclays Bank Ltd. of London, England. Barclays Bank is one of the great financial institutions of the world—one of the five chief British banks. Its capital is just under $80,000,000, much more than double that of the largest Canadian bank.

While practically a branch of Barclays Bank, the new bank will be a distinct organization, with a Canadian charter, a separate capital, and a directorate composed chiefly of Canadians. The understanding is that Sir Robert Borden will be president. The name will be Barclays Bank Canada.

The advent of this new bank, affiliated with a great institution like the parent bank, should be welcomed here. A feeling is general that Canadian banking has been getting into too few hands. Our banks are splendid institutions, they meet all our commercial and industrial needs reasonably. There has never yet been any well-founded complaint that their exceptionally strong position has rendered any of them narrow or selfish. But with the business growth of Canada, which has been rapid, and owing to the natural resources of the Dominion if for no other reason is bound inevitably to continue to be rapid, there should be real competition among the banks for business patronage, and this would be endangered by shortage in the number of banks. Frankly, we think the country has some reason to be concerned about the decrease in the past half century in the number of Canadian banks, and good reason to be pleased at the advent of a new one with such powerful backing.

Barclays Bank has already been branching out in overseas directions. Barclays Bank Colonial and Overseas was formed three years ago by the amalgamation of the National Bank of South Africa, the Anglo-Egyptian Bank and the Colonial Bank, with the object of furthering the interests of imperial trade, and has branches at most of the important centres of the Empire.

The new Canadian bank will have a paid-up capital of $500,000 and a reserve fund of $500,000, most of the capital being subscribed by Barclays Bank and Barclays Bank Colonial and Overseas. Apart from all other considerations, it is a good thing for Canadian development that a big British financial house like Barclays should become directly interested in the finance of this county.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTSS AND COMMENT.

The snow plough contractors better watch out or the Council will be asking them to take a cut.

The small boy who got a toboggan for Christmas would like to know where old Jack Frost and his pals Snow and Ice, have got to anyway.

The Globe approves of Premier King's return-to-penny-postage Christmas message, which makes it unanimous.

Among your New Year's resolutions should be one to start 1929 right by using your franchise.

An old inhabitant is any one who can remember another Christmas day in Peterborough like Tuesday.

Municipal candidates are taking the present campaign just as quietly as are the electors. It is a featureless fight.

Among those who are not complaining of slow business in the Christmas season may be mentioned the chairman of Ontario's Liquor Control Board.

Now that Canada has ordered two destroyers, some of the fiery admirals in the United States will plead for a bigger navy for Uncle Sam.

Owen Sound nominated 36 candidates for twelve places on the Council. If they can't get a good dozen out of that field the fault will be with the electors themselves.

This is a most excellent field, and it is a matter for regret that four out of the eight candidates will have to be defeated.

The word, "Listen," has never been known to preface anything worth listening to. — Kingston Whig-Standard.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1928

(Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Astrologers read this as rather an uncertain day with benefic aspects strong in the early hours.

There is a good sway for paying one's debts and looking into one's bank account. Pleasant surprise regarding finances may be expected.

Rise of salaries and bonuses may be more than ordinarily common at this time of year when persons who wield power are likely to be generous to employes.

This is not an auspicious rule for opening new shops or for starting any work. It is better for vacations and short journeys.

The vibrations are fortunate for philanthropic institutions and especially for hospitals which will be overcrowded everywhere, the seers prophesy.

Astrologers repeatedly warn persons to be exceedingly careful to safeguard the health and to avoid colds, for a sinister aspect appears to presage epidemics.

The seers declare that lack of sleep is largely responsible for many current ills of the flesh and for many sudden deaths.

The tempo of the time must be slower, according to the stars, or there will be an even greater increase of insanity.

In the rules of beauty cults rest is to be preached as never before; it is a forecast, for occultists foretell serious effects of modern life soon to be apparent although not now recognized by the general public.

A London astrologer foretells a great mining disaster which will cause loss of life in the British Isles.

A disaster affecting New Brunswick or Nova Scotia is foreshadowed and these is presaged more than one wholesale death list in widely-separated parts of the world.

A far-reaching blizzard will interfere with business in the east and bring extraordinary results, if the stars are wisely interpreted.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of contracts and journeys that bring profit. Difficulties in financial matters will probably be met and easily overcome.

Children born on this day probably will prove most executive. Many organizers of big business are subjects of this sign of Capricorn. Girls usually prove to be good housekeepers who can extend their abilities to public work.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BUZZING TOP

Copwright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis)

"Where is Uncle Wiggily?" asked asked Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear gentleman as he shuffled up to he hollow stump bungalow two days after Christmas.

"What do you want of him?" asked Nurse Jane who was sweeping out more nut shells. Dear me! It seemed that the rabbit, squirrel, dog, pussy cat and monkey children who gathered in Uncle Wiggily's bungalow for the holidays did nothing but eat nuts. "What do you want of Uncle Wiggily?" asked Nurse Jane as she smoothed out the red, white and pink ribbon she had tied on the end of her tail.

"I want him to come fishing with me" growled Mr. Whitewash. He did not growl because he was angry, or anything like that, but just for the reason that all bears growl when they talk, the same as roosters crow and pussy cats mew.

"Fishing!" cried the muskrat lady housekeeper in surprise. "How can you go fishing in the middle of the winter?"

"Through the ice," answered the Polar Bear.

For it was winter in Woodland

Mr. Longears and Mr. Whitewash sat there.

where Uncle Wiggily lived, and though some of you who read these stories may live in warm countries, where their is never any snow, it was not Uncle Wiggily's fortune to have his bungalow in such a jolly place. Still he did not mind winter for he had a warm, fur overcoat.

"Go fishing through the ice!" murmured Nurse Jane. "It sounds very silly to me."

"That's because you never have done it," said Mr. Whitewash with another jolly growl. And just then Uncle Wiggily came out.

"Oh, hello!" roared Mr. Whitewash, "I was just asking Nurse Jane where you were. Come on, let's go fishing through the ice!"

"I wish somebody would tell me whether they are fooling or not," squeaked Nurse Jane. "How can they fish through the ice when it is as hard and thick over the rivers and lakes as a sheet of iron?"

"Why," explained Mr. Whitewash with a jolly laugh, "we just cut a hole in the ice with a hatchet, drop a hook and line through and catch a fish. We pull him up through the hole."

"Surely! answered Uncle Wiggily. "Why, think of it! We take the poor fish from the cold, icy water and put him in a nice hot pan. Why shouldn't he like it?"

"Well, maybe he does," said Nurse Jane and she kept on sweeping nut shells out of the hollow stump bungalow while Uncle Wiggily and Mr. Whitewash the Polar Bear went to fish through a hole in the ice.

For some time, after they had chopped a hole and dropped their hooks and lines through, Mr. Longears and Mr. Whitewash sat there on cakes of ice for seats, not minding the cold because of their fur coats. Then, all of a sudden, Uncle Wiggily put his paw in his pocket.

"Got anything to eat?" asked the Polar Bear.

"No," answered the rabbit. "This is a top that my rabbit boy Custer stuck in my pocket," and he pulled out a buzzing, humming top.

"Why did Custer give you the top?" asked the Polar Bear.

"He told me it was broken, that it wouldn't play music when it spun as it did on Christmas day" explained Mr. Longears. "Custer wanted me to mend his top and I said I would. I told him to put it in my pocket and I would take it down town when I went. But I forgot about it until just now. I'm afraid it's badly broken.

Uncle Wiggily wound up the buzzing top but, though it spun around on the ice near the fishing hole, no musical hum came from the toy.

"Let me look at it," growled the Polar Bear. "I used to be very good at mending tops when I was a boy." So he looked at Custer's broken toy and saw where a big Christmas nut had fallen inside. "Ha!" cried Mr. Whitewash. "I'll soon pull that out as if it was a tooth!"

Poking a claw inside the top, the Bear pulled out the big nut and then, when the toy was wound up it hummed and buzzed and played a fine tune. And how glad Custer was to get his Christmas present back again as good as it had been at first. So Uncle Wigily and Mr. Whitewash went home.

"What's that? Did you catch any fish? No, all they caught was a cold. But they had a lot of fun

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

XVIII—PAGET TRIES MATCH-MAKING

The week that followed the dance at the Pagets' house was one of supreme torture to Marna.

It seemed to her overstrung nerves that everyone was conspiring together to hurt her and make her suffer.

Renny Martin devoted himself to her, and the little, quiet smile in his eyes whenever they met her own was almost more than she could bear. It seemed to be a deliberate reminder that they shared a secret.

And the time was flying by.

The Big Flapper openly bewailed Hugh's departure.

"Won't it be frightful when he's gone?" she said to Marna in her exaggerated way. "Life won't be worth living, will it? I shall go and bury myself somewhere. You'll let me stay on till the bitter end, won't you?"

"Stay as long as you like" Marna answered. "I'm sure Mr. Hubbard ought to be flattered at so much devotion."

There was a little gleam in the Big Flapper's eyes, but she answered frankly:

"It's like me! I always go off the deep end over everything. If I love anyone I have to grovel! And if I hate anyone I have to murder them."

"You ought to be put under restraint," George Paget said amiably. He never took anyone too seriously; he regarded the Big Flapper as a sentimental schoolgirl, but it did occur to him that perhaps Hugh Hubbard might do worse than consider her. One evening he went out of his way to mention it to his friend.

It was just before dinner, and the two men were smoking together in the library.

Hubbard had been out all day. "On the firm business," so he explained, but in reality he had only absented himself because he could not bear to see Marna's tragic eyes and determinedly smiling lips. He had made up his mind that at the end of the week he would make some excuse and move into a hotel.

He was about to mention it to Paget when the elder man said suddenly:

"Decent little girl, Biddy's friend."

"Yes," Hubbard answered absently; he had hardly realized to whom the remark applied.

Paget stuck his eyeglass fiercely in his eye.

"You might do worse, don't-cher-know," he said awkwardly. "And she's pinned her fancy on you all right."

Hubbard looked up with vague eyes.

"What on earth are you wandering about?" he demanded.

George Paget laughed.

"Talking about Biddy's friend, Dolly Benson. Fine-lookin' girl, don't yer think. Might do worse than take her back to Shanghai with you—eh?"

The dull color rose slowly to Hubbard's face.

"Have you gone mad?" he asked quietly.

Paget looked taken aback.

"Oh, all right. No offence. Only a friendly hint. The girl likes you, and—"

"She's only a child," Hubbard said angrily. "And you can get that bee out of your bonnet as soon as you like!"

"Oh, all right!"

There was an awkward silence, which Paget broke with a friendly effort.

"All joking apart, Hugh, why don't you get married? All the women like you——"

"Much obliged to them, I'm sure."

"And if you don't marry you'll miss more than half the happiness there is in life," Paget went on serenely. "I'm sure I never knew what happiness was till Marna took me in hand. Fact, I assure you."

"I've no doubt." It was all exquisite torture, which Hubbard interrupted bluntly with the subject uppermost in his mind. "I'm going to clear out on Saturday and go to a hotel."

Paget's handsome face took on the expression of an injured boy.

"By Jove, if you're offended——" he broke out.

"Silly old ass! You couldn't offend me if you tried. No, it's only that I've so much to see to before I go that I shall feel more free if I'm on my own, so to speak. You've been a brick to me, and I'm ashamed of the way I've stayed on, but I'll clear off on Saturday and wind up my affairs. Time's getting short, you know."

"We shall miss you" Paget said stolidly, but he was not altogether sorry at his friend's sudden decision. If Hubbard went, perhaps Renny Martin would go also, and lately Paget had felt vaguey disturbed at Martin's devotion to Marna. Not that there was anything on Marna's side, he knew, but, all the same, it was confounded cheek of the fellow to follow her round as he did. Hubbard was as good as his word, and on the following Saturday he moved to a hotel in St. James' Street. Marna took it very quietly when she was told; perhaps in a way it was even relief to her.

"All good things come to an end," she said lightly. She looked Hubbard straight in the eyes unflinchingly. " "We've had a jolly time together, all of us, haven't we?"

"Very jolly."

"I suppose that means that I've got to go, too," the Big Flapper said disconsolately. She shrugged her shoulders. "Oh, well, once a party begins to break, it might as well be completely smashed and have done."

"I'm sure your mother must think I am going to keep you for ever," Marna said smilingly.

"I wish you would," was Dolly's blunt retorts. "I wish I were Biddy! I'd just love to live here with you and Mr. Paget.

She waited hopefully, but Marna only laughed.

"I think I've got as much as I can manage," she said quietly; but she put out a hand to Biddy.

She felt that she wanted someone to hold on to—someone who loved her.

And the following morning Hubbard went away.

"It's not the end. I shall see him again—often!" Marna told herself desperately as she stood in the hall, laughing and trying to talk as if nothing else matter.

"It's not goodbye, hang it all!" Paget protested loudly to his friend. "You're only half a mile away. We'll see you every day—eh, Marna? What about dining out somewhere tomorrow?"

Marna did not answer, and Hubbard said with an effort:

"I've got to work! I'll ring up in a day or two, if I may, and make some arrangement."

He said goodbye to Biddy and to the Big Flapper.

"I could howl!" Dolly Benson said. "And Mr. Hubbard doesn't mind leaving us a bit, I can see. I don't believe he's got a heart!"

Hubbard hardly heard her, hardly saw her; his whole being was concentrated on the moment when he would have to say goodbye to Marna.

"I shall see her again" he thought fiercely. "It's nonsense to feel as if it's the end. Of course I shall see her again." But his face was white when at last he forced himself to turn to her.

Afterwards he wondered what he said—what she said. He supposed they shook hands; he supposed that he thanked her for her kindness in allowing him to stay so long, but he could not remember.

Then he followed George Paget into the waiting car; Harnigan slammed the door, and it was all over.

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion (Copyright)

THANK YOU ALL, neighbors, for your Christmas cards and gifts I hope soon to get around to thanking you all personally, but, just for now, please accept this expression of my appreciation

* * * * * * *

It was so nice to know that you thought enough of my efforts during the past six months to remember me in this way.

* * * * * * *

And then I must opologize for not getting all your Christmas letters into print before the holiday. I had them all ready, but space was so limited that the printers had to turn me down.

* * * * * * *

I wish to express my regrets to "Mother of Pearl" whose letter appealed to neighbors on behalf of the mail men. Although dated December 20, this did not arrive until the 24th, and I simply couldn't get it in—even if it would have been of service at that late hour.

* * * * * * *

Wasn't that a splendid act of little Harold M's, as told by his mother in a letter printed in Monday's paper? It was so nice that I handed it to the editor to be printed in a conspicuous place.

* * * * * * *

Harold though so much about the little children who would have no Christmas dinner that he took the coppers from his bank and had his mother send us the money to help out. And it did, a whole lot.

* * * * * * *

I'm sure Christmas was all the happier for Harold, as he played with his new toys, because he had thought first of others less fortunate.

* * * * * * *

THAT is the true spirit of Christmas.

* * * * * * *

Do you know, neighbors, I have already made one resolution, without waiting for the New Year? I have made a note in my diary for September 15 next: "Start making Christmas Gifts."

* * * * * * *

And I'm going to try to get you neighbors started then, too, if I am still acting as your contact in our pages! It would save SO much worry and rush if we could only DO it! Don't you think so?

* * * * * * *

Talking about New Year resolutions reminds me of our next contest, which is to be just that: "New Year Resolutions" with a "My" in front.

* * * * * * *

We all make them. It's a good thing to have such thoughts at least once a year, even if the idea for improvement never goes any farther than the resolution, because it shows we're not dead to the knowledge that we are not wholly perfect.

* * * * * * *

Now try your luck. Sit right down and write a letter telling what resolutions you have made or intend to make, or would like to make. And send the letter in—don't forget that. In this case the good resolution to enter the competition must be followed out or it can't win the prize!

* * * * * * *

Do you remember the old joking inquiry: "Have you stopped beating your wife?" If one answered "Yes" one intimated that one had been beating her, and if one answered "No" it meant one was still making a practice of the castigation.

* * * * * * *

Well, even if the only resolution you have made is to stop beating up your husband, tell us about it. If "Thinker" has planned to forswear writing letters to our pages, that's worth telling about—and we might give him a special prize!

* * * * * * *

Are you going to stay home more in 1929—or are you going to broaden out by visiting? Are you going to cut out cards, or is it your good resolution to learn to play bridge? Have you made any new plans for training your children?

* * * * * * *

Have you, in fact, made any resolutions about anything?

* * * * * * *

And, if you don't believe in making New Year resolutions, tell us why and you will still be eligible for the prize.

* * * * * * *

Anything will "go," and everyone is entitled to enter this competition.

* * * * * * *

Please sign your entry with a pen name, and write on your letter your correct name and address. This is important, as we still have some prizes for former competitions undelivered because the address was not given. Only pen names will be published.

* * * * * * *

In a day or two—maybe Saturday—I will give a list of names from which you can choose. Of you can, of course, make up your own.

* * * * * * *

And now, about the judging. It is suggested that I might allow the neighbors to judge the competition—what do you think? Will you send in your opinion?

* * * * * * *

There is no use in our adopting this method, you know, unless everyone helps. So please fill in the coupon and return it with your entry or sometime. The result of this vote will be announced on the day the competition closes, and then, if you favor it, I will ask you to make your choice. I would like to see the new plan tried out for once.

* * * * * * *

The competition will close at midnight on Saturday, January 12. But please send in your contribution as early as you can, to give me a better chance to organize the material.

* * * * * * *

This should be the best competition yet—it only remains for you neighbors to get behind it, and every one write a letter on "My New Year Resolution." Maybe I'll write one myself.

* * * * * * *

The help I am offering this week is a pattern-diagram for a corduroy beret, with the pattern actual size. The beret is easily made from quarter of a yard of material, making a dainty head dress for girls and misses.

* * * * * * *

To Marion, c/o Examiner office:—

I think it would be nice to have the neighbors judge the "New Year Resolution" competition, and I will tell you my opinion as to the best letter, after publication. .....

I think it would be preferable to have you judge the "New Year Resolution" competition. .....

(Please mark a cross opposite the plan you prefer)

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

DECEMBER 27, 1928

Ninety-four years ago to-day there died Charles Lamb, English essayist, who is chiefly remembered for his "Essays of Elia," published in 1823 and 1833. To-day's extract I remembered reading in a school book years ago, and when I came on it in a volume of Lamb's works, I thought the neighbors might like "A Dissertation Upon Roast Pig."—M.

Mankind, says a Chinese manuscript, which my friend M. was obliging enough to read and explain to me, for the first seventy thousand ages, ate their meat raw, clawing or biting it from the living animal, just as they do in Abyssinia to this day. This period is not obscurely hinted at by their great Confucius in the second chapter of his "Mundane Mutations," where he designates a kind of golden age by the term Chofang, literally the Cook's Holiday. The manuscript goes on to say that the art of roasting, or rather broiling (which I take to be the elder brother), was accidentally discovered in the manner following: The swineherd, Hoti, having gone out into the woods one morning, as his manner was, to collect mast for his hogs, left his cottage in the care of his eldest son, Bo-ho, a great lubberly boy, who, being fond of playing with fire as youngsters of his age commonly are, let some sparks escape into a bundle of straw, which kindling quickly spread the conflagration over every part of their poor mansion, till it was reduced to ashes. Together with the cottage (a sorry antediluvian makeshift of a building you may think it), what was of much more importance, a fine litter of new-farrowed pigs, no less than nine in number, perished. China pigs have been esteemed a luxury all over the East, from the remotest periods that we read of. Bo-bo was in the utmost consternation, as you many think, not so much for the sake of the tenement, which his father and he could easily build up again with a few dry branches, and the labor of an hour or two, at any time, as for the loss of the pigs. While he was thinking what he should say to his father, and wringing his hands over the smoking remnants of one of those untimely sufferers, an odor assailed his nostrils, unlike any scent which he had before experienced. What could it proceed from? Not from the burnt cottage, he had smelt that smell before; indeed, this was by no means the first accident of the kind which had occurred through the negligence of this unlucky young firebrand. Much less did it resemble that of any known herb, weed, or flower. A premonitory moistening at the same time overflowed his nether lip. He knew not what to think. He next stooped down to feel the pig, if there were any signs of life in it. He burnt his fingers, and to cool them he applied them in his booby fashion to his mouth. Some of the crumbs of the scorched skin had come away with his fingers, and for the first time in his life (in the world's life, indeed, for before him no man had known it) he tasted crackling! Again he felt and fumbled at the pig. It did not burn him so much now, still he licked his fingers from a sort of habit. The truth at length broke into his slow understanding, that it was the pig that smelt so, and the pig that tasted so delicious; and surrendering himself up to the newborn pleasure, he fell to tearing up whole handfuls of the scorched skin with the flesh next it, and was cramming it down his throat in his beastly fashion, when his sire entered amid the smoking rafters, armed with retributory cudgel, and finding how affairs stood, began to rain blows upon the young rogue's shoulders, as thick as hailstones, which Bo-bo heeded not any more than if they had been flies. The tickling pleasure which he experienced in his lower regions had rendered him quite callous to any inconveniences he might feel in those remote quarters. His father might lay on, but he could not beat him from his pig, till he had fairly made an end of it; when, becoming a little more sensible of his situation, something like the following dialogue ensued:—

"You graceless whelp, what have you got there devouring? Is it not enough that you have burnt me down three houses with your dog's tricks, and be hanged to you! But you must be eating fire, and I know not what—what have you got there, I say?"

"O father, the pig, the pig! Do come and taste how nice the burnt pig eats."

The ears of Ho-ti tingled with horror. He cursed his son, and he cursed himself that ever he should beget a son that should eat burnt pig.

Bo-bo, whose scent was wonedrfully sharpened since morning, soon raked out another pig, and fairly rending it asunder, thrust the lesser half by main force into the fists of Ho-ti, still shouting out, "Eat, eat, eat the burnt pig, father, only taste—O Lord!"—with such like barbarous ejaculations, cramming all the while as if he would choke.

Ho-ti trembled in every joint while he grasped the abominable thing, wavering whether he should not put his son to death for an unnatural young monster, when the crackling scorching his fingers, as it had done his son's, and applying the same remedy to them, he in his turn tasted some of its flavor, which, make what sour mouths he would for a pretense, proved not altogether displeasing to him. In conclusion (for the manuscript here is a little tedious) both father and son fairly sat down to the mess and never left off till they had dispatched all that remained of the litter.

Bo-bo was strictly enjoined not to let the secret escape, for the neighbors would certainly have stoned them for a couple of abominable wretches, who could think of improving upon the good meat which God had sent them. Nevertheless strange stories got about. It was observed that Ho-ti's cottage was burnt down now more frequently than ever. Nothing but fires from this time forward. Some would break out in broad day, others in the night-time. As often as the

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office

"Dear Marion:—

First of all excuse this poor writing, but I am a poor writer. I like your page best of all, and you sure must be a wonderful woman. I would like to meet you. So would others but that is hopeless beyond words. Isn't it?

Sincerely yours,
Cassandra."

Your query will be answered in the Big Sister Column just as soon as it comes back from the neighbor to whom I have referred it, "Cassandra" but I wish to reply to the above here and now.

You can't imagine how I would like to meet all you neighbors, who write so nice letters to me, but, as you say, it's impossible, for the present anyhow. There are so many stories floating around (at some of which I have to laugh—such as the one that made me out a MAN!) that I am glad to have this opportunity of telling WHY—and I have the Editor's permission. It is not usual for newspaper writers to make their identity known, at least until they have achieved fame, when the newspapers are only too eager to claim the discovery of a brilliant journalist. This was my agreement with the managing editor when I started work last spring. Apparently I haven't yet achieved brilliancy!

It's not because I seek the publicity that I would like to have things otherwise, but I would really and truly love to meet all you neighbors.

* * *

"Dear Marion:—

I would like you to send me helps which I have checked if I am not too late. I enjoy reading your page which I think is very helpful. Wishing The Examiner and its readers a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Betty."

When writing again, "Betty," please choose another pen name, as we already have one "Betty." Thanks for your kind words.

"Dear Marion:—

Your page has added much to The Examiner and I am sure is appreciated by many people. I am enclosing a marked coupon and will be obliged if you will send me the numbers I have marked. I hope I am not asking for too many.

Will sign the initials of my name.

S.A.M.E."

City.

Thanks for the nice things you write, "S.A.M.E." The helps were sent you some days ago.

"Dear Marion:—

I want to join the crowd and tell you how my husband and I both enjoy your page of The Examiner. The Armistice Number was a credit to The Examiner and we enjoyed the Christmas stories so much. It was hard to believe in reading some of them that they were written by amateurs. It all goes to show what we women can do when we try. But Marion, I vote, and I wonder if any of the neighbors agree with me, to ignore altogether letters written by such men as 'Thinker.'

You answered them so splendidly, but I know it must give you a little bit of a heart ache when you read them. I feel it a shame to have our helpful and neighborly page spoiled or rather soiled by such.

I hope I have not said too much and that you understand my point of view.

Sunshine."

Lakefield.

I think the controversy with "Thinker" has gone far enough "Sunchine," although I have still some neighbors' letters to print. Thanks for your appreciation and your husband's.

DISABLED SHIPS REPORTED SAFE

Wireless Advices Indicate Vessels In North Pacific Have Reached Safety.

ENCOUNTER HEAVY SEAS.

SEATTLE, Washn., Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Wireless advices to the coast guard cutter Unalga today indicated that two disabled vessels in the North Pacific which for several days have been staving off disaster by only a narrow margin had been saved. Thirty nine persons are abpard the two ships.

The reports said that the sea tug Roosevelt, which became famous as the craft used by Robert E. Peary, when he discovered the North Pole in 1909, had been towed safely to the lee of Cape St. Elias after a hard fight to kesp it from going on a reef.

The other distressed vessel, Starr, with twenty three persons aboard was being held off Wessel's Reef, Alaska, by her anchor while the steamer Nor.hwestern stood by.

Eleven days ago The Starr encountered trouble in a storm and called for help after she had struck a reef. She finally was towed to Seward by the steamer Alameda. The Roosevelt picked up the Starr at Seward and started to tow her to Seattle. Heavy seas were encountered, Monday the tow line broke and in attempting to get another one to The Starr it became entangled in The Roosevelt's propeller.

The Starr managed to make its anchor hold in sixty fathoms of water but the sea tug began drifting helplessly toward a reef. The steamer Northwestern, which went to the aid of the two ships attempted to send out a lifeboat to the Roeevelt but apparently did not succeed in taking anyone off. The motor ship Attu also went to the aid of the Roosevelt last night. At midnight the Unalga reported that the Attu had got a tow line to the Roosevelt and had pulled it to safety.

CAR GOES DOWN; FIVE DROWNED

Rescue Parties Fail To Find Any Trace of Automobile or Occupants.

LEAVE LARGE FAMILIES.

BATHHURST, N.B., December 27 (Canadian Press). — Five persons lost their lives yesterday when the automobile in which they were driving went through the ice as they were crossing from Little Lameque to Shipegan mainland.

The dead are:

Jose H. N. Noel, merchant Mrs. Jose H. Noel, his wife; Andrew Duguay, father of Mrs. Noel; Thomas Jones, a well-known fish merchant; and Jose H. Chiasson, all of Little Lameque. The latter was only 18 years of age, while the others were married with large families.

The party left Little Lameque this morning for the mainland, about five miles distant, driving along a "road" on the ice, which has been used for the last week. When they had gone about four miles the car was seen to disappear. Rescue parties at once started for the scene of the accident, but were unable to go close as the ice was badly smashed. They returned to shore and cut the ice to the spot where the accident occurred, using boats, and started to look for the car and its occupants without success.

OLD NEWSPAPER IS INTERESTING

William J. Green Has Copy of Fifty-seven Years Ago.

The Irish Land bill, an excurion to Idyl Wilde under the auspices of the Peterborough Foresters, and Midland district notes are subjects of interesting reading in a copy of the Peterborough Examiner of Thursday, August 11, 1881, shown to the present editorial department by William J. Green, city tax collector.

The old edition is strange in comparison with the present day number. All of one side of the front page is taken up in the accommodation of small legal, financial and other advertisments, while the headings are decidedly brief resembling the English style of make-up.

Gladstone Mentioned

Under the heading "The Irish Land bill" is noted a quotation from the "World's" London special, which reads: "The amendments of the Irish Land Bill, passed by the Lords are deemed by the finistry, fatal to the meausre. Mr. Gladstone has not hesitated to let the Lords know that he will not accept amendments striking at those sections especially intended for the benefit of the tenant. Lord Salisbury, however, has persisted in the work of throwing out the most drastic clauses in the bill as his majority in the Upper House promises to stand by him. The Radicals are spoiling for a fight with the Upper House. Next week, Lord Salisbury will be compelled to surrender many of the important amendments which he has pressed or take the risk of involving the Lords in a struggle with the Commons and the people."

Other Items

Another article reads: The Midland Railway has now advanced the laying down of steel rails, in place of iron, to a considerable distance north of Lindsay, and in a short time the steel band will stretch from Port Hope harbor to Midland Bay.

W. Lech, writing to The Examiner condemned the idea of having the waterworks system built jointly by the town and a private company. He was in favor of having the town build the system itself.

"Masonic— In the Grand Chapter of Canada, H. C. Winch of Peterborough has been appointed Grand Director of Ceremonies.

"Cool Burgess, artist of burnt cork provided an exhibition for a limited audience in Bradburn's Hall last night.

The Advertising

Glancing through the advertisements one notes that A. P. Morgan claims for his hotel at the corner of Hunter and Water streets the best of wines, liquors, cigars and a careful hostler in charge of the driving sheds; M. Halpin announces that he has leased the Dublin Hotel in the Ryan block on George street; Darcey's hotel at the corner of George and Hunter streets was purchased from R. N. Roddy, and W. Kennealy announces that he has thoroughly refitted the Commercial House.

Barristers advertising at that time included Sheriff James A. Hall, C. A. Weller, Dennistoun Brothers and Hall; C. S. Wallis; Scott and Edwards; John Burnham, John Green, D. W. Dumble, Hattón, Hatton and Beck; Poussette and Roger, and Edmison and Wood.

LEGATIONS REQUEST BRITISH ASSISTANCE

Women and Children Evacuate Territory at Kabul, Afghanistan.

NEW DELHI, India, December 27 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters). —Following the evacuation of women and children from the British Legation at Kabul, Afghanistan, threatened by rebels, other legations in Kabul have requested British assistance. Airplanes which took the first parties from Kabul to Peshawur on the Indian frontier, 160 miles away, yesterday were despatched from Peshawur to evacuate foreign women and children.

It is reported to-day that for three days the British Legation was isolated between the rebel and the royal forces. The rebels have been repulsed from the close vicinity of the legation. It is thought Queen Sourlya and the Queen-Mother have gone to Kandahar. The report that King Amanullah has also fled to Kandahar is met with growing disbelief in New Delhi.

Colborne

(Examiner Correspondence)

COLBORNE, Dec. 26.—Although not very deep, there is enough snow to give a Christmas appearance, though there is no sleighing. The snow plough has been along the highway clearing the little bit of snow away, which is probably an inch deep.

Fowl Not Plentiful.

Although geese are plentiful and selling at 25 cents a pound, ducks and turkeys are not plentiful because not many farmers raised them this summer.

Has Head Wounded.

Some men were cutting wood yesterday on one of the farms in the vicinity, when they sighted a large coon. Mr. Bradford climbed the tree and drove the coon down where others were ready with clubs to capture the animal. Unfortunately, one of the men had a club with a sharp hook and as he brought it down, it caught in some way, the top of his head, stunning him for a time and causing the blood to flow freely. It was necessary to call a doctor to dress the wound. However, others in the party captured the coon.

VOCAL CONCERT AT CAMPBELLFORD

Given Under Auspices of W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Fred. Free and Miss Margaret Dickson pleased a large audience in the auditorium of the church, when they presented a vocal program of twenty numbers. Agnes Logan Green of Peterborough was the accompanist for the evening. Both singers were recalled on several occasions, but only sang encores once during the program. Mrs. Free sang for her extra number "The Gift" (Behrend). Miss Dickson's number was "Piper June," by Carew. Before the program was begun, the Reverend W. J. Mark spoke a few appropriate words, suggesting that since it was the Christmas season the concert should be opened with a purely Christmas number. The singers obliged with "Holy Night" as a duet.

Mrs. Free was the first to appear. She sang a group of three numbers, "Who is Sylvia" and "My Abode," by Schubert, and "Ring Out, Wild Bells," which was Gounod's setting of the passage from Tennyson's "In Memoriam." Miss Dickson's first group was also of three numbers, "Nymphs and Shepherds" (Purcell), "To a Violet" (Brahms), and "The Trout," by Schubert. Mrs. Free's second group was "Calm as the Night," by Bohm; "The Roadside Fire," by Vaughn-Williams, and "Onward," by Liddle.

The celebrated "Barcarolle," from the Tales of Hoffman (Offenbach), sung as a duet, was the next number. It so pleased the audience that the singers were given their first insistent applause, demanding their return. They did not, however, respond with an encore.

The next group was by Miss Dickson. She sang "Nightingale in June," by Sanderson; "Phyllis Has Such Charming Graces," an old English air; and the waltz song from Romeo and Juliet (Gounod). The first number of the group won her much applause. The final number demanded an encore, "Piper June."

Mrs. Free's last group was "Glow of the Western Sky" by Hulbert; "In the Time of Roses" by Reichardt, and "Tommy Lad," by Margetson. Her singing of the group demanded another number. Mrs. Free responded with Behrend's "The Gift."

"Rain," by Gay; "As I went Roaming," by Brahe, and "Annie Laurie," as arranged by Lehmann, were the three numbers of Miss Dickson's final group. Her interpretation of the last number so pleased her listeners that she was recalled.

Blumenthal's 'Venetian Boat Song,' a duet, was the last number on the program.

1920, forty-two million cubic feet of gas had been sold; in 1922, fifty-two million cubic feet; in 1924, fifty-six million; in 1925, fifty-five million, and in 1926 and 1927 forty-nine million each.

He went on to explain the effect of certain changes in the rates, and that the increase in domestic consumption thereby had been more than counterbalanced by the fact of many industries resorting to electricity and other power. This business would come back gradually now that a differential rate system had been put into effect. During the past year there has been an increase of over two hundred customers.

Q.—"Will not the Utilities Commission, in handling the plant, and the Electric power, be trying to develop two rival power sources?"

A.—By Mayor Denne: "A person using one does not usually want the other for a similar purpose."

Chairman Matthews, of the Utilities Commission—"The cost of installing a gas stove is much lower than that for an electric stove, and we will be able to advise which is best suited to the needs of a customer."

Q.—"Since the price of the local plant has been so greatly reduced from the original, why will there not be an immediate cutting down of the rates?"

A.—(Mayor Denne.)—"There seems no doubt that there will be some ultimate reduction for the cost of administration from Toronto will be eliminated, and the same metre readers for reading the consumption of electricity in the homes can be used for the gas measurement."

Mr. Holland raised the question of whether or not the purchase would have any effect on the borrowing power of the city but was assured by City Clerk Armstrong that it was the tax rate which determined the borrowing power and in this case the gas plant would not be imposed on the tax payers, since it was a profitable utility.

Thus the discussion ran on, with questions as to the uses to which the incidental properties might be put, and regarding the condition of the mains. They were pronounced by Mr. Drewry and others to be in good condition.

Candidates Speak.

Voicing their approval of the council's commending the two bylaws to the voters, Dr. A. Moir, Isaac P. McNabb, both candidates for the Board of Education, and Aldermanic candidates J. A. McNabb and Holland, spoke briefly at the close of the meeting and assured their hearers of their intentions to give service in the offices which they sought.

SOCIETY PRESENTS LITERARY PROGRAM

Ralph Staples Gives Interesting Address On Life of Henry Drummond.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, December 27. — On Wednesday evening the Ugoigo Society of Cavan United Church had a very interesting literary program, with Miss R. Segsworth, convenor of the Literary Department, in charge. Ralph Staples gave a short address on the Life of Henry Drummond, and read one of his poems, "The Habitant Farmer." Miss Irene Carpenter gave an interesting outline of the Life of Pauline Johnson, and read two of her poems. Archie Matchett and Ray Staples sang a duet and Miss Ruth Segsworth read a legend about Pauline Johnson. The devotional session at the beginning of the meeting was conducted by the president, R. Sutton. Rev. F. Carpenter spoke a few words on the Scripture lesson.

TWIN CITY JUNIORS WIN OPENING GAME

STRATFORD DEFEATED 3 TO 1 IN POOR EXHIBITION OF HOCKEY

Fellbaum and Seibert Star For Victors—Periods Draggy.

OAKVILLE BEATEN 10-2.

Junction Wins Place in Triple Tangle For Top Rung of Group.

KITCHENER, Dec. 27.—The Kitchener-Waterloo juniors opened their O.H.A. campaign here last night and defeated the Stratford Papooses by the score of 3 to 1; but their play was hardly impressive, many ragged ends appearing in their offensive work. However, for an opening game it was a good sample of junior hockey, though the first two periods were draggy at times. However, in the third stanza both teams opened up, and the result was the best hockey of the night.

Bobby Fellbaum, Twin City centre ice performer, shared the limelight with Sil Siebert, last year's right-winger, who has been converted into a defence man. Fellbaum checked steadily throughout, but could not score a goal, while Ray Shantz had the same hard luck.

Both Fellbaum and Siebert showed amazing speed as they broke from the defence and repeatedly skated away from the Stratford checks.

Oakville Beaten 10-2

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Returning to the form they flashed in the series for the S.P.A. silverware, West Toronto easily disposed of the "flu" wrecked Oakville team last night at the Ravina rink by a 10-to-2 score, which put the lads from the Junction in the triple tangle for top place in group No. 5 of the junior O.H.A. While the boys from the Lake Shore Road district were under strength, with three regulars missing, West Toronto was back to the power which carried them into the pre-season semi-finals, all their players being recovered from illness and back in harness.

Oakville had only one alternate to start the game, and just before the match commenced it was feared that they would have only six players. They were outclassed in everything but pluck, for West Toronto played clever combination, had speed to waste, and were strong, both on the offensive and defensive. With the rangy Ewens back at centre ice to make the plays, West Toronto swept in on the Oakville goal, and only poor marksmanship or loose work around the nets, prevented them from getting more. Ewens was the pivot around which the Western-

Danforths Rally to Win

TORONTO, Dec. 27—Wearing down Young Rangers' stubborn defence bulwark in fifty minutes of front-line sorties, Danforths' wave of speed finally swept over their fast tiring opponents for three goals last night at the Arena Gardens. This trio of counters were added to a goal early in the first period, which Rangers tied in opening minutes of the third dash, thus giving Danforths the decision by 4 to 1. The result places Danforths on the top rung of the group, tied with Young Rangers and West Toronto with two wins and one loss each.

For two periods the play was close and productive of hard hitting defensive action. Then the pace sped up as the wearers of the Wildey livery tied the count. Danforths threw everything they had into the attack and their three-men thrusts became harder and harder for Rangers to stop. For seven minutes the East-enders' sorties pierced closer and closer to the Rangers' citadel before they battered their way through for the winning goal. Leg weary, the Wildey clan were penned back in their own territory and two more tallies came zipping into their cage before the bell sounded a welcome respite.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

DRUMHELLER, Alta., Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Gothied Reimer, a night watchman at the Rosedeer Mine at Wayne, is under arrest, charged with murder, following the death of James Lafferty, one of the strikers from the Wayne mines. It is alleged that Reimer struck Lafferty Monday night with his watchman's club, the latter being found dead in his bed the following morning. A post mortem is to be held.

A TRAVELLING TROPHY

The Calgary Herald will again stage Western Canada's greatest annual road race, an event which never fails to draw the cream of the Prairie Province's running talent. Sharp at 11 a.m. in front of the Herald building the starting gun will be fired by Fire Chief James "Cappy" Smart, who has performed the ceremony ever since the inception of the Herald Marathon in 1906. Needless to say, Cappy, who hopes to go on starting it till he is 100, is one of the city's outstanding sport boosters.

John Kerr, Jr., of Passburg, Alta., won the 1927 event, after coming second in 1926 to Fred Halliwell, of Saskatoon, champion cross-country runner of Saskatchewan. Halliwell won in 1926 and 1925, establishing in the latter year the present record for the 6 1-7 mile course, of 34 minutes 21 2-5 seconds.

Stan Steven is another veteran Calgary Marathoner who first competed in the Herald road race in 1914, and returning from overseas in 1920 has run every year since. He has been in the medal class several times, but has never finished first. Steven ran under the Canadian Legion colors in the C. C. Pyle bunion derby, and finished the long hike, though out of the money. He has applied to the Amateur Union for reinstatement so as to be able to compete at Calgary again this year.

TROTTIER WILL REJOIN SQUAD NEXT SUNDAY

Montreal Star Injured in Saturday's Battle at at Toronto.

SIEBERT ON SICK LIST.

Expected Maroons Will Pull Through Without Aid of Extra Players.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—Dave Trottier will rejoin the Montreal Maroons here on Sunday, according to information received by Manager Eddie Gerard yesterday from Toronto, where Trottier is in hospital with a severe cut in his neck. The injury, received in the Maroon-Leaf battle Christmas night, is not as serious as first thought, and it is stated that the player will be out of hospital by the end of the week.

The Maroons are in a bit of a tight corner at present, but it is likely the team will be able to scramble through its coming difficult period without having to load up with extra players. Babe Siebert is off the defence with an injured elbow, and Earl Robinson is nursing a bad knee. However, it is expected that both Siebert and Robinson will be rounding into action again about the same time as Trottier.

Commenting on the injury sustained by Trottier, the Montreal Gazette says:

"The injury to Trottier's neck brings forward once more the suggestion that the ends of the players' hockey skates be rounded off. Sharp ends serve no purpose, and yet are the cause of many painful and serious accidents, mishaps which are not only uncomfortable to players, but put valuable stars on the casualty lists for long periods where they are no use to a club. There have been too many cut ankles, legs, necks, ears and scalps this winter in major pro. hockey."

If McPherson makes the leap, he will be emulating a number of outstanding younger players who have recently done so, notably Harold March of Regina and "Red" Horner of Toronto.

DARTMOUTH SQUAD DEFEATS McGILL 5-1

Canadian College Team Goes Down To Third Successive Defeat.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 27 (Canadian Press).—McGill University went down to their third successive defeat here last night, when they bowed before Dartmouth, 5 goals to 1.

Previously McGill had lost to Harvard in overtime, and to Yale. Dartmouth's victory last night was just as decisive as Yale's and it marked the second time in hockey history that the students of Montreal have lost on the Madison Square Garden ice.

The game as a whole was a fairly good exhibition of college hockey. United States colleges have made rapid strides in their efforts to build up championship college hockey teams, and this factor made the Montreal team appear weaker than they have been on previous tours.

ST. THOMAS INTERMEDIATE TEAM WILL BE POWERFUL.

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 27.—The ice here last night was too soft to permit a practice of the local O.H.A. intermediate team and it had to be postponed. If possible the ice will be saved for the opening game of the season against Watford on Friday. The team have only had one practice but hope to be able to hold their own in the group. Cards have been received for the new players and if some workouts can be staged, St. Thomas should do well.

Perry Billinghurst is slated for the position of custodian of the nets, while defence will comprise the two veterans, "Pick" Pascoe and "Moose" Watts. Hugh Stirling, of gridiron fame, is likely to be relief player for this position. The new men will include M. C. Sando, K. A. Moyer and C. M. Hutchinson. Sando and Hutchinson are from London, while Moyer played with Caledonia. Others on the team will be "Snapper" Binns, Joe Evans and "Dutch" Stephens.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

While the Toronto Marlboros-Smith's Falls play off in Peterborough does not really come under the usual heading of these articles the game was one of the most sensational ever played in Peterborough and as we have been considering some of the features of the 1905 season in the last two or three stories it is fitting that something should be said of this historic clash.

The Marlboros and Smith's Falls teams had hooked up in a hectic series and it was finally necessary for the O.H.A. to order a sudden death game in Peterborough on March 7 to decide the issue. The game caused great excitement locally and throughout the province. Both teams arrived in town the night before the game and practised in Brock street rink while next day their supporters came by special train, 225 arriving from Smith's Falls in the afternoon while the Toronto special in the evening brought twice that number. The rink was crowded when the Queen City gang arrived but the Toronto fans succeeded in forcing a door at the west side of the rink and swarmed through to the ice and the game could not get under way until somehow or other the Marlboro rooters were packed in somewhere.

Peterborough fans were particularly interested in the Marlboros inasmuch as Harold Armstrong, former Peterborough star and Bruce Ridpath, well known Lakefield boy were on the Dukes' line up. But the Easterners did not lack for supporters. Their team included the famous goaler, Percy Lesueur, one of the best net guardians of all times and Harry Smith of the celebrated Ottawa hockey family of that name and a great marksman on the forward line.

Early in the game Smith's Falls showing speed and cleverness, forced the issue and they looked like winners at that stage. Fraser put them in front after six minutes' play and twelve minutes after handed Smith a neat pass which the great centre used to the best advantage. Then the Marlboros began to get going. Andrews scored from a scrimmage after two minutes hard going and Ridpath gave Birmingham the pass for the tieing goal before half-time.

In the second half "Pete" Charlton, on an individual rush, put the Marlboros in front and then came the break that decided the issue. Lesueur drew a penalty for slashing and while the great goaler was off Marlboros ran in three goals in quick succession, Ridpath the Lakefield boy getting two of them.

Smith got one counter back on a beautiful rush but it was the last kick for the Easterners, and despite great work by Lesueur on his return to the nets the Dukes scored three more markes to win out 9 to 3. Ridpath scored five of his team's goals while Armstrong was brilliant at all times.

Smith's Falls—Goal, Lesueur; point, Wyld; cover, May; rover, Cowan; centre, Smith; right wing, Fraser; left wing, Serviss.

Referee—James Fraser, Galt.

Art Expert Unearths Genuine Tintoretto

GRAZ, Austria, December 27.—(Associated Press).—While hanging a local art exhibition a large painting depicting the Ascension of the Virgin Mary into Heaven, Dr. Richter Bienenthal, a government art expert, noticed that the huge canvas, which is the property of a local church, bore a double coat of paint.

Dr. Bienenthal removed this outer coating and discovered underneath an old masterpiece by Tintoretto, which has been valued at $500,000. The canvas is thirteen by twelve feet, and Prof. Suida and Prof. Egger of Graz University agreed that there could be no doubt but that the painting was a genuine Tintoretto. The government has ordered complete restoration of the masterpiece.

ATHLETE INJURED IN CAFE BRAWL

Harold Starr, of Ottawa, Struck in Face With Red-hot Poker.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press).—A fight in one of Ottawa's leading Chinese cafes during which Harold Starr, prominent athlete, was branded about the face and body with a red-hot poker, resulted in the issuance of three police warrants late yesterday. The warrants charged Harry Woo, Chinese cook, who is alleged to have wielded the heated poker, with causing grievous bodily harm; Arthur Tabor, another prominent athlete who is reported to have precipitated the fracas, with disorderly conduct, and Starr also with disorderly conduct.

According to the police report the miniature war broke out last Saturday night while Starr was attempting to pacify Tabor and persuade him to leave the restaurant after the Chinese proprietor and a number of his waiters had refused to serve Tabor. Besides the poker and the liberal appliance of fists, sugar bowls, sauce bottles, pepper and salt shakers, chairs, clothes trees and in fact every movable object in the restaurant were used as weapons by the combatants. The authorities describe the affair as the most serious fracas of its kind ever to have occurred in the capital.

Serious Affair.

Starr's esimate is that more than a score of Chinese took part in the fight. He suffered three long burns across the left cheek, while his neck chin and legs were also branded when the heated stove poker was brought into play.

Feeling in the capital is running high and the cafe in which the fight took place as well as other Chinese eating houses in the city are under special police guard for fear of reprisals. Starr is a favorite among the sporting public, having gained himself a berth of prominence as an amateur hockey, baseball and rugby player. He captained the Ottawa Senator Club of the Inter-Provincial Rugby Union last season.

As Starr, Tabor and Woo are confined with their injuries, a date for the police court hearing of the unusual affairs has not been set. Meanwhile all three are at liberty on their own cognizance.

LEWIS PRIZE WON BY E. J. THORNTON

J. A. Dewart Gets Second and Miss Helen Courneyea Third.

Around the middle of December, James Lewis, of the Lewis Barber and Beauty Parlors, organized a contest to which all could enter, except the members of the staff. All persons having work done from December 15 till December 24, of 40c or over, were entitled to a ballot, on which they wrote their name and address. After doing so, they deposited the ballot in the box put there for that purpose.

The contest closed on Christmas Eve and the ballots were then mixed in a large five-quart pail by Mayor Roland Denne, after which he drew the three lucky winners, as follows:

1st prize—E. I. Thornton, 583 Harvey Street, who is entitled to a $7.50 permanent wave or $5.00 in gold.

2nd prize—J. A. Dewart, 314 Pearl Avenue, who is entitled to $3.00 in work.

3rd prize—Miss Helen Courneyea, 346 Aylmer Street, who is entitled to one bottle of Lewis' hair and scalp treatment.

BRITISH PLANES CARRY FOREIGNERS

King Amanullah, who had been there, had now returned to Kabul.

Communication Unorganized.

Stories of the foreigners who reached Peshawar from the Afghan Capital might shed light on the situation but no such stories have been received in London yet. Peshawar has a population of about 105,000, but most of the people are natives and it seems that there is no regular news service in the district organized along western lines.

BERLIN, Dec 27.— (Canadian Press.)—The foreign office was advised to-day by the German Minister at Kabul that evacuation of foreign women from the various legations there resulted from a decision of the diplomatic corps. In view of the uncertainty of the situation and an offer of the British and Russians to transport any desiring to leave by air, the corps decided that the women had better go while the going was possible. Those who remained behind were admonished that they were doing it on their own responsibility.

Of the German colony numbering fifty in Afghanistan nine women left.

Railroad Train Strikes Automobile On a Chicago Grade Crossing.

TWO LOCOMOTIVES.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press.)—Six persons were killed early to-day when a Soo line train struck an automobile at a grade crossing in Oak Park.

The automobile, carrying seven passengers, had stopped as one train sped by, and then had gone ahead, directly into the path of the other.

The dead were: Henry Olsen (drover), Berwyn, Ills., Mrs. Henry Olsen, Halvor Olsen, Mrs. Halvor Olsen, their son, Arnold, and an 11 year old daughter.

RAILWAYS WILL USE STEEL TIES

British Companies Plan To Substitute Steel For Wooden Sleepers.

HINDER CANADIAN TRADE.

LONDON, England, Dec. 27 (Special to The Examiner, by Henry Somerville).—Canada on an average sells $400,000 worth of timber railway ties yearly to Britain and this will be a great loss to Canada if Britain finds herself able, as she hopes, to substitute steel for wooden sleepers on all her railways. The experimental steel sleepers have been used for two years on 35 miles of line between London and Portsmouth covered by fastest expresses, and they have been so successful that the Southern Railway has just ordered 70,000 steel sleepers. A steel sleeper complete with chair, costs under $4, and one ton of steel makes 14 sleepers. The railway company has been impelled to try steel sleepers because the wooden ones have been steadily advancing in price.

There is no appreciable difference in the price at present between wood and steel, but the steel sleepers are expected to have a life of thirty years as against twenty years for wood. There is wide interest in the question because the annual consumption of sleepers in Britain is 4,000,000 and if home-produced steel can supersede imported timber it will benefit the British steel industry, which is sorely in need of help.

Unseasonable Weather Hinders Winter Sports

The weather man's job is a thankless one. Despite the spring-like weather that he has been providing, there are those in Peterborough who prefer more seasonable weather—notably the places of business where cold weather means increased business.

Anyone passing or going into places where such work is done, will note large numbers of skating outfits left in so that the skates may be sharpened. These are not likely to be called for until a cold spell provides ice for their use. Since this work is not paid for until the skates are required, many Peterborough sports firms are suffering, to say nothing of the coal dealers and the clothiers. They agreed that here was another argument in favor of an artificial ice rink in Peterborough.

RICHARDSON MAY LEAD AUSTRALIANS

Team Which Will Represent Australia in Third Match Announced.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 27 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's).—The team which will represent Australia in the third cricket test match with England which opens here on Saturday, was announced to-day as follows:

J. S. Ryder, W. M. Woodfull, J. Blackie, A'Beckett, Victoria; A. Kippax, D. Bradman, W. A. Oldfield, New South Wales; R. Oxenham, Queensland; V. Richardson, C. Grimmett, South Australia; J. T. E. Andrews, New South Wales.

The captain of the team will be chosen to-morrow.

J. S. Ryder led the Australian team in the first two tests which Australia lost. The name of Victor Richardson has been mentioned as his successor.

Newcomers on the team are Oxenham, who was considered for the first test match, but was not fielded, and A'Beckett. Oxenham is a wily bowler, likely to come off on a bad wicket, while A'Beckett is a highly thought-of all-rounder. Andrews is the best silly point or silly mid-on in Australia. He was provisionally chosen for the second test at Sydney. The absence of the name of R. H. Ponsford, noted batsman, indicates that this great player has not yet recovered from the broken finger he received at Sydney.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

TO-NIGHT CAPITOL PATRONS WILL BE INTRODUCED TO EDDIE JACKSON, THE POPULAR RADIO TENOR WHO IS COMING TO THIS POPULAR THEATER FOR A STAY OF SEVERAL WEEKS. BEBE DANIELS IN "TAKE ME HOME" HER NEWEST COMEDY WILL BE THE SCREEN FEATURE.

An entertainer being engaged for several weeks is something new in Peterborough, but Eddie Jackson, the radio tenor who opens this engagement at the Capitol to-day is different from the usual entertainer, he is known as the man with 1,000 songs, and the writer believes that he will become a popular fixture at the Capitol for some considerable time.

Bebe Daniels, in her latest Paramount starring picture "Take Me Home", essays the role of a chorus girl. In preparation for this part it was necessary for Miss Daniels to perform all the dancing, bending, twirling, hand-stunts and nip-ups which are an every day requirement in the life of a chorine.

Miss Daniels was instructed in this work under the direction of Fanchon, noted dance director of the West Coast stage presentation team, Fanchon and Marco. Her preparation work was fully the most arduous the star has been called upon to do in many months of picture making.

After a siege of training her instructor pronounced her adept at the art, and many days of scene taking followed. These scenes were filmed on the stage of the famous Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles, under the direction of Marshall Neilan, noted film director.

Her part as Peggy Lane is as full of action as the Bebe Daniels' roles in the past, and in addition has a strong undercurrent of romance and dramatic incident. The star has Neil Hamilton for her leading man, with Lilyan Tashman and Joe Brown, famed stage comedian, in the supporting cast.

AT THE REGENT.

For color, action and highly dramatic situations few pictures that have come to the Regent Theatre can surpass "Coney Island," which opens to-night. Ralph Ince, the director, has brought to the screen a gripping story of the joys and sorrows that beset the concessionnaires, ticket sellers and fun makers of the world's greatest amusement park. Like the sorrows that lurk behind the funny mask of the clown, these people whose business it is to entertain the public have their tragedies. "Coney Island" holds up the mirror to this strata of life.

A superb cast delineates the principal characters in this FBO production which thrilled a capacity audience last night at the Regent theatre. Lois Wilson, as the pretty ticket seller. Lucila Mendez, the exotic cabaret dancer, Rudolph Cameron, young and worth millions, Eugenie Strong and William Irving give characterizations that are outstanding in effectiveness.

There is not a dull moment in "Coney Island," which tells the story of the love of a young roller coaster lessee for his pretty ticket seller, and his struggles to get enough money together to get out of the clutches of the financial baron of the amusement park. The Fourth of July, a gala day at the park, will tell whether or not he wins his girl and the ownership of the concession.

In the meantime a young New York society man falls for the ticket girl and accepts work in the motor room of the roller coaster in order to win her. Complications arise through the interest of a cabaret dancer for this young man. She however helps quell a panic, started by the henchmen of the baron, and the story ends happily for all concerned.

"Coney Island" was directed with a definite touch for realism. The acting of the principals make it particularly vivid and the producing company has given it an investiture that makes it a picture one must not miss. It will be shown starting to-day.

TO ALLOCATE NEW CHANNELS

Radio Conference is Called For Ottawa To Discuss Wave Lengths.

REACH AGREEMENT.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 27.—(By the Canadian Press).—Resumption of the Short Wave Radio Conference in Ottawa on January 9, next, was announced this morning by the Department of Marine. It will be attended by representatives of the United States, Mexico, Cuba, and Newfoundland.

This conference met in Washington in August last to discuss the allocation of short wave channels, but no conclusion was reached then.

With reference to press despatches to the effect that the Federal Radio Commision of the United States, had allocated 551 of available 635 short wave channels, the marine department, in the absence of official information, declined to make any statement beyond observing that, of the 639 channels in this particular band, two thirds are authorized, under the International Convention, for ship-to-shore, aircraft, amateur and other common services. It was also stated that the main purpose of the forthcoming conference will be to endeavor to reach an agreement in regard to division of the remaining channels which are available.

It is pointed out that, of the two hundred channels suitable for fixed broadcasting, 83 were left unallocated by the United States Commission. It is understood that final decision with regard to the 200 channels will await the result of the conference next month. It was explained that the 551 channels allocated by the United States commission are available for the use of mariners and lake services throughout the continent and that their use is not exclusive to the United States.

primarily interested here are those of National Revenue, Justice, Marine and External Affairs. It is under the direction of the Department of National Revenue that clearances are granted or withheld from vessels or vehicles engaged in the international traffic. As it has been suggested that the United States delegation will request that in future clearances be refused to vessels or vehicles engaged in the transport of liquor across the international line, the National Revenue Department is vitally interested in the conference.

A feature of the liquor traffic, in which Canada has a ver ydirect and vital interest, is the question of the return cargo. It has been alleged that many of the vehicles which move south with liquor return north with silks and cigarettes, which fail to contribute to the treasury of the Dominion. During the sittings of the Royal Commission on Customs, the very large proportions which cigarette smuggling had attained, were revealed. It was also contended that a proportion of the Canadian liquor cleared for the United States was "short circuited" into Canada.

Refusal of Clearance.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 27. — When the anti-smuggling conference meets in Ottawa in January, it is practically certain that the United States delegation will ask that clearances of vessels containing liquor, which is probably destined for the United States, be refused by the Canadian government. This country also will work for a recognition of the principle that offences against the Volstead Act should be made extraditable offences.

At present several score Canadians are under indictment in the United States courts on charges of conspiracy to break the Volstead Act. They cannot be prosecuted until they come to the United States. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Seymour Lowman, who has charge in his department of Prohibition, Customs and Coastguard, denies that it is his aim to get an extradition clause into the treaty, and then to have it made retroactive so as to include Canadians already indicted under the prohibition laws.

He points out that the indictments were necessary as part of the general prosecution begun some weeks ago of people on both sides of the line engaged in smuggling liquor. When the Special Commission of Customs turned in its report all the persons named in it were indicted as a matter of course.

The United States delegation to Ottawa will include Mr. Lowman, Dr. George Doran, Commissionar of Prohibition, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General and H. R. Vallance, Solicitor for the Department of State.

DAILY READING

sow farrowed; so sure was the house of Ho-ti to be in a blaze, and Ho-ti himself, which was the more remarkable, instead of chastising his son, seemed to grow more indulgent to him than ever. At length they were watched, the terrible mystery discovered, and father and son summoned to take their trial in Pekin, then an inconsiderable assize town. Evidence was given, the obnoxious food itself produced in court, and verdict about to be pronounced, when the foreman of the jury begged that some of the burnt pig, of which the curprits stood accused, might be handed into the box. He handled it and they all handled it, and burning their fingers, as Bo-ho and his father had done before them, and nature prompting to each of them the same remedy, against the face of all the facts and the clearest charge which judge had ever given,—to the surprise of the whole court, townsfolk, strangers, reporters, and all present,—without leaving the box, of any or any manner of consultation whatever, they brought in a simultaneous verdict of Not Guilty.

The judge, who was a shrewd fellow, winked at the manifest iniquity of the decision, and when the court was dismissed, went privily and bought up all the pigs that could be had for love or money. In a few days his lordship's town house was observed to be on fire. The thing took wing and now there was nothing to be seen but fires in every direction.. Fuel and pigs grew enormously dear all over the district. The insurance offices one and all shut up shop. People built slighter and slighter every day, until it was feared that the very science of architecture would in no long time be lost to the world. Thus this custom of firing houses continued, till in process of time, says my manuscript, a sage arose, like our Locke, who made a discovery that the flesh of swine, or indeed of any other animal, might be cooked (burnt, as they called it) without the necessity of consuming a whole house to dress it.

Then first began the rude form of a gridiron. Roasting by the string or spit came in a century or two later. I forget in whose dynasty. But such slow degrees, concludes the manuscript, do the most useful, and seemingly the most obvious, arts make their way among mankind.

Without placing too implict faith in the account above given, it must be agreed that if a worthy pretext for so dangerous an exepriment as setting houses on fire (especially in these days) could be assigned in favor of any culinary object, that pretext and excuse might be found in Roast Pig.

Of all the delicacies in the whole mundus edibilis, I will maintain it to be the most delicate—princeps obsoniorum.

I speak not of your grown porkers —things between pig and pork—those hobbledehoys—but a young and tender suckling—under a moon old—guiltless as yet of the sty, with no original speck of the amor immunlitioe, the hereditary falling of the first parent, yet manifest—his voice as yet not broken, but something between a childish treble and a grumble—the mild forerunner of proeludium of a grunt.

He must be roasted. I am not ignorant that our ancestors ate them seethed, or boiled; but what a sacrifice of the exterior tegument!

There is no flavor comparable, I will contend, to that of the crisp, tawny, well-watched, not over-roasted, crackling, as it is well called; the very teeth are invited to their share of the pleasure at this banquet in overcoming the coy, brittle resistance, with the adhesive oleaginous. O call it not fat! but an indefinable sweetness growing up to it—the tender blossoming of fat—fat cropped in the bud—taken in the shoot, in the first innocence, the cream and quintessence of the child pig's yet pure food, the lean, no lean, but a kind of animal manna, or rather fat and lean (if it must be so) so blended or running into each other, that both together make but one ambrosian result or common substance.

DOCTORS HAVE CONFIDENCE

Cambridge and their dolls at which there was much jollity.

The younger members of the Royal family are moving about freely now that there is decreased anxiety regarding the King's illness.

The King's sons are making plans for as much hunting as possible and the Prince of Wales has decided to make his Lenton Grove Farm in Nottingham his hunting headquarters until February. He will hunt with the Belvoir Hounds from Colston Basset on Saturday.

The Duke of Gloucester plans to hunt with the Quorn Hounds from Queniborough tomorrow.

The Duke and Duchess of York arrived at Naseby Hall, their hunting box in the Pytchley country, last night, and the Duke will hunt with the Pytchley Hounds.

Not Out of Danger

The Physicians have not yet been able to announce that the king is out of danger as had been hoped, but their medical bulletin last night again tells of "slow progress" toward recovery.

Lord Dawson of Penn, Sir Stanley Hewett and Sir Hugh Rigby were only in consultation for 45 minutes this evening, and all three left immediately after the bulletin was posted.

Sir Stanley dined out but returned to Buckingham Palace later to spend the night near his patient, as he has for some weeks.

This announcement was taken favorably by the public in connection with last night's statement by the physicians, that His Majesty was maintaining his slow progress and no further bulletin would be issued until to-night.

Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, the King's phinicipal physicians, with Sir Hugh Rigby, the noted surgeon, held their usual morninb consultation which this time lasted for more than two hours. It was understood that they would return to the palace later in the day.

Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, the King's principal Palace again this afternoon and were joined in consultation by Dr. J. E. H. Whitby, bacteriologist, who has been a consultant several times during the King's illness.

Dr. Whitby remained in the palace an hour, and shortly after he left renewed assurance was given in official quarters that there was no change in the King's condition.

Cattle Trade Dull On Livestock Exchange

TORONTO, Ont. Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press.)— The closing trade on the Toronto Livestock Exchange was on a small supply. The calf market was steady, while hogs were selling firm at $9.75 f.o.b. for selects or $10.75 off car. A few good lambs brought $13.00 per cwt.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

NEWBEC.

From a northern source we learn that the Newbec shaft has reached a depth of close to 200 feet. Contrary to previous reports no lateral work is being carried out at the 125, but the last five rounds taken out of the shaft have shown fairly heavy mineralization with streaks of copper. Drilling at this point was previously carried only to a depth of 100 feet and consequently conditions now found are new, and lead the management to believe ore of importance may be encountered at this point. We understand no lateral work will be started until the 250 foot level is reached.

LARTIC.

Shaft sinking at this Newbec subsidiary is reported to have reached a depth of around 220 feet and in addition to this some diamond drilling is being carried out. Indications to date are reported to be decidedly encouraging.

ARNO.

Good progress is reported in dewatering the shaft and workings at the Coxheath property of Arno Mines. Eight diamond drill holes were put down during the autumn months and much information was derived from this work. Many lenses of ore were encountered but drilling was suspended due to the difficulty met in losing cores. When dewatering is completed, exhaustive sampling of the old workings will be done, and from this information together with drilling information it is expected intensive exploration work will be carried out. It is officially reported that 50,000 tons of $20 ore is already broken in the workings now being dewatered. The treasury of the company is reported to be in fairly good condition and more than 400,000 shares remain available for further financing.

DOME.

While no official information has been given, or likely to be given for some time, we are informed that development of a hightly important character continues to be had in the north orebody of Dome, in the greenstone formation. The situation at this property has certainly taken a decided change for the better during the past few months

NOBLE FIVE.

Officials of the Noble Five are reported as being highly pleased with the recent important discovery at that property known as the Deadman strike. Noble Five is now being rated in western mining circles as one of the richest producing properties in British Columbia. The general manager is reported as stating that the Deadman strike is of particular significance because it provides important information for the location of ore bodies in other parts of the mine.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

Reports from Sudbury arriving in the city are to the effect that some very important ore has been encountered on the 1,200-foot level of the International Nickel Company's Frood property. The importance of this will be readily understood when it is considered that this is a good indication that the ore is continuous from the 1,200-foot horizon to the 2,800-foot level.

The Capital Rouyn management, it is understood, have decided to sink a shaft on the company's property in the Quebec field.

Western advices state that Kootenay Florence is continuing drifting in ore over four to five feet in width. Preparations are now being made to advance the tunnel with two machine drills on two shifts.

Drilling on the property of the Chibougamau Prospectors, in the newly found Chibougamau field, is said to be yielding important results. Officials are going in by aeroplane early this week for an inspection. Directors now state that it is planned to continue diamond drilling throughout the winter months. Two drills have been working on the Merrill Island group for some two weeks now and the cores are to be brought out for assay.

Optimism In Zinc Industry

Commenting upon the world zinc situation as of December 1, the Honorary foreign correspondent of the American Zinc Institute says:

"Optimism as to a successful outcome of the negotiations for an international agreement or understanding between producers has been instrumental in reviving sentiment and re-creating that measure of confidence which has been so sadly wanting all the year.

"Speculators had been so long absent from the zinc market that their reappearance as buyers, coupled with general reluctance amongst smelters to sell freely, conspired to make this section of the London Metal Echange particularly active in November. The effect was to lift the quotation from £23 16s 3d November 1 to £26 7s 6d on November 30, with corresponding gain of £2 7s 6d a ton in the three months' position.

"Probably this advance in the selling price has fully discounted the effect of any international agreement, for the time being at any rate. Consequently, we are inclined to expect the market to come back a bit and perhaps fluctuate either side of £26. That indeed was the price idea of sponsors of the cartel at its birth, and we have no reason to believe that their views have undergone any change. Assuming that selling quotation was stabilized at that figure for a period during which the world zinc industry could be rationalized by the moderate output curtailment necessary, when the way would be paved for stability at a higher price level.

"A £26 selling quotation for two or three months would be greatly welcomed by the majority of small producers as a precurser to better things. In only one month this year has zinc averaged over £26. That was in January. The next five months averaged only £26 9s 8d while during the following five months the average price was no better than £24 12s 6d. We estimate the mean average of G. O. B. zinc in London for 1928 at £26 4s 3d, a figure which all will agree as being below the intrinsic value of the metal especially having regard to the fact that the average price in 1927 was £28 9s 11d and in 1926 £34 2s 0d.

"Anyhow, the beneficiation to producers has come at an opportune moment and the industry will be able to look forward to the new year with a greater degree of confidence than when 1928 was ushered in."

PETERBORO GAS PLANT

This property consists of a gas manufacturing plant and distribution system.

The plant manufactures water gas enriched with light oil and distributes the same at high pressure to district governors where the pressure is reduced for local consumption.

The plant consists of two five-foot Merrifield Pearson water gas sets with the necessary washing and scrubbing equipment, station meter, purifiers, governors, blowers and other auxiliary equipment. One set was installed in 1896 and the other in 1906.

There are two gas holders of 150,000 and 300,000 cubic feet capacity respectively.

SCIENTISTS ARE IN CONVENTION

our earth is a molten furnace and that the ice field rotted away. The last bit was the only part I really understood, it did sound reasonable.

"After the ponderous address there came a 'smoker' in a skeleton-infested room upstairs. It was an impressive gathering. I, for one, never before floundered around in such a vast ocean of brains. I never before saw so many wise-looking men with spectacles, nor in 'years so many whiskers steeped in erudition.'

"I felt like a little child wandering through a valley, celebrities and scholars towering above and about me like mountain peaks, on every hand, and everybody talked either about paleontology or bastlas or asthenolits or super organiziations of the milky way.

"But later in the evening came a thaw. The ladies' reception committee, the members who are the real Christian Scientists, provided refreshments and cigars and cigarettes by the thousand. These latter were stacked, in wide open boxes on three separate tables at different parts of this glass cased graveyard of dead animals of long ago. And as I watched the savants cleaning up on sandwiches and cake and doughnuts, I began to find my sea legs. When nine-tenths of them fell on the noxious weeds I breathed freely for the first time. And when I observed a few of them quietly "snitch" a cigar or two and stow them away for future reference, I began to think of joining up with this human intelligencia.

Tells of Interview.

"My little interview which Prof. Willis granted me, was not a happy one. I was much interested in him as the son of N. P. Willis, the famous American writer of 50 years ago. But I soon found that his distinguished son prefers to live in the present and its dignitaries. And most unhappily I asked Dr. Willis if geology really did any good?

"My idea was that this science was reminiscent of historical alone and what I really meant to ask was as to whether or not geology could make good crops or stave off an earthquake.

"Prof. Willis did not take it that way. He looked at me more in anger than in sorrow, and replied that if there had been no geology there would be no steel or iron, no copper and no gold. At which I immediately recanted in the name of the last two alone, because of necessities not necessary here to define. Then the professor and I talked about the $25,000 prohibition prize just won by Chester Mills, and everything went all right.

"After spending the whole evening with the savants and talking to many I really came to admire and respect these scientists. You come to feel, and it is a comforting feeling, that here are a lot of men who either know, or else jolly well know, that they don't know and that they never will.

IN POLICE COURT

Levern Killingbeck and Howard Innis were each sentenced to four days in jail, while David Sullivan and John J. O'Brien, both hailing from the vicinity of Kingston, were ordered to get out of the city. They protested that they had not been guilty of vagrancy and had been looking for work here. Angus Glover, of Peterborough was before the magistrate and his case was adjourned for two weeks.

MURRAY'S BODY FOUND IN RUINS OF BARN

KING GEORGE SUFFERS RELAPSE

HIS MAJESTY'S CONDITION IS FRAUGHT WITH ANXIETY AND IS LESS SATISFACTORY

King George Has Lapse Yesterday in His Progress To Recovery.

PASSES FAIR NIGHT.

General Condition As Evidenced in Weight and Strength Shows Little Change.

LONDON, Dec. 28. — (Canadian Press.)— King George has regained some of the ground which he lost yesterday, but his condition was fraught with anxiety and in well-informed circles it was thought that His Majesty still has a hard fight for life ahead of him.

The King's physicians reported this morning that while the condition of the affected lung region had definitely improved, his general condition has not shown the same progress. In other words weakness and a deficency of recuperative power persist to a serious degree.

A lengthy consultation was held this morning by five of the noted specialists who have been attending His Majesty. It was devoted partially to a general review of the progress that he has been making.

More strikingly, however, it was revealed that new measures had been considered and adopted for remedying the situation caused by the failure of the patient to respond in a greater degree to treatment designed to build up his strength and to pull him through to convalescence. There was no hint at this time as to what these measur would be.

It was evident that one difficulty which bothered the doctors had been overcome to some degree as it was stated that the King was taking nourishment more readily.

To-day's bulletin marked the resumption of an official morning statement as for the past Christmas holiday only one bulletin a day, that issued in the evening, had been given out. The bulletin was as follows:

An authoritative statement from Buckingham Palace at midnight last night emphasized the grave condition of King George, following last evening's bulletin indicating that his condition was less satisfactory.

The statement said that the King has had and continues to have a very narrow margin of safety and owing to yesterday's lapse that margin has become smaller.

It was said that while no alarm is felt at present, anxiety still exists.

The statement appreciably deepened disappointment felt earlier in the evening at the less favorable report posted by His Majesty's physicians then.

The position, it was explained, is that there has been a check in his progress, and in the case of a man in such a weakened condition as the King, such a check must of necessity be serious.

King George's physicians issued this bulletin at 11.15 a.m. today:

"The King had a fair night with quieter sleep towards morning. There is less difficulty with taking nourishment and the general state has improved during the last twelve hours."

"At a consultation this morning the progress of the past week was reviewed. During that period there has been a definite improvement in the local condition

"On the other hand the general condition as evidenced by weight and strength does not show the same progress. Measures best adapted for meeting this difficulty were considered and determined."

ERECT PAVILIONS.

The Rainbow Amusement Company of New York City has taken an option on four acres at Bewdley, Rice Lake, with the intention of constructing a modern amusement resort.

The mooted plans, as reported to The Examiner this morning, include all the features of such favorite summer playgrounds as Sunnyside and the old Scarboro Beach, Toronto, and will include fifteen rides, to use a carnival show term, a solid brick hotel to be used the whole year round and inside and outside pavilions, one for winter and the other for summer visitors. It is expected that winter sports will also be encouraged and that a natural rink of large ice surface will be laid out on Rice Lake, and that provisions for skiing and other winter pastimes will be made on a large scale.

The Rainbow Amusement Company, it is stated, are coming into Ontario with their own money, and will not try to sell stock locally in their enterprises, one of which will be at Wasago Beach. They have plenty of capital, and likewise have experience in the summer resort business. Everyone who has seen a carnival show can imagine the area required for pavilions, hotel and rides and the various other attractions that spring up around thriving amusement resorts. Bewdley is a natural playground, and ideally situated for both summer and winter sports. Its expansion during recent years has been in no sense artificial, and its possibilities have been indicated by the crowds of visitors, especially at weekends, during summer months.

EASTON, Md., Dec. 28.—John Sharpe, who lives on the Globe road, several miles from Easton, thought he had laid in his pork supply for the winter on a Saturday when he purchased three large hogs that weighed more than 200 pounds each. BOLIVIA UPHELD BY REV. HADDOW IN FINE ADDRESS Republic Is Graphically Described at Weekly Luncheon of Kiwanis Club.

CONDEMNS REPORTS.

Country Prompted By Desire To Avoid Loss of Territory Says Speaker.

Bolivia, that South American republic so much the topic of present day discussion as a result of its difficulties with a sister republic, Paraguay, was graphically described from a physical and political, commercial and human standpoint at to-day's luncheon of the Peterborough Kiwanis club by one who resided in Peterborough many years ago.

Overcoming an habitual use of the Spanish language which he has been called upon to use in his public-speaking since going to that country more than ten years ago, the Rev. Alex. Haddow spoke in justification of Bolivia's present stand against Paraguay, and reviewed the natural resources, commercial difficulties and customs of its people.

The meeting also marked the entrance into Kiwanis of Lawrie Mitchell, of the Border Transit Company, he being welcomed by President-elect J. J. Turner and President Joseph John, while Miss Rita Swain was heard in splendid voice in "The Slave Song," and "Fiddle and I." Mark Bredin, as booster, was pleased to present the soloist with flowers.

The Speaker

Introduced by C. S. Browne, the Rev. Mr. Haddow prefaced his address proper with a condemnation of press comment which belittled Bolivia's stand against Paraguay, a stand prompted by a desire to avoid further loss such as that which gave Chile an enormous revenue-producing stripe of the Pacific coast in 1779 and 1780, thereby making Bolivia a republic without a sea coast.

Commercial Disadvantages

Bolivia has a population of about three million people, 700,000 of which are associated in blood with the white races, one and a half million full blooded Indians and the remainder a mixed population. Spanish and Indian languages are spoken, according to Mr. Haddow.

But while Bolivia is second in the world in the production of tin, boasts practically every kind of mineral and timber, she, by reason of her geographic position, is forced to extensive importation of the products of her own resources, difficulties of transportation being responsible for high tariffs. "For instance" said Mr. Haddow, "we pay twice as much as you do for half the quantity of Quaker Oats." The speaker went on to describe marriage customs which indicated that the people of Bolivia have enjoyed social advancement and concluded with an instance which indicated a strong sense of justice among them.

The vote of thanks was capably moved by J. A. McKone, while President Joe John was accorded three cheers for his work as the head officer of the club during the past year.

Previous to the dismisal of the meeting, announcement was made of the installation of officers which will take place at next Friday's meeting to be held at 6.30 in the evening; also of the New Year's eve Kiwanis program which will be given in conjunction with the management of the Capitol Theatre from 11.30 until after midnight.

E. H. D. Hall Celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary of Elevation To High Office.

PRESENTED WITH CHAIR.

Rt. Wor. Bro. W. S. Herrington, of Napanee, Delivers Inspiring Address.

The Festival of St. John, the Evangelist was observed in royal style at a banquet held in the Empress Hotel by the three Peterborough Lodges, namely Corinthian Lodge, No. 101, Peterborough Lodge No. 155, and Royal Arthur Lodge, No. 523.

The feature of the evening was the presentation of a beautiful chair to Rt. Wor. Bro. E. H. D. Hall, who last night celebrated his 50th anniversary of his being exalted to the office of Worshipful Master of Corinthian Lodge, being elected in 1878. Only once so far as it is known has this record been equalled, and on that occasion also the honor fell to a Peterborough man, the late Henry Rush.

Over three brethren took part in the proceedings, which were of a nature that will live lopg in the memories of those who were present.

Wor. Bro. Ross L. Dobbin acted as chairman for the evening and in his opening remarks declared that this was the 80th time that Corinthian Lodge and the 65th time that Peterborough Lodge had participated in the celebration that takes place throughout the entire world where Masons are assembled.

The presentation to Mr. Hall was made by Bro. E. A. Peck, M. P., who briefly paid tribute to the character of the recipient, and to the excellence of his service to the Craft throughout his long term of service. The speaker made a touching reference to the late Henry Rush, extolling his virtues and recommending the example set by both men by their lives as a model for those present to imitate.

Beautifully Inscribed.

The chair bore the inscription beautifully engraved on a silver plate: — "Presented to Rt. Wor. Bro. E. H. H. Hall to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of his installation as Worshipful Master of Corinthian Lodge, 1878-1928."

Splendid vocal selections were given by Bros. M. H. Park, J. A. Smith and E. Humpage. The accompanists were Bros. R. J. Devey and F. G. Mann.

Rt. Wor. Bro. W. S. Herrington of Napanee, delivered a most inspiring talk on Canada, and its influence towards the emancipation of the world by its policy of striving to settle any possible differences with other nations by arbitration rather than by arms.

FLOOD SWEEPS OVER BELGIUM

7,000 Acres of Land and Five Villages Are Under Water.

COMES WITHOUT WARNING.

BUSSELS, Belgium Dec. 28—(Canadian Press).—Nearly 7,000 acres of land and five villages near Termonde were under water to-day.

Floods, pushing along by a violent gale and augmented by the waters of the tide rushing inland swept over a section of the low lands. Greater destruction than occurred four weeks ago was threatened.

Just as a month ago the new floods came suddenly and without warning. The work of troops and red cross to prevent a recurrence of the inundation was completely washed away by the torrents. High winds pushed far inland the waters of the swollen Scheldt which met an exceptionally high tide.

A high tide was forecast for tomorrow and this was regarded as making the plight of the people in the threatened district all the sadder. Much suffering and damage has resulted already and losses greater than that of a month ago are predicted.

A pessimistic view was taken of the entire situation in Brussels. The tendency was to regard the curbing of the Scheldt as hopeless.

EVIDENCE IN CASE SUGGESTS ANCIENT ORIENTAL TORTURE

Ottawa Restaurant Worker is Charged With Assaulting Prominent Athlete.

BRANDISHED HOT POKER.

Harold Starr Is Badly Burned About Face, Neck and Hands.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press). — An attack suggestive of ancient Oriental torture was described by witnesses here to-day at the preliminary trial of Harcy Woon, Chinese restaurant worker, charged with assaulting and occasioning grievous bodily harm to Harold Starr, popular Ottawa athlete. The court action is a sequel to a brawl which is alleged to have taken place in a Chinese cafe here last Saturday night.

A number of prosecution witnesses testified that Starr had been attacked by a group of Chinese numbering between fifteen and twenty, when he went to the assistance of a friend who was being forcibly ejected from the cafe by the waiters.

Evidence was given charging that one of the Celestials brandished a hot six-foot poker which was thrust in Starr's face "as if to burn his eyes out." Two medical men who examined the athlete after the fight stated that he had been seriously injured. He had been burned about the face, neck, hands, and lower part of the body, while his scalp had revealed a gash which exposed the skull bone.

When adjournment of the court was ordered a number of prosecution witnesses were still to be heard. The hearing will be continued.

Influenza Sweeps Village Of Wooler

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WOOLER, December 28. — The "flu" epidemic is causing consternation and untold suffering in this village. Nearly every home has some member of the family stricken with it, and in numerous homes every member of the family is ill. Three homes have graduate nurses attending the patients, and in the others the neighbors and friends are making strenuous efforts to nurse the sick.

The local Board of Health has received notice from the Provincial Department to close all public places. As a result all churches, schools and halls have been closed and all social community activities have been postponed indefinitely.

The average life of the grocer in business has been from five to ten years and 95 out of every 100 have failed.

SHOT HERSELF AS SHE WENT TO SURRENDER

Slain Coal Dealer Pursues Woman Until She Takes Her Life.

STORY IS CHECKED.

Husband Claims Suicide Confessed Killing On Account of Another Man.

CANTON, O., December 28. — Instead of clearing up the mysterious killing of Vernard Fearn, coal dealer, of Waco, near here, who was called to the door of his home and shot by a young woman who immediately vanished, the supposed suicide of Mrs. Margaret Heldman has complicated it even more.

Mrs. Heldman, dying of a bullet wound, was rushed in an automobile to the sheriff's office here by her husband, Wilbur Heldman, who said that she had shot herself while he was bringing her in to surrender after she had confessed to him she had killed Fearn.

"I told her she probably would go to the electric chair for it, and she told me to be good to our baby, put a revolver to her head, and pulled the trigger," Heldman said. His wife died at Mercy Hospital without regaining consciousness.

The killing of Fearn was a sensation. A fairly prosperous dealer in coal, he had a reputation as a bit of a devil with the ladies, although he was married and had a daughter 9 years old.

Story of the Killing.

It was dark on the porch of the Fearn home the night that Mrs. Fearn answered a knock at the front door and was told by a woman who stood there if she could speak to Mr. Fearn. Mrs. Fearn invited her in, but the visitor, so muffled her face was indistinguishable, said her business would take but a minute.

Mrs. Fearn, supposing the visitor was a customer who wished to give an order, called her husband. As Fearn approached the open door six shots rang out and he fell dead. Any one of them would have been fatal, Coroner T. C. McQuaite said.

Sheriff Ed. Gibson and his deputies at the end of several days found themselves still on a blind trail Neighbors said that on the night preceding the shooting a tall, dark-complexioned young woman had gone to the Fearn home and found it dark because the occupants had gone to a picture show.

The following night, after the shooting, a young woman answering the same description, appeared at a filling station near the Fearn home and boarded a bus which she left at Canton. The driver later said she was neither excited nor nervous and had asked him if she could make connections for Lorain, O., soon after reaching Canton. The Heldmans had been living in Lorain.

"She Was Gone Two Days"

After their last reconciliation they decided to leave Canton and he got a job in Lorain. They had not moved their household goods and were living in furnished rooms. While he was away from home interviewing prospects in neighboring towns, Heldman says, his wife was away from those rooms for two days. During those days Fearn was killed.

Mrs. Heldman then broke down and confessed to him and said she had been driven to it because Fearn made her life miserable by his pursuit of her.

"I'll not live with a murderess," Heldman says he told his wife. "Put on your hat and coat. I'm going to take you to Canton and turn you over to the sheriff."

"We started out in the car," Heldman's story continues. "We did not talk much. As we got near Canton my wife asked me what I thought would be done with her.

"'They'll probably give you the chair,' I told her.

"She fell silent again. Then she said: 'Be sure to take good care of the baby.'

"'Better than you did,' I replied.

"She Shot Herself."

"Suddenly there was a shot and

Inspector Lougheed Conducts Search In Smouldering Ashes

Thirty Men, Under Personal Direction of Provincial Officer Find Body of Morley Murray Amongst Smouldering Ruins of His Barn.

CORONER DR. ALGER OF STIRLING IS SUMMONED; MAN'S WATCH CANNOT BE FOUND

Missing Man Is Found Within Twenty-five Feet of a Door in South-west Corner of the Building Near the Remains of Fourteen Pigs.

BONARLAW, December 28.—(By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—The body of Morley Murray, missing since Wednesday, was recovered at 1.30 to-day from the still smouldering ruins of his barn. The discovery of the charred trunk was made when thirty men, under personal direction of Provincial Inspector Lougheed, of Belleville, painstakingly searched the ashes. Near the spot were found the remains of the fourteen pigs which were burned in the ruins of the barn, and over all was a thick covering of burned and still burning straw.

It has been definitely decided by the provincial officers that the charred body is that of Murray, but Coroner Dr. Alger has been recalled from Stirling to make a further examination.

With the body were found overall buttons, but the missing man's watch has not been found in the ruins or in the house. When he was overcome, Murray was apparently twenty-five feet from a door, in the south west corner of the barn.

Inquest Opened

On the arrival of the coroner shortly after two o'clock, a jury was impanelled and the inquest opened. Sidney Mason was elected foreman, and the remains were identified by Melville Fitzgerald, a brother-in-law of Murray's, who recognized the clasps of a purse carried by the missing man.

A permit was issued for burial, and the inquest adjourned at ten minutes past three, to re-open on Friday, January 4, in Stirling.

POLICE MAKE SEARCH.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.

BONARLAW, December 28. — The mystery surrounding the fate of Morley Murray, missing since before his barn burned down during Wednesday night and Thursday morning, deepens. At least two theories brought forward to explain how he might have been caught in the flames, have been blasted, and it is now doubted whether anyone will ever solve the puzzle—if, indeed, Murray did fall a victim to the fire.

First discovered yesterday morning, when a neighbor noticed Murray's cattle strayed to a distance from the barn, unusual at that time of day, the mystery of the missing man was communicated to the Provincial Police at Belleville, who took the matter up promptly. About four o'clock in the afternoon there arrived at the Murray farm, Provincial Constable Hamner, Crown Attorney W. B. Donan, both of Belleville, Coroner Dr. Alger, of Stirling, and John Murray, a brother of the missing man. A thorough search of the premises having failed to uncover any clue, an examination of the still smouldering ruins was commenced. After an hour's work, however, a point was reached where the ashes were too hot, and this search had to be postponed.

It was not altogether fruitless, since four bones were recovered and handed to the Coroner for examination. On his return to Stirling, where he had facilities for testing them, Dr. Alger was able almost immediately to pronounce three of them "not human bones." The fourth, however, has not been placed. "It may be a human bone," Dr. Alger told The Examiner.

The search of the barn ruins will go forward to-day, and according to information given The Examiner this morning the authorities will seek especially for the missing man's false teeth, since such a set is the one thing they can depend upon to exist through the flames.

Theories not Tenable.

One of the theories held yesterday by neighbors was that Mr. Murray might have gone to the barn with his lantern, and there met with an accident which upset the lantern, and set the barn on fire, while he was unable to escape, but it was found yesterday that the only lantern known to have been used by the missing man is still in the kitchen of the house.

Outsiders, who knew nothing of Mr. Murray's habits, looked for an explanation in the accidental dropping of a cigarette, or ashes from a pipe, but it has been learned that he did not smoke. The destruction of these, the obvious theories of a tragedy, leave the situation wide open for conjecture, and the police are bound upon a thorough investigation.

Mr. Murray attended a meeting at the school house, which is situated on a corner of his farm, on Wednesday, and, apparently, there closed the deal for the sale of his car. Fred Thain, of the 8th concession of Rawdon, practically the next farm, was the purchaser, and the consideration is understood to have been the services of a pure bred bull next spring. Mr. Thain was interrogated by the crown attorney, and placed the time of the deal at about noon.

At this point there enters one of the conflicting pieces of evidence. Mr. Murray evidently left Mr. Thain about noon, and the fire did not take place until between nine and ten o'clock that night, but the last meal partaken by the missing man was breakfast. It is evident from deductions made by the police, that Mr. Murray had breakfasted off cornflakes and milk, and nothing had been eaten in the house since that time.

Then, too, no one is able to decide what clothes the missing man wore, since all seem to be accounted for with the exception of a pair of boots.

It is the general opinion here that no financial worries could have troubled Mr. Murray. He lived on the homestead which had been in the family for half a century or more, and was apparently well to do. More thorough investigation by the authorities to-day, however, will probably uncover more facts.

Young King Michael Receives So Many Toys His Mother Has To Give Half Of Them Away

BUCHAREST, RUMANIA, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—King Michael received so many toys for Christmas that his mother Princess Helen was obliged to give half of them away to poor children in the hospitals and orphanages. The gift which gave the seven-year-old ruler the greatest delight was a huge model of an aeroplane. This was presented by G. Buzdugan, a member of the regency, in behalf of the regents.

King Michael also received a large model elephant, two polar bears, many other playthings and games and an electric automobile large enough to accommodate him and his dog.

After Queen Mary lit the Christmas tree at Michael's palace the King in the presence of the royal family and members of the regency recited several Christmas verses in Rumanian and then sang a Christmas folk song, called "Kolinde."

MARMORA HONORS HER HEROIC DEAD

Memorial Building Declared Open By Brigadier Anderson

Officers of High Rank and Representing Long Service Pay Tribute to the Men From Marmora Who Laid Down Their Lives in the Great War.

TWENTY-EIGHT NAMES APPEAR ON TABLETS
BUILDING ERECTED AT COST OF $16,000

Reeve Airhart Expresses Thanks To Members of Council and All Others Who Worked To Make the Impressive Memorial Building Possible For the Village of Marmora.

MARMORA, December 28 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Yesterday afternoon one of the most practical memorials in the district was officially declared open to the general public when Brigadier W. B. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., untied the white ribbon which formed the official barrier to the main entrance. The event was carried out with the fullest military honors, and many officers of high rank and representing a great many years of service were present in uniform to take part in the ceremony. The memorial is a modern brick building, occupying a site at the edge of the business section of the village. It is heated with a hot air system, electrically lighted, and with a complete water service throughout. Mounted in a small tower facing diagonally across the intersection, is a large clock. The interior of the building houses the village post office, library, fire hall, ladies' rest room, veterans' room. The post office will occupy the corner portion of the ground floor. On either side of the main entrance are bronze tablets bearing the names of the twenty-eight men from Marmora who gave their lives for their country. The building has been under construction for about four months, and is not yet completed inside. When complete, it will cost approximately $16,000.

The ceremony at the building was brief and the speeches which formed the major portion of the program were delivered in the Town Hall later. G. B. Airhart, Reeve of the village of Marmora, presided at the ceremonies. At the memorial, the service was opened with prayer by Rev. C. J. Beckley, followed by the hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past." Captain C. A. Bleecker, Marmora's oldest officer, called the roll of honor. Two minutes' silence followed. The military honors took the form of three volleys by a firing detail under the command of S. M. Amey of Trenton, and the Last Post and Reveille sounded by Bugler A. Branscombe of Picton. The Marmora Community Band was led by Ross Hunter of Belleville, the original bandmaster of the unit. They supplied the music throughout. Brigadier Anderson, O.C. Military District No. 3, spoke briefly and fittingly at the memorial, reserving his remarks for later in the Town Hall.

People's Thoughts Turn.

The continued program began with the hymn, "Fight the Good Fight." The first address was delivered by the Hon. J. R. Cooke, M.L.A., Mr. Cooke believed that at such gatherings people's thoughts turned to those who had paid the supreme sacrifice on the field of battle. He did not know many of the men personally, but recognized the names as those of many of the old families. These men needed no words from him to add to their honor or fame, he thought. On a former occasion he had been present at a similar service in the Parliament Buildings in Toronto. Only on this occasion, the memorial unveiled had been a bronze table in memory of the colored men who had fallen during the war. There had been many eloquent speakers, and the last to speak had been a colored clergyman from New York, but born in Chatham, Ont. Mr Cooke had always remembered the words of the colored cleric, who had claimed that under the British flag, men of all colors and creeds were free men. They had all died in defence of the British Empire. The second illustration was from an old Scottish book concerning a man named Postie. This person had not been considered very religious, but the act of bravery which caused his death proved that though of a different religious persuasion, he had been a

AFGHAN TROOPS SUCCESSFUL IN REBEL DRIVE

Despatches State Evacuation From Kabul Will Be Made As Soon As Possible.

FEAR FOOD SHORTAGE.

Military Airplanes Unable To Take Off Because of Snow Storm.

LONDON, December 28. Canadian Press. — The Daily Mail to-day printed despatches from Lahore, India, saying that full evacuation of Kabul, Afghanistan, would be made as soon as possible. In the meantime advices reaching Moscow told of further victory of government troops in their drive against the Reds.

The Lahore despatches said that stores in Kabul were fast becoming depleted. Many persons were still awaiting rescue, and no aeroplanes were able to leave because it was snowing.

A German woman was killed when she got in the way of a troop carrying plane which landed from Bagdad and was struck by the propeller. The propeller was broken and the plane laid up, making a second one damaged and unfit for use at the British legation.

The despatches said that the building (presumably the legation building) had been subjected to heavy fire and its rooms were barricaded. Lack of heavy casualties was attributed mainly to the failure of the rebel shells to explode.

Driving Rebels from Capital.

Advices reaching Moscow stated that loyal Afghan troops had occupied Pagman, having driven the rebels 18 miles from the capital toward the Charikar Road. The military hospital on Biripala Heights and a number of villages around Kabul were destroyed by the insurgents.

Evacuation Proving Big Task.

A despatch from Peshawar, India, to the Daily Express to-day said that evacuation of Kabul was proving a greater task than had been expected at first. There were still more than 100 persons to leave.

Describing the experiences of British refugees, the correspondent said all houses in the legation compound were evacuated when it was found that they were in the zone of fire between the rebels and the Afghan army. Women and children were placed in one room behind the strongest wall and all openings were barricaded. Here they crouched for hours, as shells hit the building. One shell crashed through the wall and landed in a fire place but fortunately did not explode. Bullets whistled through the legation and one shattered a mirror before which a man was shaving.

SCHOOL BOARD INSURES RIFLES

Policy Issued For Government Rifles Used In Cadet Training.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 28.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Business was soon despatched at the December meeting of the school board held last night in the council chambers. Dr. H. O. Richardson, was present and occupied the chair. Wesley Stephens, secretary-treasurer, was also present. The trustees were, Charles Benor; William Stephens; William Cock; John Jeffs; Dr. H. B. Longmore; George O'Sullivan and James Anderson. James Massie, caretaker of the high school was also present.

After disposing of the minutes of the previous meeting, the matter of insurance was discussed at some length. This was following the report of the committee who had been appointed to check over the policies. Certain changes were recommended by the board and left in the hands of the finance committee for execution. A special insurance policy for the government rifles used in cadet training was also favored and it was desired that the cadet money be placed in a separate account in the bank. The resignation of Wesley Stephens as secretary was not accepted since it is possible that he may return to town as a permanent citizen again. In the meantime, efforts will be made to have his duties properly discharged. After the accounts had been passed the School Board adjourned.

YOUTHFUL BANDITS SHOOT DRUGGIST

Nervousness of One of Young Gunmen Causes Gun To Discharge.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—S. Digby Poyntz, 65, pioneer druggist of Winnipeg, is dead and police are searching for two youthful bandits responsible for his death during an attempted holdup at the Poyntz Drug Store, corner of Arlington and Westminster Ave., last night.

The nervousness of one of the youthful gunmen brought death to Poyntz. Entering the store at 11.10 o'clock, the youths approached the counter and ordered the druggist to "stick 'em up." Before the aged man could comply with the order, a gun discharged and the druggist slumped to the floor, fatally wounded.

The shooting culminates a series of corner store hold-ups during the past month. Small corner drug stores were generally the object of the bandits.

WESTWOOD PUBLIC SCHOOL

(Examiner Correspondence)

WESTWOOD, Dec. 28.—Westwood public school held its Christmas concert in the Town Hall on Friday evening. Rev. Mr. McCleary, minister of the Presbyterian church, was chairman. A lengthy and splendid program composed of choruses, songs, recitations, monologues and dialogues held the attention of a large audience. The children merited the hearty applause they were given, while several numbers given by the adults were well received. Santa Claus arrived in good time and distributed gifts and candles to the children.

ENDS COLD QUICK WAY DOCTORS NOW ADVISE

Tempting Taste! Instant Relief —Then Cold Just Disappears When Treated This Way

No longer is it necessary for colds to cause needless misery or risk of pneumonia. For doctors are now advising a method that has given quick, sure relief—not only in extreme hospital cases, but in home use among vast numbers in Peterborough and vicinity.

L. H. Phillips, for example, neglected his cold because it was mild at first. A day later congestion started to spread rapidly; he felt "achy" and feared pneumonia. On the advice of his doctor then he started using double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a hospital-certified medication of wild cherry, terpinhydrate, and other ingredients now used by leading clinics.

Relief began instantly. With the first pleasant swallow he felt its comforting, healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest. In a few hours the "feverish," "achy" feeling was relieved; congestion began to clear up, and in another day or so, the doctor reports, all trace of the cold was gone.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. At all druggists 60c, or twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

SHORT COURSE IN AGRICULTURE

Annual Courses To Be Held at Havelock For Four Weeks.

INSTRUCTORS ENGAGED.

At the Peterborough Department of Agriculture office preparations are now going ahead for the annual short courses in agriculture and domestic science, to be held at Havelock from February 4 to March 1, being the regular winter course such as was held at Bridgenorth last year. J. B. Nelson, the Peterborough representative of the Department of Agriculture, in discussing the courses, states that already the two instructors have been engaged. Miss Edith Hopkins, of Lindsay, to have charge of the domestic science, home nursing, and sewing classes, and E. J. Quail, B.SA., of Guelph, to conduct the boys' classes in the handling of stock and other phases of farm work.

An attractive program is being worked out, to run five days each week, while special farmers' days are being arranged for when veterinary science, poultry raising, ploughs and ploughing, plant diseases, seed cleaning, sheep and swine, will be subjects of instruction.

In accordance with custom, the Havelock Council will provide a suitable hall in which the courses will be held, and it is likely that the Orange Hall in that village will be chosen.

Prince Of Wales' Appeal For Relief Brings Avalanche Of Contributions For Miners

LONDON, December 28 (Canadian Press). — The appeal on Christmas night by the Prince of Wales over the radio on behalf of the distressed people of England's mining districts, brought such heavy response that officials handling the Lord Mayor's Relief Fund were yesterday almost buried under an avalanche of mail containing contributions.

The amount probably will not be known until to-day, but one official at the Mansion House guessed that it would be at least 320,000 pounds sterling (about $1,600,000). The two chief gifts were one of $30,000 from Lady Houston and another of $25,000 from Lord Rothermere. The value of these and all other contributions is doubled by the promise of the Government to match the gifts, pound for pound. Several thousand letters remained to be opened when additional sacks of mail, each packed to its limit, were delivered at the Mansion House.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND RODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., December 28 (Canadian Press). — There were no new developments in the local cash grain market yesterday, prices generally being steady with a moderate inquiry for low grade wheat and scalping oats.

The demand for spring and winter wheat flour continued quiet and the values were unchanged.

The trade in all lines of millfeed was dull, and the undertone to the market was easy. Standard grades of rolled oats were steady.

An active business was done in all grades of fresh and storage eggs and values were firm. Receipts were 1,786 cases.

The feature of the butter trade was the improved demand that developed from local buyers for small lots and a moderate amount of business was done at firm prices. Receipts were 12,816 packages.

The cheese market was dull and featureless. Receipts were 52 boxes.

A strong feeling again prevailed in the potato market and prices were advanced three to five cents. Prince Edward Island whites sold at 83c, and Green Mountains at 88c per 90 pounds, in bags. New Brunswick Green Mountains were offered at 60c per 90 pounds, in bulk.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—Corn scored fresh gains in price yesterday, but the gains failed to stand up against a wave of selling to realize profits. In some cases, yesterday's corn market came within 1-8c of equalling the topmost quotations yet this season. Meanwhile, corn receipts in Chicago yesterday lacked volume, and rural offerings to arrive were small, but deliveries here on December contracts were much larger, aggregating 720,000 bushels.

Closing quotations on corn were irregular at ½c net lower to 3-8c advance. Wheat finished ¼c to 3-8c up and provisions unchanged to a rise of 25 cents.

Speculators friendly to higher prices for corn showed much activity at the start, but soon discovered that the market was by no means altogether one-sided. For example, a noticeable feature was that a house with export connections became an aggressive seller of the December delivery, although at the same time a buyer of May, nevertheless December showed throughout the day more relative strength than did May, and went to within five cents of the distant month as against seven cents last week.

Some of yesterday's selling of corn was ascribed to reports of a decrease in the fall pig crop as compared with last year. In this connection, the fact was pointed out that receipts of hogs thus far this year at 20 principal markets have reached a total nearly 60,000,000 larger than for the corresponding period last year, and hog receipts since the first week in November, when new corn began to be fed in substantial quantities, have averaged almost 800,000 bushels a week. Oats were unsettled, duplicating the action of corn. December oats went to a premium over May for the first time this season.

Wheat price declines yesterday were associated a good deal with evidence of selling here for Winnipeg account. Furthermore, bears emphasized that the United States wheat visible supply is the heaviest ever known, 50,000,000 bushels more than last year, and that prices here are above world parity. It was announced also that domestic exports of wheat and flour for five months up to December are 54,000,000 less than last year's corresponding total, whereas the crop is 25,000,000 bushels greater.

Provisions developed firmness as a result of scattered buying, although hog values were mostly 25 cents lower.

EGGS AND PRODUCE

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—There was no undue pressure brought to bear on the butter market yesterday in the way of demand. The present outlet for the staple of the produce market is narrow, and dealers are marking time until after the holidays for developments which will call for market action in due course. With a small volume of business passing on the curb, small offerings of New Zealand were made at a price range of from 41½c to 42c per pound on resale. Ontario butter remained steady at from 41¼c to 41¾c per pound, with undertone looking firmer, market sentiment slowly adjusting itself to the changing situation.

No improvement developed in the local market for cheese, which remains dull and featureless. Dealers are quoting a nominal range of from 21¾ to 31¾c per pound for No. 1, large, colored, paraffined and Government graded.

Under a prolonged spell of mild weather condition, prices of fresh eggs have drifted down to new low levels for the present movement. Stocks are steadily accumulating, and dealers are now quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs, delivered, cases returned; Extras, 48c to 50c per dozen; firsts, 38c to 40c; pullet extras, 35c to 36c; seconds, 30c. Fresh eggs are selling to retailers at approximately 58c to 60c for fresh extras; fresh firsts, 48c to 50c; pullet extras, 44c to 46c; seconds, 34c to 35c.

OPEN BUILDING

true man. Mr. Cooke hoped that the memorial that had been unveiled would serve as an incentive to the young people of to-day to live after these ideals. Canadians had three duties—to their Creator, their homes, and the State. Quoting a famous English journalist, he claimed that in forty years, which was nothing in the life of an Empire, Canada would be in reality what she was potentially to-day.

Homes Well Represented

Col. Roscoe Wanderwater, D.S.O., thought it was difficult at such a time, to say the proper thing in memory of the fallen heroes. His visit to Marmora recalled many fond memories of days gone by. Practically every home in the village had been represented overseas. Hastings county had sent four thousand men which was equal to almost four battalions at war strength. But the men from Hastings had been in all branches of the service and not in one unit. Briefly, the colonel referred to the illness of His Majesty, and reminded the people of the message received in reply to the sympathy which had been cabled from Canada. The reply had shown how sincerely the message had been appreciated. He hoped the hall would set an example to the younger generation of Equality, Justice and Truth.

At this point, Reeve Airhart took the opportunity to express on behalf of the council, his thanks to those who had assisted with the building and with the services. Brigadier Anderson said he had not expected to be called upon to speak, but he reminded the people that the men who were overseas and returned, did not frequently discuss their experiences or relate the circumstances of their life at the front. The war memorials throughout the country would have to perform this task. He suggested that the school teachers, at least once a year, impress on their pupils, just what the real meaning of the memorial was. In closing, General Anderson thanked the people of Marmora for the honor they had conferred upon him by asking him to open their building.

The Rev. Father Keeley said he had been asked to play a very small part in the service and was pleased that it had been so. It was never a pleasure to speak but on this occasion it was a great honor. War, he said, was different now from years ago when it took the form of a hand-to-hand combat. There was more the atmosphere of a great game about it then. The evolving of bombs and shells had completely changed the issue. He looked on the memorial as a slight token of the gratitude of the civilians to those who had served their country. Referring to the illness of His Majesty, Father Keeley said he hoped the King would speedily and fully recover.

Building a Credit

Lieut.-Col. H. J. Smith thought it was impertinent to offer congratulations to the citizens, but asked that he be allowed to recall some of the events leading to the completion of the memorial. He understood that the funds had been raised by a government grant, council grant, by private subscription, and by the women of the town. The building was a credit to the town and those who built it. War was not a pleasant or lovely thing, he claimed, but ugly and repulsive and immoral. It was usually forced on the human race. But the memorial should stand as a lesson to those who view it, and to remind them that men died for Truth, Justice and Liberty. It should instil into the hearts of everyone a desire to follow these ideals and principles. A nation was a group of individuals and if the nation were to be built, the individuals which comprised it must be honest. Charles Hallnan, K.C., M.P., (Hastings County) said it had always been a real pleasure to be of service to Marmora and if they required his assistance on any future occasion, he would be very glad to "step the step of the man." The other speakers had covered the ground he thought, and they were all men worthy of addressing such an audience. He had served under them as a "Common Duck" and knew them well. He thought the community band should be supported since it was one of the best community bands in the district.

James Collins, B.A., being absent, Col. Keeler of Belleville was the next speaker. He said his remarks were entirely impromptu and would be brief. He congratulated the people on their splendid building and brought them the greetings of his regiment, the Argyle Light Infantry from Belleville.

S. B. Wright, reeve of Deloro and manager of the Smelting Plant there deemed it a privilege to speak at such a gathering. He had inquired into the financing of the building and had found where the money had been raised. Deloro, he said, had not been asked to donate. "I'll make you this sporting proposition," he said, "If the township will subscribe, Deloro will come in also." The sporting proposition brought a round a lusty applause.

Price the Boys Paid

Captain, the Rev. T. H. H. Hall of Merrickvale and formerly Rector of Rawdon said he had had the material for his address scalped by the other speakers and there was little left for him to say. He agreed with what had been said regarding the Marmora band and added that he had never heard it play better than it had done to-day. Rev. Hall said that mention had been made of the men who had gone overseas and their spirit. He had known practically all of these men personally, and their spirit as well. He had known that Marmora would erect a memorial and recall how the price had been reckoned in dollars and cents. "Have you ever thought of the price these boys from Marmora paid for the building on the corner?" he asked.

After singing the national anthem, the Rev. A. B. Caldwell, said before pronouncing the benediction, that there was need to assist many of the men who had come back. He related how he had seen a returned soldier's wife and family and belongings thrown out on the street for back rent. It was up to the returned men to make their wants known so they could be assisted when possible, he said.

As a closing feature of the ceremony, the ladies of the memorial committee held a dance in the evening, the bon-ton orchestra from Belleville furnishing the music.

On the platform were reeve Airhart Councillors F. S. Johnston; D. E. Bell and A. H. Connor. Councillor Marrett was absent on account of illness. Others present were, Rev. C. J. Beckely, Father J. D. Keeley; Captain the Rev. T. H. H. Hall, Merrickvale; Lieut.-Col. H. J. Smith, Trenton; A. B. Caldwell; Lieut-Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, D. S.O., Belleville; the Hon. J. R. Cooke M.P.P.; Brigadier W. B. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., officer commanding military district number three; S. B. Wright, Reeve of Deloro; Charles Hannah, Ex-M.P., for Hastings county; Col. Eric Keeler Belleville; Captain Ccott, Belleville; Captain Newell Broad, Madoc, and others.

NO EXCUSE FOR NOT VOTING.

The practice of notifying the municipal electors through the mails as to where they will vote on New Year's Day is being followed again this year, and citizens looking for an excuse to justify the non-use of their franchise will have to seek some other alibi than the old explanation, "I didn't know where I voted."

Postcards have been sent to those on the voters' lists telling them where the particular polling booth they are interested in is to be found, and as the booths are located in the various schools and the city buildings, no difficulty should be experienced by any elector in quickly finding the place where he is entitled to vote.

Under these conditions there is no reason why a large vote should not be registered.

With two important by-laws to be approved or rejected, five aldermen to be elected out of a field of seven, and four members of the Board of Education selected from among eight well qualified aspirants, there is a sufficiently heavy voting program to enlist the interest of the electorate.

Every elector should seek to start the New Year properly as a good citizen by using his franchise in the selection of aldermen and school trustees and in deciding the matters that are before the people in the two by-laws that are being submitted.

THE C.N.R.'s GREAT SHOWING.

Sir Henry Thornton and the Canadian National Railways are pulling into the 1928 terminal under a full head of steam and with a train-load of encouraging statistics.

Canada's Government-owned railways for the eleven months ending Nov. 30 show large increases in gross and net earnings.

The gross earnings amounted to $253,030,877, an increase of over twenty-six million dollars over the same period last year, while the net earnings are over twelve million dollars greater than in the first eleven months of 1927.

The latest reports show that while the gross earnings are steadily mounting, the relative cost of operating the system is diminishing, and this decrease in the operating ratio is particularly gratifying.

An operating profit of $53,549.28 for the first eleven months of 1928 is a most satisfactory showing, upon which not only Sir Henry Thornton and his staff but the people of Canada as a whole are to be congratulated.

The transformation made in the financial condition of the Canadian National lines in recent years seems almost miraculous when the old statistics are recalled.

NOT AN ENCOURAGING SIGN.

The small attendance at the public meeting held on Wednesday night to discuss the two by-laws to be voted on next Tuesday was disappointing in the evidence it afforded of general apathy toward two very important questions.

In spite of the fact that the meeting had been well advertised and a large attendance appealed for, only about one hundred people considered the purchase of the gas plant and the granting of a fixed assessment to a most promising industry of sufficient importance to make it worth while hearing the details discussed.

Such widespread indifference is disheartening.

Surely such matters as these are deserving of more attention and consideration.

The purchase of the gas plant especially is not a proposition to be voted on blindly; it should be the duty of the ratepayers to avail themselves of all possible sources of information so that they will be able to come to an intelligent decision on this decidedly important question.

It may be, of course, that the majority of people have already weighed the matter and made up their minds that the gas purchase proposition is deserving of support, but in any case a large attendance at Wednesday's meeting would have been a much more healthy sign than the meagre audience that turned out to hear the bylaws explained.

Communities which leave the decision as to important matters to a mere handful of people are taking chances that are not justified.

SAFETY MEASURES.

Some of the statistics in regard to motor accidents obtained by the Toronto Bureau of Municipal Research were quoted in these columns yesterday.

The Bureau has been investigating the whole question, rightly impressed with the necessity of concerted action to reduce the toll of lives taken each year in automobile accidents.

It now brings to attention a number of measures which have been suggested or are in actual practice in some jurisdictions, designed to cut down the number of such accidents. They are worth much consideration:

"1. The universal requirement of driving licenses for all operators of cars, whether private or public, granted only after examining and testing applicants on all essential standards of fitness.

"2. The setting up of standards of fitness of driver, to cover (a) familiarity with the rules of the road, (b) physical fitness including good heart, good eyesight and good hearing, quick reaction to sensory stimuli.

"3. The repetition of such tests and examinations at stated intervals.

"4. The requirement of periodical inspection of cars by licensed motor mechanics to establish the mechanical fitness of the car from the standpoint of brakes, lights tires, etc., with penalties for failure to submit to such inspection up to impounding of car for a stated period, such inspection being necessary before the sale of a car and in all cases of accident and before all reinstatements.

"5. In addition to the fines and cancellation of licenses for reckless driving, now provided for in some jurisdictions the confiscation of the car after second offences.

"6. The jailing of those convicted of driving while intoxicated, the cancellation of their driving licenses, and confiscation of their cars for stated periods.

"7. The stressing of 'safety' rather than 'speed' by motor companies in their advertising campaigns.

"8. The supplying of suitably situated and equipped playgrounds for children in cities.

"9. The discouragement or prohibition of so-called 'jay-walking' in urban centres.

"10. The provision of sidewalks along crowded highways.

"11. Continued and continuous education of the public in measures of safety by safety leagues, safety campaigns, motor leagues, the daily and periodical press and the schools.

"12. In view of the fact that 9.37 per cent. of motor fatalities in Canada occurred at level crossings in 1927, the adoption of the following measures and practices:

"(a) The treatment of all railway crossings in the same way as 'stop streets.'

"(b) The setting up of co-operative machinery, including representation of the Dominion Railway Board and of the various provincial departments or boards dealing with municipal affairs, which could call together the interested parties and outline such measures as are deemed necessary to make safe the crossing concerned, and recommend a distribution of the costs between the railways, the municipalities and, in case of through highways, the authorities concerned drawing revenues from gasoline taxation.

"(c) Circularization of all municipalities pointing out that a Dominion railway crossing protection fund exists, and pointing out the benefits that may be derived therefrom.

"(d) The establishment of three-color electric signals, similar in appearance to ordinary city traffic signals, at all level crossings."

BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

The year draws to a close with production and distribution at a high level, and save only in such branches as are affected by the season, the activity of recent months is well maintained. There is little unemployment, wages keep up, note circulation—an excellent barometer of business—is large, mercantile mortality is normal, bank deposits grow, foreign trade enlarges, and commodity prices are fairly stable. In the basic industries—agriculture, newsprint, iron and steel, coal and mineral production—no recession has occurred, despite a decline in prices, particularly of newsprint and grains. Yet the dominant industry agriculture, is thriving with a field crop estimated to have a value of $1,051,000,000 at current market prices, and more newsprint is being produced and sold than ever before. In the eight months to November 30, 264,112,000 bushels of wheat were exported, nearly a hundred million bushels more than in the like period last year, and on the 15th of the present month the visible supply of wheat in Canada was 141,000,000 bushels, or 46,700,000 bushels more than a year ago, figures which imply large employment for transportation companies until another harvest is reaped.

Wholesale houses are experiencing customary quietude, retailers having stocked for present requirements. Textile industries hold up under stress of foreign competition, and have latterly been operating a larger percentage of capacity. Rolling mills and other fabricators of iron and steel continue to be busily employed, with operations expanding, as evidenced by a pig iron production in November of 95,426 tons, or two and a half times greater than in the corresponding month last year, while production of steel ignots and castings last month showed an increase of 34 per cent over November 1927. Orders for railway equipment of various kinds have given new impetus to production of these articles. Prices of iron and its products have been firm with rising tendency.

Christmas trade throughout the Dominion has undoubtedly been adversely affected by the unusually mild weather that has prevailed to date. As a general rule, in the urban districts it has been larger than that of last year, though not up to full expectations, while in the country districts it has been disappointing.

The Port of Montreal closed its most successful season on December 7th with record grain handling, in and out, of 420,000,000 bushels, despite a decrease in the quantity of United States grain passing through the port. Vancouver is on the way to substantial increase of its grain handling, and in the eastern winter ports of Saint John and Halifax a busy season is expected.

The foreign trade of Canada made further expansion in November in both imports and exports, and is now outstripping the monetary value reached at the apex of post-war inflation prices. Imports for the month amounted to $102,966,000, an increase of $8,655,000, and exports to $167,613,000, an increase of $13,895,000 over the corresponding month last year, the favorable balance of trade rising $5,240,000. The notable enlargement in imports continues to be in the item of iron and its products, which had a value of $21,539,000, being $4,792,000 more than in November, 1927, and representing 20 per cent of total imports; while on the export side, grain supplied practically the whole increase. In the elapsed eight months of the fiscal year, aggregate foreign trade has expanded $223,000,000 to the high total of $1,782,528,000, being $318,554,000 in excess of three years ago, in which grain imports and exports have had close correspondence.

Construction work has not abated activity, although a slowing down would not be surprising in view of the extensive operations of the last two or three years. Coal production in Nova Scotia runs ahead of last year and in British Columbia there has been an increase in production of copper, lead and petroleum, while in Ontario that of nickel steadily grows. On the other hand, the value of gold and silver mined has not increased.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

In regard to the "flu" epidemic, the experts advise us to keep cool but not to get cold.

The gas plant proposition can hardly be described as a burning question, in view of the light attendance at Wednesday's meeting.

Municipal candidates are not making lavish promises as to what they are going to do if they should be elected. Such promises anyway are much like New Year's resolutions—easily forgotten.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Saturday, December 29, 1928.

According to astrology this is a day for caution, a time when both benefic and malefic aspects are active.

It is not a favorable sway for women who should be careful in shopping and other activities as they may be easily cheated, delayed or disappointed.

This is not an altogether fortunate wedding day and they who plight troth will do well to avoid all secrets or possible deceptions.

Theatres now may find the planetary government unfriendly in certain ways. The public may be exceedingly critical and capricious.

Actors and actresses may face discouraging conditions at this time which prefaces fine achievements in drama.

In the New Year much artistic activity will be apparent, the seers declare, and musicians, sculptors, and painters will profit.

Mechanical projects should benefit to-day which is supposed to be stimulating to many lines of industry.

The New Year will bring beenfits to workers of every class, it is prognosticated, and farmers certainly will come under a benefic rule.

Danger of early spring floods again is foretold and warning is given to prepare as far as possible against destructive effects.

The evening of this day is read as sinister for love affairs and it is the better scheme to beware of courtship.

There is a threatening sign for certain theatres and especially for moving picture houses. Transition methods may prove costly at this time the seers warn.

Under this rule of the stars there may be increase of deafness. The ears should be protected.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have trouble over some sort of lease or business agreement in the coming year, which should be generally prosperous.

Children born on this day may be wonderfully charming and at the same time serious-minded. These subjects of Capricorn usually are much concerned with love and they are not always fortunate. Love of all that is beautiful in life will be strongly evident.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY YOU DON'T FEEL A WOUND DURING EXCITEMENT

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Football players do not always know when they receive their numerous bruises. They do not feel the hurt at the time because of the intense excitement of the game and because their minds are wholly preoccupied with other things.

Sometimes even a very serious injury may be received in this way. Players are known to have finished the game without knowing that they had sustained broken bones. Similarly, soldiers are wounded in battle and keep on fighting, if at all physically able to do so, without knowing that they are wounded.

The whole attention is concentrated on the one project at hand. There is therefore no room in the consciousness for other things. The whole supply of energy is being used in playing the game or in fighting the battle. A man may be so intent on saving his life from a burning building or from a sinking ship that he does not realize that he is trampling upon women and children.

The reason is simple enough when you stop to analyse it. Any sensory experience must capture the focus of consciousness in order to get itself felt and realized. But when the focus of consciousness is already very much preoccupied with a supreme task, such as making a touchdown or saving one's life, there is no chance for the ordinary stimulus reaching the focus. And failing in that it does not register in consciousness and the man cannot therefore be aware of what has happened to him.

To prove this theory try the simple experiment of extracting a hair from the head of your friend at the exact moment that you strike him a rather hard blow on the arm. He will not feel the hair-pulling and if he does not see you do it he could never be the wiser unless he has so few hairs that itdoes not take divine omnipotence to count them. Our grandfathers used to cure the stomachache by applying a hot poker. It cured the stomachache, all right, but the remedy proved to be worse than the disease.

The main point is that the mind can be completely absorbed only in one thing at any given time. And if it is so preoccupied it can't take notice of the usual sensory experiences and will not be conscious of a hurt received.

Why do you do what you do. Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, enclosing stamped envelope for reply. (Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Fresh Grown Vegetables For Christmas Dinner

One Peterborough family at least had fresh vegetables for Christmas dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, 613 Union Street, having picked fresh parsley from their garden on Christmas morning. When interviewed by The Examiner, Mr. Smith showed a sample of the plant which had a stalk about two and a half inches long.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

XIX—ROUGE TO THE RESCUE

"I could howl!" said the Big Flapper again brokenly, after Hugh had left the Pagets' house to go to a hotel. She sat down forlornly on the stairs. "Doesn't anyone want to howl except me?" she demanded, looking from Biddy to Marna.

"We're not all so silly," the Little Flapper answered with scorn, but her own heart was breaking, and she dared not look at Marna, who had turned quietly away and was going upstairs.

"Put on your hats, you two children," she said evenly, "and we'll go shopping. Dolly, there's nothing like a new hat to heal a broken heart. Come along; I'll treat you each to one."

Dolly sprang to her feet, her grief almost forgotten.

"You darling! How perfectly adorable of you! Some along, Biddy. Hurry!"

Marna went into her room and shut the door.

"He's gone," she said aloud with trembling lips; and then again: "He's gone."

Their only goodbye had been that handshake downstairs.

And in another ten days the width of the sea would be cutting their lives definitely apart. Marna put the thought determinedly from her. With shaking hands she began to dress.

She found herself standing before her open wardrobe. Which coat should she wear? What did it matter? She was no longer dressing to please Hugh. What did anthing matter?

With an effort she pulled herself together.

Silly to give way. If she felt like this now, how would she feel when he had really gone? How would she feel when not all her passionate longing and prayers could bring him back?

The Little Flapper came rapping at the door.

"We're ready, darling."

"So am I. I'm just coming."

But the Little Flapper cried out when she saw her.

"Oh, are you ill? You look so white"

Marna forced a laugh.

"Do I? What nonsense! Wait a moment." She went back to the dressing-table, and found a little box of rouge and a hare's-foot. More often lately than anyone guessed she had to resort to some such make-up in order to hide her pallor.

She smeared a little on her cheeks, rubbing it carefully in, then she powdered lightly over it.

"That better?" she asked, rejoining Biddy.

Biddy looked at her and flushed sensitively.

"It's rouge' isn't it?" she asked, amazed.

Well, and why not?" she queried almost angrily.

"Nothing, darling," said the Little Flapper humbly. "I didn't know you ever used it, that's all."

The last ten days passed in a flash. No sooner was it morning than it was night; no sooner had the week begun that it was ended.

Hubbard dined with the Pagets three times, once at their house and twice at a restaurant, when there were always others in the party, and Marna always had the feeling that even so it was against his will, that if George had not insisted they would not have seen him at all.

Renny Martin had left and gone to stay with some other friends. He was the type of man who always lived in other people's houses.

"But I'm close by" he told Marna meaningly when they parted. "I can come any time you want me."

"I am never likely to want you" Marna had been stung to reply, but he had only laughed.

"Oh, you can never tell' he said easily.

He was with them on one occasion when they dined with Hubbard, and Marna had the feeling that he was there as her jailer, watching her every glance and every movement.

Mrs. Blair often came to the house during that last week.

"Why's the old girl so fond of us all at once?" George Paget asked boyishly. "She never used to chase round so."

"I like her," Marna, answered "She kind."

"Oh, she's kind enough," her husband agreed. "And if you like her it's all right, of course. Doesn't seem to me that she's quite your sort, thought, don'tcherknow?"

"I'm fond of her," Marna said, and spoke truly.

There was something motherly in Mrs. Blair's bluntness; to anyone she liked she could be a sure shield against the world. And her shrewd eyes saw more than Marna suspected. She had suffered sufficiently herself to recognize the signs of suffering in others, and in many little ways she tried to protect Marna and help her, even going so far on one accasion as to warn Paget against Renny Martin.

"Why is that man always hanging round on your heels?" she demanded bluntly.

Paget looked surprised and a little confused.

"D'ye mean Martin?" he asked.

"Of course I do. I don't like the man. He's got crooked eyes."

"I don't like him myself," Paget confessed. "But he's a friend of Marna's."

"Nonsense!" Marna hates him," Mrs. Blair protected bluntly.

Paget dropped his eyeglasses in surprise.

"Hates him! She always agrees if the fellow suggests coming with us anywhere."

"She hates him, all the same."

Paget took some time to digest this fact.

"Marna never hates anyone," he said at last, very solemnly.

Mrs Blair twisted her big dog-collar necklace impatiently.

"If you didn't use that absurd monocle so often you'd see more" she told him severely.

She let the subject drop but her words stayed in his mind.

When he got an opportunity he spoke of it to Marna.

"I'm getting a bit fed up with Martin always on the spot," was his way of beginning the subject.

He could not be sure, but he thought Marna lost color a little.

"He's quite harmless," she said lightly.

"May be harmless," Paget agreed, gaining courage, "but I don't like the chap. Bores me! Got no brains! If you like. I'll give him the tip that we prefer his room to his company, don'tcherknow."

He was sure now that Marna paled, though she turned her face quickly away.

"Don't be such an old silly," she said, trying to laugh. "You can't treat friends like that."

"Is he a friend?" Paget inquired darkly. He had no reason for that exact intonation of voice, but nevertheless he was rather proud of it.

To his amazement, Marna turned on him with angry eyes.

"What do you mean?" she demanded sharply. "If you've got anything against him—"

Good heavens, Marna!" Paget was thunderstruck; he had never seen his wife so upset. "What in the world's the matter? I just made a harmless remark—eh, what? Never meant anything. If you like the fellow, well and good. What's right for you is right for me; you know that, my dear,"

"I do like him" Marna said defiantly.

District Churches

GILMOUR MEMORIAL.

The Christmas service of the Gilmour Memorial Church was held last Sunday, the pastor, Rev. W. S. Edgar, preaching from the text of Luke 2, 18: "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass which the Lord hath made known unto us."

"What a tragedy and pathos are contained in those luminous words of the Christmas tale, 'There was no room in the inn'—probably because some Eastern magnate had commandeered all the rooms for himself and his train. Even to-day, or at least until the British occupation, it was not uncommon in Palestine for the guests to be turned out unceremoniously in order to make way for some grandee and his family to occupy it alone. A distinguished Eastern traveller relates that in 1910 in a town in Palestine he and his companions were denied lodgings in a hotel because a German prince was expected and had taken over all the rooms. This is the way of the undemocratic East. The innkeeper in Bethlehem on that first Christmas night would only be following the usual custom when he denied the poorly clad, travel stained Joseph and his wife, with her drawn face, lodgings in his inn.

"Why do men not weary of hearing the Christmas story retold again and again? Because of its tremendous significance to the life of the human race. This birth means more to us than any other birth that ever was recorded in the history of humanity.

"To get an idea of what Christmas means to the world, we would have to put back into the world, in imagination, all the evils which His coming has banished, and we would have to take from the world all the benefits which His coming has brought. We would have to remove all churches, hospitals, asylums, orphanages, schools, colleges, Sunday Schools, and all kindred institutions working for the uplift of humanity. We would have to repeal those humane laws presently in operation, freedom of religion, and freedom of speech; all these things we owe to Jesus Christ. Then we would have to bring back into our civilized life that hateful slavery which Christianity has abolished, the awful insanitary prisons where captives often rotted to death, the torturing of prisoners, the belief in witchcraft and other degrading superstitions, cruelties to little children, to the aged, and the sick. The world is not yet a heaven, but compared with the world of ages past, it is a paradise. Christmas brings good cheer. It gives the lie to that almost universal fallacy that religion is a dull, insipid dolorous experience, savoring more of the funeral than of the wedding.

"Christmas means civilization. The countries that accepted Christianity are the only really civilized ones; the others are back numbers in this respect. James Chalmers, the heroic missionary whom R. L. Stevenson called 'the Greatheart of the South Seas,' said that after twenty-one years' experience among the savages of the Pacific Islands, he had never found a people or a single man or woman who had been civilized without the Gospel of Christ.

"Christmas means salvation. Christ has brought emancipation from inner bondage. It means love. It was love that brought Jesus from heaven to earth and it is the love of Christ shed abroad in our hearts that overflows at Christmas.

"Christmas means progress. The true progress of the world in the things that really matter dates from the birth of Christ. Ideas that were pregnant with wonderful meaning were let loose upon the earth, both by the angels' message and by the angels' song. These ideas were embodied in the little Babe in the manger and were exemplified in His whole wonderful after life, and have been the secret of the marvellous progress that men have made since.

"Christmas means safety. How safe life is to-day compared with what it was at the time Jesus was born. It is true we have our bandits to-day and our warmongers. But these are simply a few individuals who have broken loose from moral and legal control. But in the days before Christ whole nations were bandits, and preyed upon each other, the weak going to the wall and their people enslaved. But Christ has given us real safety by changing men's ideas; He has inculcated principles of honesty and fair dealing between men and between nations. The world's leading statesmen are searching eagerly just now for a true and lasting basis of peace. It can only be found in the Spirit of Christ. He said, 'Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that persecute you and despitefully use you.' 'Ah,' someone says, 'that's all right as a beautiful ideal, as a sublime sentiment but it is too heavenly for this rough and tumble world.' Our reply to that is that Jesus put it into practice and He means us to do the same, and only when men reach the stage when they are willing to try this remedy will they find the way to peace on earth and goodwill to men.

"Knowing these things we shall be able to rejoice intelligently this Christmas and praise God from our hearts for the great, unspeakable gift of His Son, the immortal Babe of Bethlehem, the Christ of God, and the Savior of the world. May we open our hearts afresh to Him and crown Him King of our lives and Lord and Governor of our being."

Special Christmas music was sung during the service by the church choir, under the leadership of Mrs. James A. Young.

BANDIT KNOCKS OUT THREE.

NEW YORK, Decemebre 28—(Canadian Press. — A watchman was killed apparently by some volatile gas thrown on him, a helper on a motor truck was knocked unconscious with a blow from the butt end of a revolver, and a chauffeur was robbed of $24 by a lone bandit who entered the Guggenheim Laboratories in 202nd street early yesterday.

The body of the watchman, Henry W. Gow, was found on the second floor. Near him was the unconscious form of the helper and the chauffeur who had been bound and gagged.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Noranda

The new No. 4 shaft is now down to a depth of approximately 250 feet and we understand a crosscut has been driven from the No. 3 shaft to the new No. 4 shaft. Drilling continues on the 4th, 5th and 9th levels. We understand the "C" orebody was recently cut by an incline hole at the 700 foot horizon, where values at least equal to those of the "H" body were encountered.

Further strength in Siscoe Wednesday may be attributed to unofficial reports from Amos that more new ore had been cut in diamond drilling below the 500 foot level. The report claimed that more than 50 feet of ore had been cut in the last hole with much of it running above $10 a ton.

Granada

We are informed that the crosscut on the 375 foot level of Granada has intercepted the No. 2 vein and where cut it has a width of 14 feet and is heavily mineralized. Drifting operations are in progress on this same vein at the 500 foot level where it has a width of 8 feet. Channel assaying gave a value of more than $6 over this width. Crosscutting is proceeding to this vein on the 675 but a porphyry intrusion has come in and it is thought possible it may have flattened the vein out slightly, which will necessitate a slightly longer crosscut than was originally expected.

The assay plant is being altered and consequently no assays are at present being run, so that the economic importance of the No. 2 vein on the 375 may not at this time be determined.

Wright-Hargreaves

Regarding the reported new find the 1500 foot horizon of Wright-Hargreaves Wednesday, we may say that since they had this ore on levels above, where in places it was found to be spectacularly rich but erratic, it has been expected they would encounter the same ore at the 1500. If the ore averages $25 as reported, it is a most important development, as better average mill heads may be maintained with less difficulty.

It is also reported that Wright-Hargreaves have drifted on their main vein for 600 feet at the 2000 foot horizon. The average width of drift is 5 feet and the grade is reported as $13. This latter is an important feature in regard to the future of the mine, as it opens up possibilities for further good ore at depth.

Abana

It was learned Wednesday that P. M. Connell had entered into an agreement with Mr. Oke whereby he purchased a block of Abana shares and obtained options on further blocks, in all aggregating 500,000 shares at prices ranging from $3 to $7.50. The option extends over a period of twelve months. It is understood a block of some 60,000 shares was taken up a short time ago and a similar amount is due to be taken up this month. Mr. Connell again expressed his opinion Wednesday that Abana had good possibilities of becoming a large mine but that no estimate of ore reserves should be made until such time as further development has been completed.

The Metal Market

A point of particular interest to Noranda was the advance Wednesday in the price of copper for domestic delivery to 16 ¼cents a pound which is a new high price since 1923. According to producers the advance was due to the exhaustion of available supply at 16 cents a pound. Domestic consumption is at a high level and foreign demand continues on a large scale. No doubt the export price will be advanced to 16½ cents per lb. The feeling of the copper trade appears to be that the upward move in this market will continue, with the probability of 17 cent copper in the near future. This optimism is based on the continued growth of consumption and the scarcity of surplus supplies.

Large Export Surplus Lowers Wheat Values

CHICAGO, Ills., Dec. 28.— (Canadian Press.)—Enlarged estimates of the Argentine exportable surplus of wheat carried wheat prices down early today to the lowest level in more than a month. Corn was also weaker, owing a good deal to increased deliveries on December contracts here. Opening unchanged to 3-8c. off, wheat afterward showed a material setback all around. Corn started unchanged to 5-8c. down, and subsequently underwent general declines. Oats were easy, provisions held steady.

ISSUES SET NEW RECORDS

Market Regains Strength After Early Setback At New York.

RAILS FIRMER.

NEW YORK, December 28. Canadian Press. — The stock market gave an extraordinary demonstration of strength to-day in the face of the greatest credit stringency of the year. Although a temporary sinking spell around midday carried a dozen issues down 2 to 12 points, buying support was quickly provided and the general market headed upward again by early afternoon. Thirty or more issues were marked up 4 to 21 1-2 points, with at least a score o fissues setting new high records for the year.

Call money renewed at 12 per cent., the highest opening rate since Feb., 1920, and held steady at that figure through the morning trading despite the calling of about $35,000,000 in bank loans. Time money held firm around recent high levels.

Bear traders, who sold stocks heavily last week in hope of covering them at profit on the expected reaction coincident with the flurry in money, were forced to bid high to buy back their stocks in to-day's market. National Tea ran up 21 1-2 points on top of an 18 point gain yesterday. International Harvester jumped 14 1-2 points; Burroughs Adding Machine 12 1-2, Radio 12 1-2; Safeway Stores 11 1-4; Wright Aero 10.

Among the many stocks to move into new high ground were Kennecotta and Nevada Copper, Goodrich Rubber, General Electric, Atlantic Refining and Stewart Warner.

Rails moved forward with the industrials on buying influenced by the usually favorable character of most of November earnings reports now being published.

AMULET LEADS MINE MARKET

Firmer Tone Combined With Heavy Trading Features Standard Exchange.

TORONTO, Ont, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press.)— A decidedly stronger tone marked with heavy trading featured the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Gains were numerous while losses were few and only light. Noranda climbed to 64.60, but by noon had dropped to 63.75, a net loss of 25 cents.

Amulet was an outstanding issue and gained 12 points at 3.32 in active trading. Lake Shore followed with a gain of 50 cents to 19.00, Sudbury Basin jumped 20 to 8.35; Teck Hughes 20 to 8.70; Hollinger Consolidated 10 to 8.60, and Dome Mines 10 to 9.75. Bedford gained 4 to 52; Macassa 1 to 25; McDougall 4½ to 53½; Murphy 5 to 60; Sherritt Gordon 5 to 6.45; Wright-Hargreaves 2 to 2.20, and Thompson Cadillac 2 to 30.

Bathurst dropped 1 to 35, and Siscoe 3 to 91. Abana rose 10 to 3.70; Pend Oreille 15 to 9.75; Osisco 3 to 48; Mandy Mines, 2 to 1.24, and Jackson Manion ½ to 25. Central Manitoba went down 1 to 61; Coniarum 5, Tona 15; Hudson Bay 15 to 19.30; Sunlock 10 to 3.50, and Falconbride 10 to 4.90.

ROYAL BANK CLOSES YEAR OF PROGRESS

Total Assets Show Increase of $15,000,000, Largest Ever Reported By Bank.

RECORD EARNINGS.

Business Activity Reflected By Increase of Over $66,000,000 in Commercial Loans.

The Royal Bank of Canada goes steadily ahead making new high records for Canadian banking. The annual statement for the fiscal year to November 30th just published will be received by shareholders as one of the most satisfactory in the history of the bank. Not only are assets at a new high level in the history of Canadian banking, but, what will appeal equally as much to the many shareholders, the profits for the year also constitute a new record among Canadian banking institutions.

From the standpoint of general interest to the public at large, the most satisfactory part of the statement is likely that dealing with the commercial loans in Canada. It has been known that there has been a very large increase in the trade and industry of the country, and the Royal Bank, with its very large resources, has been able to take on $66,000,000 of new business throughout Canada and at the same time has amply maintained its usual strong cash position.

Every part of the statement bears evidence of the great co-operation the bank is in a position to lend all sections of the country, through its very complete chain of branches.

Of total assets of $909,395,884, liquid assets are $398,862,065, being equal to over 50 per cent. of liabilities to the public. Included among them are cash on hand and in banks totalling $180,321,670, being 22.62 per cent. of liabilities to the public. Other liquod assets included Dominion and Provincial Government securities, $85,257,914, compared with $73,307,380; Canadian municipal securities and British, foreign and colonial public securities $16,730,643, down from $31,296,226, and railway and other bonds debentures and stocks $16,640,108, compared with $15,890,650.

Larger Business Handled

The very prominent part which the bank has played in financing the larger business of the country is reflected by total commercial loans in Canada of $292,315,472, up from $225,536,860, an increase for the year of over $66,000,000. At the same time current loans elsewhere than in Canada are down to $145,422,394, from $153,411,835.

Of equal importance is the manner in which saving deposits continue to expand, deposits bearing interest having now gained to $523,651,908, up from $514,562,219 a year ago.

Record Earnings

A new high record for earnings has been set. Profits for the year amounted to $5,881,253, as compared with $5,370,145 in the pervious year. The profits, added to the amount carried forward from the previous year, brought the total amount available for distribution up to $7,691,085. This was applied as follows: dividends and bonus $4,200,000; transferred to officers' pension fund $200,000; appropriation for bank premises $400,000; reserve for Dominion Government taxes $530,000; leaving a balance to be carried forward of $2,361,085, as against $1,809,831 at the end of the previous year.

A record disclosing such unusual strength and reserves, should be especially gratifying to shareholders and the public generally. As is well-known, the Royal has important offices and connections in all the principal banking centres of the world and such a satisfactory report will be taken as evidence of the soundness of Canada's position.

The report will be submitted at the annual general meeting of shareholders, to be held at the head office of the Bank in Montreal, on Thursday, January 10th next.

MAN INJURED IN EAST CITY

Driver of Delivery Truck Claims He Did Not Run Over John Hinds.

LOST PARCEL.

John Hinds, of 175 River road, was able to return this week to his home from St. Joseph's hospital, whence he had been taken for treatment of injuries to head and face, received last Friday night, at 6.45, in a manner which has not been clearly discovered as yet.

From information given the police by W. McIlwain, driver of one of E. Cooney's delivery trucks, he had started off in his truck from Shearer's grocery store, at the corner of Hazlett street and Armour road and had proceeded south on the latter thoroughfare to a point south of Douro street, when he missed a parcel. Returning toward Shearer's store, he came upon a man named Suddards, picking up Hinds at a point about sixty feet west of the intersection. McIlwain said he found the parcel at the same place but was certain that he had not struck the injured man.

He thought that Hinds must have been on the truck and fallen from it, the parcel falling also.

Sap Running In Trees On Jacob's Island

Indications that Nature, believing this mild, warm weather means spring, is putting forth every effort to bloom out into new life, continue to reach The Examiner Office. That the sap is running in the trees on Jacob's Island, Stoney Lake, is the news telephoned here to-day. Jacob's Island is the property of T. Edward Huff and is one of the well-known points to the lake residents.

Last week it was reported that the dandelions were in bloom along the fences in one of the southern parts of the county. Lilacs are budding in several parts of the city and the ground hog can still be seen on guard above his hole, long after the time that normally he would be deep in his winter nap.

INDUSTRIALS REGISTER GAINS

General Firm Tone Prevails in Toronto Stock Exchange.

QUIET ISSUES ADVANCE.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—A general firm tone prevailed on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Industrials and oils were strong and registered gains. Trading was active and several quiet issues featured large transactions.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

John Winters Rescued From Waters When Car Leaves Bridge.

AT GANNON'S NARROWS.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

GANNON'S NARROWS, Dec. 28.—John Winters narrowly escaped drowning in the icy waters of the lake yesterday when his car, which he was driving across the bridge at Gannon's Narrows, skidded on hitting a slippery ridge in the boards, careened to the side and leaped over the edge of the bridge, carrying the driver with it to the bottom of the lake to a depth of thirty feet.

Fortunately for Mr Winters the glass in the door of his car was lowered and he managed to crawl out and force himself to the surface. Also fortunate for the man the accident was seen by Mr. and Mrs. T. Freeburn and the former rushed to his assistance. Mr. Winters, chilled and gripped by the icy waters could make no headway to safety and his efforts were growing weaker. Mr. Freeburn leaning far out held out a pole to the drowning man and he grasped it firmly just as he was sinking, exhausted from his strenouus struglings.

Mrs. Freeburn raised the alarm and quickly other men gathered and aided Freeburn in getting him to the safety of the bridge.

He was carried to the home of the Freeburn's, which was close by, and there received first aid treatment, making a swift recovery. Neighbors gathered from the surrounding district and after Trojan pulling, the car was dragged from the bottom of the lake.

IN POLICE COURT

That stop signs at entrances to through streets must be respected, was evidenced in police court this morning when two men from outside the city were each fined $2.00 and costs or a total expense of nearly $5.00 each.

Charles McNulty, of Norwood, had failed to stop at the corner of Hunter and Water streets, while Louis Moore, of Millbrook, had committed a similar offence at the McDonnel and Aylmer streets intersection.

LOUDON CALLS BIG CONFERENCE

Disarmament Commission Will Meet in Geneva in April.

DRAFTING A TREATY.

GENEVA, Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—The preparatory commission for a disarmament conference has been convoked to meet at Geneva on April 15.

The convocation wa sannounced today by President Loudon of the preparatory commission after he had ascertained that the various countries, including the United States, had no objections to the date.

It was understood that the fusion project for partial disarmament for all nations will be the main item on the agenda with the hope that the naval experts also will begin efforts to agree on a formula for a reduction in cruisers and submarines.

Count Von Bernstorff of Germany, chairman of a commission which is drafting a treaty for the control of the manufacture of armaments today, summoned a meeting of the experts for March 11 at Geneva. The meeting will be specially devoted to a discussion of a scheme of classification of armaments introduced by the Belgian delegation.

Each nation represented on the commission, has a right to name its experts. The commission has failed thus far to agree on the text of a convention, being divided especially on the problem of how much publicity is to be accorded to armaments.

BY-ELECTIONS ARE PENDING

Four Seats Are At Present Vacant in British House of Commons.

ARMISTICE TALK.

LONDON, December 28. — Canadian Press Cable. — No fewer than four bye-elections are pending in Great Britain. There is some talk among members of Parliament who happen to be in London at present, as to the possibility of an armistice in regard to these vacancies, in view of the imminence of a general election. It is hardly likely such an arrangement could be effected however, for in the first place nobody knows when the leading issues of the government's de-rating proposals and imperial policy will not be submerged in a more intense application to the dire straits of the mining industry.

Two of the by-elections are in English mining districts, and possibly will be delayed until next Autumn. Danabec, Northumberland, is vacant, through the death of George Warne, Laborite, elected in 1924, with a majority of 2234 over Mrs. K. Middleton, Conservative. Its member was Ben Spoor, Labor leader, who died a few days ago, and who was elected in 1924 by a majority of 2918 over J. Bainbridge, Labor.

There is also a large mining population in Northern Midlothian, Scotland, unrepresented through the death of Sir George Hutchison, Conservative, who was elected in 1924 with a majority of 2147, over A. D. Clarke, Labor. Clarke will probably be one of the four condidates, the others being Major John Colville, a Conservative; David Keir, Liberal, and Lewis Spence, Scottish Nationalist party.

The fourth by-election is pending in Londonderry, Northern Ireland, through the elevation to the Bench of Sir Malcolm Hannaghten, elected with an overwhelming plurality of 23,000 votes over C. MacWhinney, Republican, and W. H. Galt, Independent, in 1924. The fight here, unless there is an acclamation, will be on the traditional issue of the Imperial connection.

FALLIS LINE SCHOOL

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 27.—A very enjoyable Christmas concert, under the auspices of the public school, was held in the Fallis Line church on Thursday evening, Miss Maretta Gray, the popular teacher, having trained her pupils for the occasion, and the entire section being well represented fully in the audience.

A. J. Fallis was chairman and as usual his address was replete with facts, and held the close attention of the listeners. Ruth Ball, one of Miss Gray's pupils followed with an "Address of Welcome" and the "Song of Welcome" was a full chorus by the school.

"A Little Girl's Speech", by Beatrice Fallis, was prettily given, and after a recitations by Eric Fallis, one of the larger boys, a dialogue in two acts: "The Day After Christmas" interested the audience. Recitations by Edna McKnight and Marian Belch, led up to a play, "Uncle Hiram's Cold" which created plenty of merriment, and Miss Lillian Crocker's organ solo drew forth a demand for an encore.

Four little girls presented a play "The Old Dolls" and Marshal Fallis gave a recitation, the next item being another play "The Sunday School Class." Other pupils who recited were: Ruby Fallis, Mary Ball, and Verna Fallis, the latter giving her selection in the form of a monologue. A dialogue, "The Minister's Mistake" and two drills, "The Old Farmers' Drill" by five boys, and "The Old Woman's Drill" by five girls, and organ solo by Miss Crocker, a song by the pupils, a short play, "The Spirit of Christmas" and a "Farewell Address" by Mary Ball, completed the formal program.

A beautifully trimmed Christmas tree, laden with gifts, was the feature of chief interest for the younger folk, and when Santa Claus (Henry Gray) came in to distribute the presents excitement ran high. The teacher remembered all her pupils with a gift and a bag of candy, and in turn she heard her own name called repeatedly by Santa and soon had a pile of many-shaped parcels around her, showing the love and esteem in which she is held by her pupils.

The school trustees, Hiram Fallis, Lavergne Fallis, and John McKnight spoke briefly, expressing their pleasure in the fine program presented, and their appreciation of the excellin connection with her school. At the request of the chairman, Miss Gray came to the platform and voiced her thanks in a few well-chosen words, and H. A. Fallis moved a hearty vote of thanks to the teacher for her labor and patience in training her pupils for the enjoyable program which had been so well presented. Lavergne Fallis seconded the motion, and the audience showed its approval by a round of hearty applause.

Financially the evening was a success, and the funds of the school will be considerably augmented, the money being used to purchase such supplies as the teacher may think necessary in connection with school activities.

At Marmora.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, December 27. — This year's Christmas tree at Deloro, visited by the villager's merry youngsters, on Christmas eve, was the largest ever serving that purpose, and the decorations and illuminations which it carried, were said to surpass those of previous years. At 7 p.m., in the basement of the hall, F. A. Bapty conducted an impromptu entertainment to the delight of the children, each effort being rewarded with the gift of a Christmas cracker. Shortly after eight all ascended the basement steps and crossed the floor of the hall to view the appearance of Santa Claus through the imposing fire place. After indulging in a few musical rounds, this grand old gentleman carried the tender tots, two at a time, around the tree. Later the gifts of toys were passed out by him to the anticipant assembly of juveniles.

HASTINGS, Dec. 27 (Examiner Correspondence). — "History repeats itself." So reads the adage. Therefore for the sixty-sixth annual Christmas entertainment, the members of the Sunday school and congregation of Trinity United Church (formerly Methodist) gathered in the town hall on Christmas night, with many friends of other communions and congregations, to enjoy a program of exceptional merit. For upwards of six weeks, committees had been at work preparing to present a better program than ever, and the result clearly justified the efforts. With every seat taken, and many standing at the back of the hall, the program was opened promptly at eight o'clock by the Excelsior orchestra, which delighted the large audience with several selection throughout the course of the evening's entertainment.

The address of welcome was briefly delivered by Billy Fields of the primary division, and was heartily applauded. Then the following numbers were given: Chorus, "Little Star," by Primary Class; recitation by Miss Georgiana Beavis of Norwood; recitation, "My Dolly," by Bertha Tripp; duet, "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," by Marion Hie and Fern Preston; recitation by Betty Spooner; cornet solo, "Francesca Polka," Wilfrid Knight"; chorus "Awkward Boys," by eight boys; pantomime, "Holy Night," Rhea Preston; dialogue, "Aunt Sabrina's Christmas," by several young ladies; solo, "Luther's Cradle Song," by Marion Hie; dialogue, "Excitement at Kettleville"; motion song, "Chickadees," by several little girls; drill and pantomime, "The Bethlehem Star" by several young ladies; solo, "Tom o' Deven," by Roger McMillan of Norwood; duet, "Courtship," by Mrs. G. Faux and L. T. Huycke; fancy flag drill by sixteen young ladies; comic song, by L. T. Huycke; and a four-act sketch, entitled, "The Man Outside." The cast of characters for the sketch were:: Gilbert Elton, Everett Fairman; Spray, L. J. Elliott; Charles Fry, A. V. German; Harry Howard, Howard Fairman; Andrew Ashton, L. J. Elliott; Alice Ashton, Ada Bond; Kate Marlow, Mrs. L. J. Elliott.

Dr. J. H. Hess, superintendent of the Sunday School, ably filled the position of chairman, and took great care to keep every thing running smoothly, and to avoid undue delays between numbers. In his own inimitable way he thanked all and sundry for the part they had taken in making the event a real success. Each number revealed the fact that the committees had been untiring in their efforts to select the numbers and also in the selection of artists for those numbers. The presentation of "The Man Outside" required about an hour, and much credit is due to those presenting the sketch, especially to L. J. Elliott who trained the artists and also took two characters himself. It was clearly demonstrated that the young people of Hastings have real dramatic ability when given the necessary training.

The proceeds of the evening amounted to $136.00. The singing of the National Anthem was the signal for the conclusion of one of the best entertainments presented here in sixty-six years.

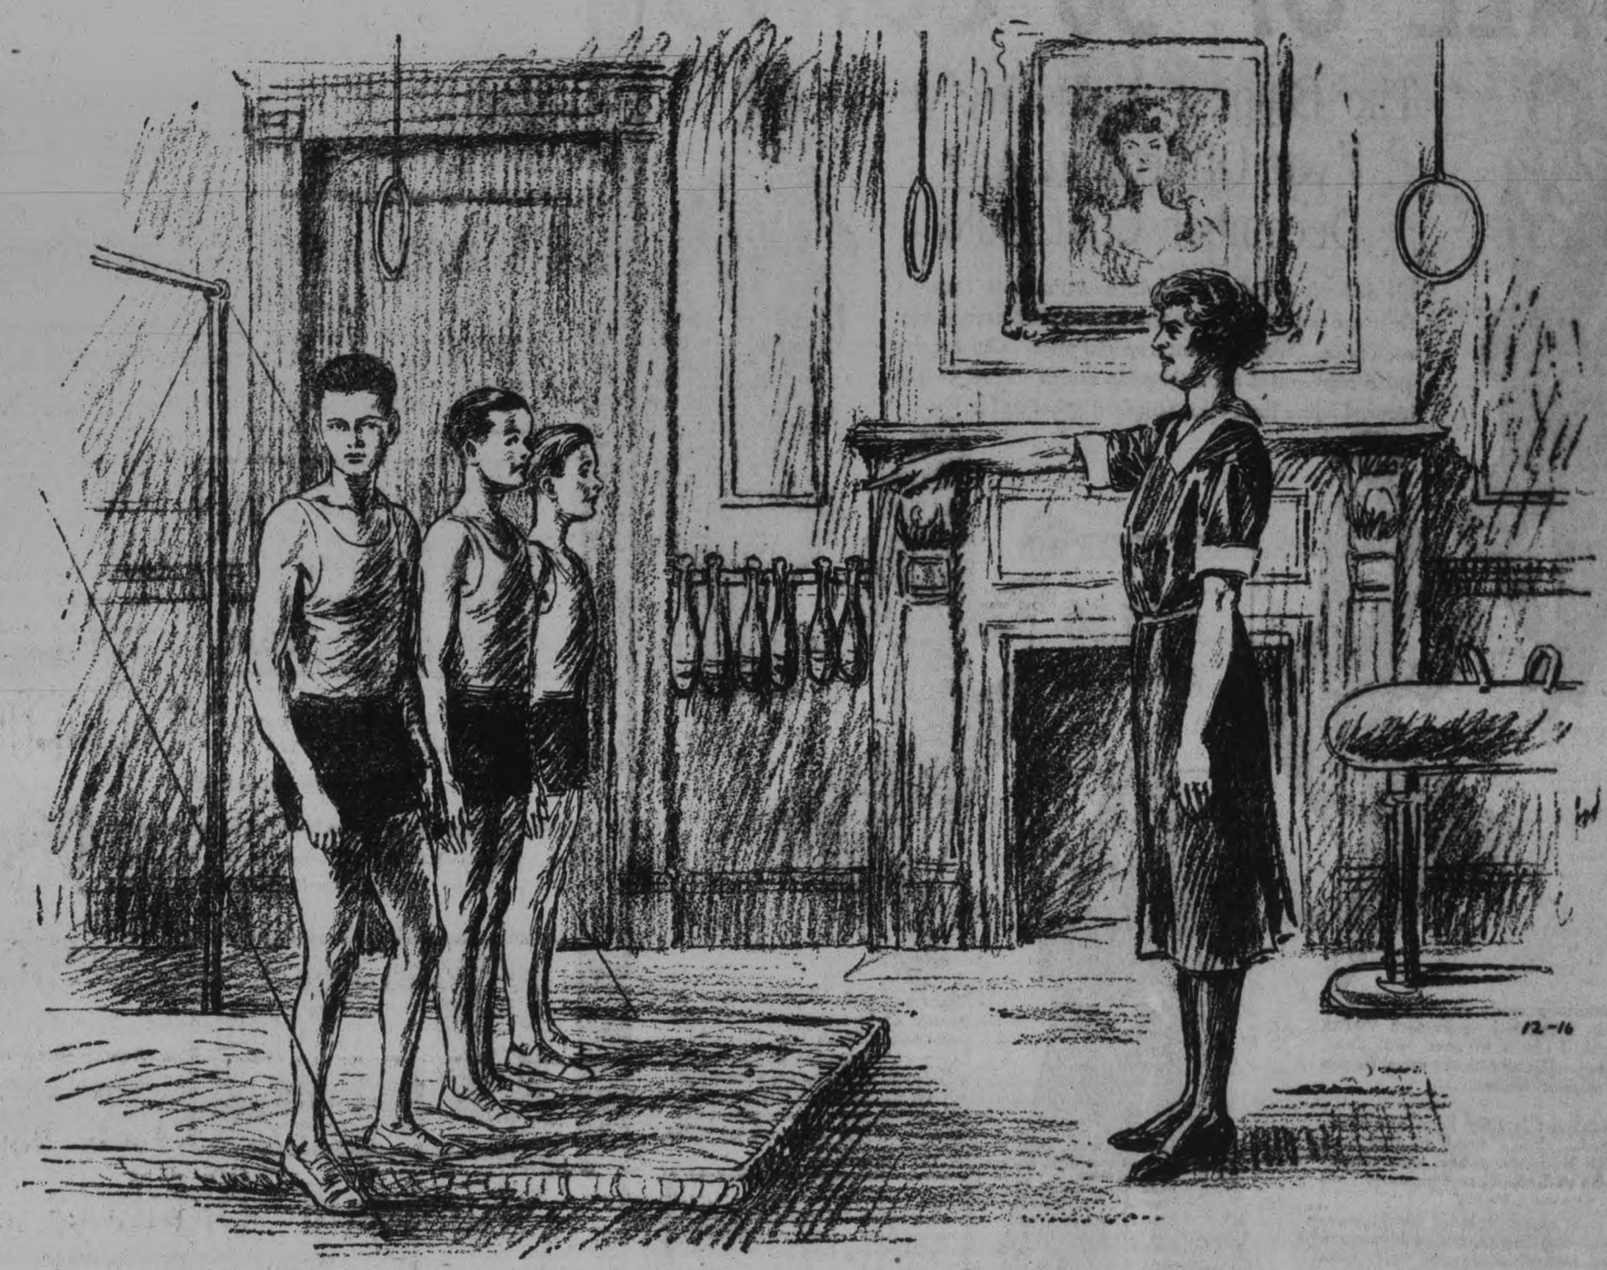
LITTLE SPARTA - By FANNIE HURST

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Humoresque", "A President Is Born"



THE Simms' flat near Jefferson Market was known in that neighborhood of old New York as "Little Sparta" and the analogy was well taken. If ever a household rotated along the rigid principles of efficiency, military precision and discipline, it was in this little flat presided over by a widow, intent almost to fanaticism upon the rearing of her three sons.

The fanaticism had to do with her rigid ambition to train these footsteps in what to her were the illustrious footsteps of a father who had died a hero in a San Francisco hotel fire when the eldest of her three boys was four years of age.

It had not been easy sailing since that day fourteen years before when a telegram shot like a bolt out of a clear sky, announcing that the father of her children, then a headline acrobatic performer on a vaudeville circuit, had met his end in a glorious if untimely fashion.

In less time than you would have thought conceivable, however, the widow of Monroe Simms, pulling her startled, unnerved self together, had gone on with the business of life; the business of life consisting from that moment on of rearing her boys into men worthy to be sons of their father.

There were three youngsters, nice boys. Frederick, Allan and Monroe. In the phraseology of the sidewalks of New York, into which they dipped when the vigilant eye of their mother saw fit, they were "regular fellows" with the desires, the ambitions, the hopes, the shortcomings and the naughtiness of average youngsters. If they were just average youngsters, Abbie Simms was never to be cognizant of it. To her they were supermen, carved in the image of their super father, and it was under the supposition of this super dimension that she reared them along the heroic lines which caused their home to be called "Little Sparta".

There was regime about that place, all right. With the determination that these three boys should not only rival but excel the acrobatic excellence of their father, deceased, the brown-eyed, brown-haired, rather heavy-faced, heavy-bodied mother of that household, held to her task like a general.

Every morning at six o'clock, the three sons of Abbie Simms went through the torturous processes of cold baths, rub-downs and two hours on the improvised trapeze, flying rings and horizontal bar which Abbie had herself constructed in the front room that should have been a parlor. About eight o'clock, time for the youngsters to start for school, and when Abbie also started for the corner bakery where she served as saleslady, every member of the household had been through what might colloquially be called "a day's work." Then at six o'clock, Abbie and her sons went through a two-hour try-out before the evening meal.

Two hours of strenuous exercise, then a simple, though adequate supper—and then to bed. Such was the routine that the Spartan Abbie Simms established for her three sons. And for herself. She allowed herself no pleasures, no relaxations. Work all day, sandwiched in between a hard two hours of supervision in the morning and a hard two hours at night. And then, for Abbie, housework enough to keep the small apartment neat and the three boys well fed, clean, and neatly clothed.

But for Abbie this was no life of hardship. Her spirits and strength were stimulated by the thought that her super sons were following in the steps of their super father, that her efforts were needed to show them the way.

By the time the eldest boy Monroe was eleven and Allan seven, they were in sufficiently fine fettle as a troupe of juvenile tumblers to receive local engagements for church and charity festivals.

IT was along about the time that Monroe was sixteen, that there settled about the eldest of her brood a certain discontent. After all, it was one thing to be known as the swiftest trio of juvenile tumblers in their part of town, but it was another thing to continue being denied the pleasures that youth legitimately craved. The Spartan-like regime of food. Self-denial after self-denial. Forbidden sweets. Early bedtime. Inability to join the boys of the neighborhood in evening diversion. These things began to tell on Monroe. Suddenly this boy, more than any of the others, began to rebel openly, defiantly and, to her horror, Abbie began to sense among her brood, rebellion.

The business of life consisted, for Mrs. Simms, in bringing up her three just average sons — to her supermen, carved in the image of their super father — that they might be worthy children of such an illustrious man. And if these supermen were just average youngsters, Abbie Simms was never to be cognizant of it.

Allan and Frederick began to share their brother's dilemma of unrest, began to demand their quota of sweets, rebelling against the early hours to bed and the strenuous drill before school. The heart of Abbie might virtually be said to have stood still with fear, with consternation, with dread, but the hand of Abbie never relaxed. If she felt herself spiritually defeated, it was never to show in her face or her manner. Never did her three sons, growing into adolescence, slip out of her hands.

Stormy were the scenes, active was the rebellion, but when Abbie sounded her voice in command, there were her three boys, lined up for work. There was a crayon portrait of Abbie Simms on the wall of the dining room of that flat. She used to look up at it when her boys were chafing and recalcitrant, and square her shoulders and tighten her lips, as if making tryst with herself never to desert the ideal that she had made as goal for her three boys—to be worthy of their father.

When Monroe was a really beautiful eighteen, a tall, slender, poetic looking boy with little suggestion of his steel sinews and power of endurance, the trio attracted the attention of an important local manager, who seeing clown-like attributes in the snub-nosed little Allan, who was double-jointed and could sit on his elbows and look like a cherub, and admiring the skill of Frederick and the personality and actual acrobatic genius of Monroe, decided to have a large and spectacular review written around the personalities of these three boys.

In a way, it was a windfall and yet in another way it was only that for which Abbie Simms had been relentlessly and sure-footedly preparing the way. It had come.

Curious, but Monroe, bitter with restraint, despising his work, was reluctant to go on with it. It was just in such proportion as his astonishing skill increased, that his sullen discontent manifested itself. Bitter were the scenes in that little household. Monroe did not like his work. Openly he revolted. Tired of discipline. Tired of self-denial. Bursting with restless adolescence. He wanted to go West. Anything to be free from the cramping environment.

In vain, Abbie remonstrated, argued, pleaded. If she bested him in the end, it was with a twist of anguish in her heart because it was the kind of conquest that was actually defeat. Her son was staying against his will. The younger boys, infected with some of the rebellion, were, however, well within her power to manage. It was Monroe, rebel, who frightened her.

It became ...essary for Abbie to work only two-thirds shift at the bakeshop, now that the big review was in process of becoming a reality. Her boys, her restless, revolting boys needed every hour of her guidance and attention.

Fear sometimes drowned out her pride in them, but never her confidence. These youngsters would be worthy of their father.

IT was rushing across the street in her zeal to be home from the bake shop on the boys' arrival from school, that Abbie Simms was instantaneously killed by a truck belonging to the firm that employed her. "She must have gone out with the flash of a snuffed candle," said the doctor. "No warning. No pain. No time to suffer."

She had the largest funeral the neighborhood had ever known. The little Spartan had filled a bigger niche as an example, as an inspiration, than she could ever have realized in her lifetime.

And the thing that happened was this: The spirit of Abbie, as tangible as anything about that household, continued to live in the little room consisting of a trapeze, flying rings and a horizontal bar. The head of that household, over night as it were, became the poetic figure of Abbie's eldest son.

At six o'clock on the stroke, he is out of bed calling to arms, calling to discipline, calling to routine his more lackadaisical brothers. More relentless than Abbie in her lifetime, more dauntless, if possible, more militaristic, the Simms trio has reached its imminence in the theatrical world under the eager-eyed surveillance of Monroe. No privation is too great. No rigor too strenuous, and his younger brothers, in spite of their falterings, have been obliged to follow suit.

The crayon portrait of their mother now hangs in the more sumptuous apartment of the Simms trio. Sometimes, as if to gather some of its strength, her eldest son Monroe stands before her and regards her with sad and understanding eyes.

DISTRICT CHURCHES

HOLY TRINITY (ANGLICAN) HAULTAIN

(Examiner Correspondence.)

A Christmas service was held at Holy Trinity Church, Haultain, in the afternoon of Christmas Day. A large congregation was in attendance.

Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly took as the text for his sermon St. Luke ii:10—"Fear not! for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy." The text is taken from the story of the annunciation by the angel, to the shepherds, if the birth of Jesus Christ. The message which was proclaimed then has been proclaimed throughout the ages, and re-echoes in man's heart to-day. "'Fear not!' What a comfort there is in these words, to be told by One in authority that our fears are groundless and that our worries are brushed aside! There is no need for our fear of the coming of Christ, because we can look back over the ages and see what His influence has meant for mankind. At this time every year the brilliant light again shines and the message is proclaimed. Fear not? Why? 'For behold I bring you good tidings of great joy.' To the spiritually minded Shepherds, who were devout to Jews, the coming of the Messiah meant a great deal. It was the birth of a new era; the dawn of a new life. The prophecies of past ages were fulfilled; the long-suffering servant of Isaiah was actually in their midst. At last He had come to bring peace. His coming was celebrated by the angels in grand chorus. So today the chimes ring out their happy message and we sing with the angels, 'Glory to God in the Highest!' He comes to us; let us welcome Him; let us receive Him as our King, and find a room for Him within the sanctuaries of our hearts."

OMEMEE, Dec. 28 (Examiner Correspondence).—The service in Trinity Church on Sunday evening was practically all choral, the minister, Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard, just speaking for five minutes on "The Stars of Life—Faith, Hope and Love." Special musical numbers included a solo by Miss Carrie Balfour of Toronto entitled, "The Virgin's Lullaby," and a solo by Miss Mary Lowe, "Night of Nights," and other numbers by the choir, "The First Christmas Morn," "O Come, All Ye Faithful," "Glad Tidings," "Silent Night," and "Christmas Hymn."

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Dec. 28.—Christmas Sunday services were held in Trinity United Church on Sunday, December 23. The Sunday school was well attended and the devotional exercises were followed by Christmas and temperance lessons in the various classes. A number of hymns were given by the choir, followed by prayer by the pastor. William Scrutton gave a fine violin solo. An illustrated talk to the children on the theme "Jesus the Light of the World" was given. During the evening Miss Lenore Vandervoort gave a much appreciated solo.

Evening Service.

The evening service of worship was preceded by an organ recital by Miss Ramsay, organist. The theme for this service was "The other wise man." "The three who came to the manger in Bethlehem were Caspar, Melchoir and Belshazar. The story told by Henry Van Dyke tells of the other wise man, Artoban, who did not arrive and his life of search and striving. Although he was hindered in his wish to present his treasures to the Saviour, he was successful in helping many others and 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto Me' was his reward." A most interesting and inspiring message was given and Miss Ramsay followed with a beautiful solo.

ST. MATTHEW'S ANGLICAN CHURCH, HALL'S BRIDGE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

A children's service was held at St. Matthew's Anglican Church on Sunday morning. There was a good congregation of children. Special hymns and Scripture passages were used.

In his address, Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly stated that there are many days throughout the year which are especially remembered. These include the various Dominion holidays and our birthdays. The one day which is more thought of than any other is Christmas Day. Christmas Day is a day primarily of spiritual thanksgiving for God's gift of His Son to the world. It should not be treated as a mere ordinary holiday, but is a real holy day. Our celebration should begin, at least, in the House of God. Then, Christmas Day is a day of rejoicing. It is a day when we should do our utmost to be happy ourselves and to spread and share our happiness with others. If we try to keep these thoughts in mind, our Christmas will be more real to us and conducive to more happiness generally.

ST. PAUL'S MARMORA.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, December 28. — St. Paul's was prettily decorated for the Christmas festival. Celebrations of Holy Communion were held at 8 a.m. and 10.30 a.m. At the latter service the choir gave an anthem, F. S. Pearce taking the tenor solos. Rev. A. B. Caldwell delivered an appropriate message from John 3, 16, and dealt interestingly with the first Christmas service.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, Decemher 28. — The United Church Christmas service was held on Sunday evening, when the church was prettily decorated with Christmas colors and potted plants. Rev. H. B. Herrington preached on the various ideas of the Advent, as told or indicated in the four Gospels. Christmas hymns were used and the choir sang two anthems.

Anglican Service.

The Anglican Christmas service will be held on Sunday morning, December 30.

AT DUNSFORD.

DUNSFORD, Dec. 28.—Appropriate Christmas services were held on Sunday in both the Anglican and the United church. In the afternoon at the Anglican church, the pastor, Rev. W. G. Dreyer, spoke from the story in St. Luke's gospel and beautifully portrayed the birth of the world's Saviour. The choir sang sweetly an anthem in keeping with the occasion.

The service in the evening in the United church was well attended. In his address the pastor told how Jesus came to be born in the little town of Bethlehem and followed with a story of four different groups of people who through their representative leaders came and looked upon the infant. "The Christmas anniversary and spirit is a challenge to every individual to copy the example of Jesus who was pure and strong and who during his ministry exhibited a grace that made all who saw it wonder and love its goodness and its power."

During the service the choir sang, "Awake, Awake, All Ye People," and Dr. Robert Lowery, of Toronto, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Thurston sang "Night of Nights."

Ten tables were played at the regular euchre party of the A.Y.P.A., held on Thursday evening. Prizes were won by Miss Grace Watson and Leonard Wingett. Consolation prizes were won by Miss Dorothy Holmes and William Mackay.

Children Entertained

Friday was the closing day of the Christmas term of the public school and the afternoon session was given over to a Christmas party for each room. The children were present in full strength, augmented with younger members of the family or small friends. Gifts were presented and refreshments were served and a series of most successful entertainments are now but a plesant memory.

Auction Sale

At the sale of the late Lorne Northey, held last week at his late farm in Douro, near Pine Grove, everything sold well, bringing particularly good prices. R. H. Alford was the auctioneer. Mr. Alford was welcomed back into active work by many friends who were sorry to hear of his recent serious accident.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

I am one among the many silent readers of your page, which is becoming more popular every day.

I have written several letters to you, in my mind, since reading the letters signed 'Thinker' and 'Another Thinker.' Really, I am surprised at the attitude they take toward the women and girls of to-day. I think they should think harder before they utter such remarks as they did. Just let me whisper to you gently what my good husband said (and I consider him among the deep thinkers): 'The fellows who wrote those letters thought themselves smart and sure showed off their ignorance.' This is one man's opinion, and I have no doubt others could tell them a thing or two if they had time.

But, Marion dear, do not let such letters as theirs frighten or worry you in the least, for there are heaps of womankind and men folk ready to stand by and support you. But anyway they are not such bad chaps after all, and we mustn't be too hard on them.

Thanking you in advance for the three helps I have checked off on the coupon.

Primrose."

Thank you, "Primrose," for your support, and will you thank your husband, too, for his standing up for women? Indeed, "Primrose," I'm not the teeniest wee bit frightened or intimidated by these writers. I'm very glad to see their false ideas come out into the light, so that we women may know there are men who still hold to the archaic ideas.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

"I, too, wish to thank you for the excellent helps I have received. We all enjoy your pages very much, and the paper is not long in the house before it is all absorbed so that each member can have the part he or she prefers.

As to 'Thinker' and 'Another Thinker,' don't you think that they just threw their missiles to stir up something, much as the small boy enjoys throwing a stone into a quiet pool to start the ripples?

I imagine they are now quietly laughing up their sleeves to see how seriously their 'missiles' are taken. Let's forget it, or at least ignore it. Their ideas are, to say the least, decidedly antique. Very possiby they are, too.

Merry Christmas to all.

Sincerely yours,

Madoc, Ont. Gipsy."

In spite of what you write about ignoring these two daring men, "Gipsy," I notice that you cannot forget to give them a rub by suggesting that they are antiques! Thanks for your good wishes, "Gipsy."

"Dear Marion:

You started something when you COMPOSED that letter of 'Thinker's.' Surely no man really meant it. Any man whom I have ever seen, making himself ridiculous by such speeches, always impressed me as being an apology for a third rate man, or less.

However, the next time The Examiner begins a story, please don't, in your department, give a synopsis of it when the yarn has just commenced. It's not good sport. High class reviewers don't do it, I have observed. You spoiled for me 'The Luckiest Lady.'

You get so many honey drops; this is one of acid—maybe. No doubt your thide is heavy. It would need to be.

The 'Thinker' wasn't so dumb to start that harangue.

Yours till next time,

n th power."

Your letter isn't so cloyingly sweet at that, but it may surprise you to learn that I like my food a little tart. Cranberries, applesauce, and all such things are spoiled by being too much sweetened. Now, don't mistake my meaning—I DID NOT class your letter as "APPLESAUCE."

You will notice that I capitalized the word in your opening sentence which you underlined. I can't underline things in the paper, the printers tell me. Anyhow, you're wrong. Whether you think that letter too depraved to have emanated from a man or not, it's a fact. It did. I really believe I could scare up a few references to my integrity, too, if some of you men (you ARE a man, aren't you—your letter indicates that you are at least mannish) demanded it.

I'm sorry about the synopsis of the serial. I really thought I was doing something kind, by letting people know what they were in for before starting the two- or three-months' job of reading the story. And, anyhow, nobody compelled you to read it.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The latest fashion in lounging attire includes a printed silk handkerchief wound round the head and a single earring to be worn in the right ear.

With your lounging pajamas be sure to wear a silk handkerchief bound turban fashion round your head. It will help give your hair that nice smooth, flat appearance that is so highly regarded at present. And be sure to wear an earring—just one earring, on one ear that peeps out from beneath the turban, while the other ear is hidden. The idea originated in Paris and Mary Nowkowsky, whose name is associated everywhere with important negligee fashions, has been making some of these pajama ensembles with a silk square for the turban and earring specially chosen to harmonize with the pajamas. The fashion for wearing just one earring was set by women who had lost one of a pair of earrings and wanted to go on wearing the odd one that remained. That couldn't have happened in the good old days when ears were pierced and earrings simply couldn't drop off the way they sometimes do today.

There was some talk about a revival of the fashion for pierced ears a few months ago, and certain well-known women of fashion—mostly French—were spoken of as having submitted to the ear-piercing operation so that they could wear earrings set with valuable precious stones without anxiety. But most women, I think, had rather wear less valuable earrings and keep their ear lobes intact.

One girl I know was recently told by her great aunt that she—the great aunt—would give the grandniece a pair of gorgeous old family earrings set with perfectly matched pearls, providing that the young woman would have her ears pierced. The older woman wanted to run no risk of having the valuable heirloom lost. The girl is still trying to decide what to do.

WHAT IS CORRECT?

NAMES ON CARDS

Mrs. E. C.—When you inquired last week you asked only about signing letters. The rule for a card is that a married woman never uses her Christian name. The card is in her husband's name in full—"Mrs. Newbold Davis White." The rule is the same for a widow.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN WAKE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, Dec. 28.—On Monday December 24, there passed away at her home in the village, after an illness of some months duration, Mrs. John Wake, beloved wife of John Wake.

The late Mrs. Wake was a life long resident of the Townsbip of Manvers, residing for the most part in the village of Bethany. She was very quiet and retiring by nature, devoting her whole time to her home, husband and family of which nine children survive, three having predeceased her some years ago. Until last Easter she enjoyed good health, then an affection of the heart caused from goitre forced her to give up her active work and rest more. She put up a valiant fight and hoped to have a family reunion at Christmas but God saw fit to remove her on the morning of her sixty-fourth birthday.

The funeral service on Wednesday was held in the United Church where a large gathering of friends gathered to pay their last respects to one they had long respected. Rev. A. Poulter, pastor of the church, was in charge of the service, interment taking place in St. Mary's Anglican cemetery, Lifford. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful. The sympathy of the neighborhood is with the sorrowing husband and children, namely: Herbert of Fort Erie, George of Lindsay, Henry of Niagara Falls, Morton of Detroit, Mrs. Albert Kennedy and Miss Neta of Niagara Falls, Mrs. Bert Rae of Peterborough, Mrs. Reginald Palmer of this village and Olive of Detroit.

His Secretary

By LATIMER J. WILSON

His secretary, Jane Meadows, was neither pretty, to the casual onlooker, nor were her frocks and stockings of the alluring type so upsetting to the average male. That was the paramount reason why his fiancee, Helen Redmond, had not raised any objections eighteen months before when Hillery had engaged a feminine rather than a masculine secretary.

Hillery was a writer of steadily augmenting fame and the essential characteristics he demanded in his secretary were understanding, patience, and a perfect willingness to work when the inspirational mood was upon him, whether that mood pounced into his brain in the middle of the night or just as the dinner gong sounded.

Fortunately for the restfulness of his secretary the night moods very seldom attacked him and no one knew, not even Hillery himself, consciously, just how exactly Jane fitted into the scheme of his life. She took down his copy swiftly with a mechanical and impersonal manner that at times made Hillery wonder how she possessed a so completely understanding grasp of his mental processes. She seemed often to divine what was coming from his lips even before his own brain had quite perfected the trend of thought.

However, Hillery was not conscious of the treasure his secretary really was and a very hot summer slipped past while they were immersed in the writing of his greatest novel—one that the publishers were already asking for.

Jane was almost as enthusiastic about the novel as was the writer himself. It promised to be a masterpiece and the bulky manuscript was piled in chapters on the shelves of the tiny studio.

In order to secure greater privacy and also to command a broader view of the lovely surrounding landscape, Hillery's studio was built up high among the wide branches of a great oak tree and was approached only by a narrow winding stairway.

His secretary and his fiancee were the only two people ever permitted there, and Hillery, not being a smoker himself, was not too pleased when Helen smoked a cigarette in his studio. He liked the fresh, sweet air from the tree tops and drew it into his lungs as a confirmed smoker inhales the tobacco fumes.

Helen often wished she could take a tremendous interest in Hillery's work, but she couldn't, and that was all there was to it. She wished he would write lighter, more popular novels and not those weighty ones that would live on long after the human beings interested in them were dead. The checks would no doubt be equally big, if not bigger. And in that case, she too might have taken a vivid interest in his work.

On the evening when the big novel was practically ready for its journey away from the small studio, Jane sat in her bedroom with chin in hands, gazing at that tree-top haven which held the precious script. Her eyes were somewhat wistful and she was conscious of feeling a trifle sorry that such interesting work was for the time being over. Jane loved the studio even as she loved—but then Jane had not admitted even to herself that she loved Hillery. Hillery was engaged to Helen and Jane dared not think of the time when he should have gone from her life.

And as she gazed at the little studio in the semi-dusk she suddenly saw a tiny snakelike flame leaping through the window and threatening all that the studio held.

Without a moment's hesitation Jane leaped swiftly down through the garden path. To her horror she saw that the little stairway was a mass of flames. The precious manuscript would be destroyed and nothing left but the ashes of a tremendous struggle.

Swift as lightning Jane climbed up the kindly branches of the great oak and, smashing the window, quickly wriggled into the now flaming studio.

She was just able to snatch the manuscript into her hungry arms and bound again toward the window and fling the armful of papers far into safety before the small structure collapsed. Jane knew no more until the following day, when with bandages and a nurse and many accessories of the sickroom, she realized what had happened.

"Is it safe?" was her first question.

Then someone who she had not known was standing near by answered, and drawing nearer took Jane gently into his arms. He didn't care if the nurse looked on nor did he care a jot that he was engaged to Helen Redmond whose smoldering cigarette tossed carelessly into the waste basket of the studio had almost lost the life of Jane.

Hillery had known in a blinding flash that which his unconscious self had known for some eighteen months and that was that his love for Jane was the biggest thing in life and—well, the manuscript of the masterpiece would have been but dregs and ashes and a bitter regret if it had been the cause of one single moment of pain to the wonderful girl in his arms.

"I'm not in any pain," she said softly as if she knew his very thoughts. "I am happier than I have ever been—now."

"You are not one tenth as happy as I am," said Hillery, "and I will spend the rest of my days trying to be worthy of this great love—trying to make you happy, dear."

"It won't be difficult," said Jane with a tender smile.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

THE DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF HEALING

Some of our humorists like to get something on the specialist in medicine and surgery and will tell the story of the man who swallowed a collar button and wished to have it removed from his stomach. On consulting the specialist and telling him that it was a front collar button, he was politely told that this particular specialist operated for the back collar button only.

Now while this gives rise to a smile, there are folks who think that only one system of medicine or treatment is correct, and anything done by any other system or method must be wrong.

Thus we have health systems, food systems, the system of using enemas and high irrigation of the intestine, physical training systems, massage, chiropractic, and osteopathic systems, mind cures and various other systems, besides the regular system of medicine and surgery. Now what about this?

If you think for a moment, I believe you'll agree that every method and every system has its place, and your common sense will just about direct you properly.

The cause of cancer is unknown, but if cancer be treated early with radium or X-ray, a certain percentage can be cured. Surgery is the only other method of getting rid of cancer, and this too only in the early stages.

Another condition that causes more illness and deaths than anything else is heart disease. There is only one treatment here and that is rest together with the use of digitalis, under the careful supervision of the physician.

Then there are the great number of cases of indigestion even including ulcer of the stomach. The treatment here while medical to some extent, can be handled by proper diet, proper periods of rest, proper periods between meals and so forth.

Accompanying this is constipation and here the proper foods, aided by exercise are indicated.

Then there are conditions where the patient is unable or unwilling to exercise and where his whole system including heart needs stimulation. Neither medicine or surgery is indicated here, but heat, massage, osteopathy, or other mechanical treatment to stimulate the cells of the body to action.

And when the trouble is of the mind or of a mental nature, ministers, priests, the nerve specialist, the psychologist, themental and spiritual healer, can be of help.

About one hundred of the young girl friends of Miss McCulloch were present for the tea and the hour of informal dancing which followed it. The decorations of the room were carried out with decorated Christmas trees and the table was especially charming with its note of Yuletide decoration, combined with a touch of spring in the Maypole idea which centered it. The white cloth was festooned with garlands of silver and gilt tinsel and a broad band of deep crimson ribbon tied at the front in a large bow. A little Christmas tree set in a bank of artificial snow centered the table, surrounded by evergreen branches and with tinsel streamers falling to the cloth beneath. Little streamers of narrow red ribbon from the tree to the cloth ended in tiny fairies with ballet skirts of tulle, silver girdles and star-tipped wands. Little gilt stars adorned the tiny heads of these dolls and the larger fairy at the top of the tree. Tea was poured by Mrs. P. P. Westbye and Mrs. T. N. D. Kelly, and Miss Margaret English cut the ices. Assistants were the Misses Mary Westbye, Mary Denne, Dorothy Kelly, Lahring Parsons, Genevieve Fowler, Mary Comstock, Evelyn Armstrong, Helen Caddy and Frances Jennings. Little Leone Comstock made a charming door attendant.

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

SPACE has been so short for the last few days that I seem to have been crowded out, but when the Christmas and New Year season ends I hope things will be better.

* * * * * *

I'm not the only one to suffer through pressure of the news because I notice some of my favorite features have not been printed for several nights. I WOULD like, though, to get in some of the many letters you neighbors have written me!

* * * * * *

Well, what New Year resolutions are you going to make? You know, at this season of the year it's something like putting on a cloak of repentance and sitting down in dust and ashes.

* * * * * *

We think of all the things we have done during the year, which we should not have done; and we recall, alas, many opportunities we had to do kindnesses, and let pass.

* * * * * *

And then, repentance without reformation being useless, we plan to do better in the year that is about to dawn—and I think most of us succeed, more or less.

* * * * * *

What if we do find, at the end of the next year, just as many different faults to correct? We have at least rectified those we know of now; and if our resolutions don't keep long past the first month, or week, they have still accomplished much.

* * * * * *

I believe in making resolutions at this time of year. The New Year dawns with a flicking over of the leaf to a clean, white sheet, and today we see it about to open in all its pristine beauty.

* * * * * *

Upon that page we shall write, willy-nilly, a record of our achievements and failures, our good deeds and our transgressions, and then . . .

* * * * * *

"The moving finger writes, and having writ
Moves on; nor all thy piety nor wit
Shall jure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all thy tears wipe out a word of it."

* * * * * *

Let's try next year to start the page out fair and neat—and the only way to do it is by resolving. It won't do either, to just resolve to do better. We must have concrete ideas of what we intend to do, and what we wish to avoid doing.

* * * * * *

Then, having made the resolutions, write about them so that the neighbors may know what other neighbors are doing.

* * * * * *

Please write under a pen name, and attach your real name and address. The usual three prizes of stationery and correspondence cards will be given.

* * * * * *

In the meantime, do you wish to have the neighbors judge the competition, as suggested by a correspondent? Please signify your desire on the coupon, and return it to me when asking for helps, when writing, or when sending in your entry.

* * * * * *

The competition will close at midnight on Saturday, January 12, and on that day I will announce how the competition is to be judged, according as you have signified your wishes.

* * * * * *

Here is the coupon:

To Marion, c/o Examiner office:—

I think it would be nice to have the neighbors judge the "New Year Resolution" competition, and I will tell you my opinion as to the best letter, after publication. .....

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

"Gertie" asked me some days ago to tell her who Pandora was, and so I am taking to-day's reading selection from the "Age of Fable," telling the story of Prometheus and Pandora.—M.

December 28, 1928.

The creation of the world is a problem naturally fitted to excite the liveliest interest of man, its inhabitant. The ancient pagans, not having the information on the subject which we derive from the pages of Scripture, had their own way of telling the story, which is as follows:

Before earth and sea and heaven were created, all things were one aspect, to which we give the name of Chaos—a confused and shapeless mass, nothing but dead weight, in which, however, slumbered the seeds of things. Earth, sea, and air were all mixed up together; so the earth was not solid, the sea was not fluid, and the air was not transparent. God and Nature at last interposed, and put an end to this discord, separating earth from sea, and heaven from both. The fiery part, being the lightest, sprang up, and formed the skies; the air was next in weight and place. The earth, being heavier, sank below; and the water took the lowest place, and buoyed up the earth.

Here some god—it is not known which—gave his good offices in arranging and disposing the earth. He appointed rivers and bays their places, raised mountains, scooped out valleys, distributed woods, fountains, fertile fields, and stony plains. The air being cleared, the stars began to appear, fishes took possessinn of the sea, birds of the air, and four-footed beasts of the land.

But a nobler animal was wanted, and Man was made. It is not known whether the creator made him of divine materials, or whether in the earth, so lately separated from heaven, there lurked still some heavenly seeds. Prometheus took some of this earth, and kneading it up with water, made man in the image of the gods. He gave him an upright stature, so that while all other animals turn their faces downward, and look to the earth, he raises his to heaven, and gazes on the stars.

Prometheus was one of the Titans, a gigantic race, who inhabited the earth before the creation of man. To him and his brother Epimetneus was committed the office of making man, and providing him and all otheer animals with the faculties necessary for their preservation. Epimetheus undertook to do this, and Prometheus was to overlook his work when it was done. Epimetheus accordingly proceeded to bestow upon the different animals the various gifts of courage, strength, swiftness, sagacity; wings to one; claws to another, a shelly covering to a third, etc. But when man came to be provided for, who was to be superior to all other animals, Epimetheus had been so prodigal of his resources that he had nothing left to bestow upon him. In his perplexity he resorted to his brother Prometheus, who, with the aid of Minerva, went up to heaven, and lighted his torch at the chariot of the sun, and brought down fire to man. With this gift man was more than a match for all other animals. It enabled him to make weapons wherewith to subdue them; tools with which to cultivate the earth; to warm his dwelling, so as to be comparatively independent of climate; and finally to introduce the arts and to coin money, the means of trade and commerce.

Woman was not yet made. The story (absurd enough!) is that Jupiter made her, and sent her to Prometheus and his brother, to punish them for their presumption in stealing fire from heaven; and man, for accepting the gift. The first woman was named Pandora. She was made in heaven, every god contributing something to perfect her. Venus gave her beauty, Mercury persuasion, Apollo music, etc. Thus equipped, she was conveyed to earth, and presented to Epimetheus, who gladly accepted her, though cautioned by his brother to beware of Jupiter and his gifts. Epimetheus had in his house a jar, in which were kept certain noxious articles, for which, in fitting man for his new abode, he had no occasion. Pandora was seized with an eager curiosity to know what this jar contained; and one day she slipped off the cover and looked in. Forthwith there escaped a multitude of plagues for hapless man—such as gout, rheumatism, and colic for his body, and envy, spite, and revenge for his mind—and scattered themselves far and wide. Pandora hastened to replace the lid! but, alas! the whole contents of the jar had escaped, one thing only excepted, which lay at the bottom, and that was hope. So we see at this day, whatever evils are abroad, hope never entirely leaves us; and while we have that, no amount of other ills can made us completely wretched.

Another story is that Pandora was sent in good faith, by Jupiter, to bless man; that she was furnished with a box, containing her marriage presents, into which every god had put some blessing. She opened the box incautiously, and the blessings all escaped, hope only excepted. This story seems more probably than the former; for how could hope, so precious a jewel as it is, have been kept in a jar full of all manner of evils, as in the former statement?

.....

The comparison of Eve to Pandora is too obvious to have escaped Milton, who introduces it in Book 4 of "Paradise Lost":

"More lovely than Pandora, whom the gods
Endowed with all their gifts; and O, too like
In sad event, when to the unwiser son
Of Japhet brought by Hermes, she insnared
Mankind with her fair looks, to be avenged
On him who stole Jove's authentic fire."

Prometheus and Epimetheus were sons of Iapetus, which Milton changes to Japhet.

MAPLE LEAFS BLANK CORSAIRS 2 TO 0 IN STRENUOUS GAME

Canadiens Avenge Defeat Suffered Last Week By Beating Cougars 3-0.

FEW PENALTIES.

Hawks Win Their Successive Game By Blanking Americans 3-0.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 26 (Canadian Press).—The Toronto Maple Leafs got their revenge from the Pittsburgh Pirates here last night, sending the Corsairs down to a 2-0 defeat in retaliation for the 3-2 victory Pittsburgh earned over the Leafs last week. The game was fast and strenuous, but only one penalty was called, Art Smith being the victim.

No Match For Canadiens.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—A crippled Detroit Cougar team proved no match for Canadiens here last night, and the red-shirted locals scored a well-earned 3 to 0 victory over the Motor City sextet. By winning, the Canucks avenged a 5 to 1 defeat they suffered at the hands of the Cougars at Detroit last week.

Americans Defeated.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—The Chicago Black Hawks, tail-enders in the National Hockey League, won their second successive game and their fourth of the season here last night, handing the League-leading New York Americans a 2 to 0 setback.

TWIN CITY TEAM DEFEATS PRESTON

Green Shirts Trounce Opponents 9-3 in O.H.A. Intermediate Fixture.

KITCHENER, Dec. 28.—The 1928-29 hunt of the Kitchener-Waterloo Green Shirts for the O.H.A. intermediate laurels, which were snatched from their hands by such a narrow margin last year by Port Colborne, was begun auspiciously here last night when they trounced the new Preston-Galt combine by a 9 to 3 score in a fast exhibition of hockey team play. The local squad, which consists of the remnants of last year's senior O. H.A. champions and intermediate finalists, were not extended to register their victory, but they showed wonderful promise.

Wallie Molson was the star performer for the home club, notching three goals, but his place in the spotlight was nearly usurped by "Chuck" Roth and "Honey" Kuntz, who bagged a pair of counters each. The other two tallies were scored by Schmidt and the veteran Allan Shirk, who started his fifteenth O. H. A. campaign in to-night's game. Wallis, the young South Waterloo goalkeeper, was the busiest man on the ice, and he came out of the struggle with colors flying, despite the large count registered against him. He saved dozens of difficult shots, and his work was brilliant throughout On the front line Bettke, Cuicuiro and Liesmer were the best for the visitors.

The teams:

Preston-Galt — Goal, Wallis; defence, Bregman and Kreason; centre, Liesmer; wings, Wade and Gurnett; subs, Cuicuiro and Bettke.

Kitchener-Waterloo—Goal, Ruppell; defence, Shirk and Schneider; centre, Roth; wings, Molson and Schmidt; sub, Kuntz and Moore.

TORONTO AGAIN BEATS DETROIT

Millionaires Blank Olympics 3-0 For Their Second Successive Win.

TIGERS LOSE OUT.

TORONTO, December 28. Canadian Press. — Toronto Millionaires accomplished one feat that all other Canadian Professional Hockey League Clubs have failed to do, when they scored their second successive win over the leading Detroit Olympics and the trick was performed in less than a week, for on Sunday the locals won in the motor town, and then they repeated again by a 3 to 0 score last evening at the Mutual street arena in a stirring battle. The doughboys deserved their victory on the night's play and the right to the position of undisputed holders of third place in the standings.

TIGERS LOSE OUT 2-0.

NIAGARA FALLS, December 20. — Canadian Press. — Hamilton Tigers bowed to a 2 to 0 defeat administered by the Cataracts in last night's Canpro game here. A crowd of 1500 witnessed the tilt, which livened up in spots and produced some good hockey. The teams checked rather closely though the game was well enough punctuated with open hockey to please the thrill loving fans.

LITTLE GOALIE BEST IN GROWING SPORT

Roy Worters Rated As "Babe Ruth" of Professional Hockey.

NEW YORK, December 28. — It must be a wonderful feeling to be a world's chapmoin in anything. Even a champ ping-pong player must have his great moments when he can scan the horizon and murmur, "I can lick 'em all!"

Since all champs carry that feeling of superiority over the field, it is little wonder that the average American youngster would rather be Babe Ruth than Herbert Hoover. And the average Canadian kid would rather be Art Gagne or Roy Worters than be Governor-General of the Dominion.

And the growth of hockey being what it is, the time may not be far off when Young America may be just as ambitious to be a second Roy Worters as he is now to be a second Babe Ruth.

Already there are kids in New York who would just as soon be the four-foot-ten goalie of the New York Americans hockey team as to be the six-foot-one slugger of the New York Yankee ball team.

Worters stands out in his game just as much as the Bambino does in baseball, and despite the disparity in size both have much in common.

Both depend on remarkable eyes, and instinct for their game that makes them always do the right thing at the right time and in the right way, and a love for the sport that rises even beyond all financial considerations.

Worters admittedly is the greatest goalie in the world. His pads and stick are almost as big as he is, but what he lacks in size he more than makes up for in his knowledge of the opposing players, his nimbleness in the net, and his ability to sense the direction of a play.

Goalie or Nothing.

Worters gives an interesting slant on how he took up goal tending. "I always could skate as well as anybody," says the midget, "but I couldn't break in anywhere except as a goalie. Of course, you may say that anybody who wants to be a goalie must have something wrong with his head, but it was either goal tending or nothing. Can you imagine me as a defence man checking some big rough guy like Ching Johnson or King Clancy or Punch Broadbent? And even if I were a wing or centre when any of those big fellows checked me they would probably knock me clean out of the rink.

"A goalie's job is the toughest in hockey. You must always keep your eye on the puck, on all your own men and all the other team at the same time. If you lose track of any of them for an instant you are lost.

"I don't think you will find any game where there is such a big difference in the class of play between the amateurs and pros as in hockey. The amateurs often shoot blindly at the net; the pros never do. Fellows like Billy Burch of the Americans, Bill Cook of the Rangers, and Art Gagne of Les Canadiens are always shooting for a corner of the net.

"Of course, there are players who are particularly tough on a goalie, much the same as Babe Ruth is tough on a pitcher. Some of them are terrific drivers and some of them rely more on tricking you to one side while they shoot into the vacant corner.

Rough on the Eyes.

"When some of the pucks driven by those hard shooters hit you, you feel as if a truck had fallen on you. At that, goal tending isn't the most dangerous spot in the game. Our main care is for our eyes.

"There are some shots on which the angle is so bad and the play so fast and close it is almost impossible to stop them. Ofter a goalie is blamed for the other team's goal when the man with the puck has broken through your defence and got in on you alone. In such cases, the puck shooter is a five to one shot to score. He has everything in his favor.

"The toughest team on a goalie? That's hard to answer. They are all tough enough, but the Canadiens with Gagne, Morenz and Joliat in the forward line, or the Rangers with the Cook brothers and Frank Boucher or the Americans with Burch, Broadbent, Connor, and Himes are about as tough as they come.

COUGARS ENGAGE LEAFS TO-MORROW

Victory For Toronto Will Place Them Second in Group Standings.

TORONTO, December 28. — By winning in Pittsburgh last night the Maple Leafs improved their position in the group race considerably although they are still in fourth place, one point behind the Canadiens, who also scored a shut-out victory. The Habitants and Leafs, however, gained on the two leading teams, the Americans, who lost to the Chicago Hawks, and the Montreal Maroons, who were idle. The Star-Spangled aggregation are now only four points in front of the Leafs, who have played two games less, and wins in their next two engagements at home against Detroit and Rangers, will be of immense value to the Leafs. The Cougars dropped a game last night to the Canadiens, and they will be out to make amends to-morrow night, but the Leafs, with two wins in succession, will be just as determined to make it three in a row.

In the early part of the season the Leafs' defence failed to use their bodies on incoming attackers, and there were lapses in back-checking by the forwards, but of late both these weaknesses have been attended to. In addition, Bill Carson commenced to show the form expected of him, and with the centre man playing his real game the Leafs are much stronger offensively. Bailey and Carson are working well together, and have teamed up for a goal in each of the last two games.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

After 1906 when the Peterborough intermediates won the Ontario championship and the following year when entry into the senior series provided some excitement Peterborough ran into some lean hockey seasons. Whitcroft, Cavanah and other stars had left town and the Peterborough representation in the intermediate series consisted of a few of the older players and a sprinkling of city league graduates.

But there were some hard fought hockey games that provided plenty of thrills nevertheless.

One of these was the battle in Peterborough on Feb. 5, 1909, with the Lindsay Midgets who afterwards won the intermediate champions. The Petes had been beaten in Lindsay and had to win this game to tie up the district. 2,000 people saw the tussle, Lindsay bringing down 250 and they were a sadly disappointed crew for the Peterborough team won 5 to 2 after a gruelling struggle in which Jim Sutherland, well known Kingston hockey menton, who acted as referee, inflicted no fewer than 33 penalties, 21 to the Petes.

Prominent on the Lindsay team was Ken Randall, later to shine for many years as a professional star while the Peterborough line up included Ben Dusty who also jumped to the cash and carry brand later.

It was even going in the first half. Harry Morgan put the Petes in front four minutes after the start but "Goosie" Taylor tied the score for Lindsay in 8 minutes and the teams battled until the rest period without changing the tally.

Rollie Glover put the homesters in front again after 8 minutes hard playing in the second half, making a rink length rush and shooting from the side. Moore and Morgan combined for another making it 3 to 1 and Morgan batted in a rebound for a fourth counter. Koyl, Lindsay's star point player got one back in 30 seconds on a rush with Stoddard and then Charlie Ray, one of the youngsters on the team went in alone to score the fifth and last goal for Peterborough.

Wallie Parnell set a record by drawing seven penalties.

The line up:

Peterborough — Goal, Derocher; point, Glover; cover, Moore; rover, Ray; centre, Morgan; right wing, Parnell; left wing, Dusty.

Lindsay — Goal, Newton; point, Koyl; cover, Sullivan; rover, Stoddard; centre, Taylor; right wing, Randall; left wing, Cotey.

Referee—Jas. Sutherland, Kingston.

PROMOTER SUGGESTS 5,500-MILE FLIGHT

From Rome to Dallas, Texas, Via New York, is Proposed Route.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—A 5,500 mile flight from Rome to Dallas, Texas, by way of New York for a prize of $25,000 or $50,000 was proposed yesterday by Colonel William E. Sherwood, Jr., of Dallas.

Colonel Easterwood, who sponsored a proposed 10,000 mile flight from Dallas to Hong Kong for a prize of $50,000, said that the project had been abandoned in the interests of safety in favor of the shorter trans-Atlantic trans-continental journey.

Colonel Easterwood announced he would sail January 9 for a tour of Europe where he will study European aviation before completing conditions for competition for the prize. He said he was considering Rome, Berlin, Paris and London as starting points for the flight, although he said Rome was the most likely inasmuch as trans-Atlantic aviators already have reached or approached all these cities except Rome.

The prize will be open to fliers of all countries and all types of planes, Colonel Easterwood said. He has not decided on the exact amount of the prize, although it will be $25,000 or $50,000.

MIAMI WILL BE THE SCENE OF FIRST ELIMINATION BOUT

Tex Rickard Promises To Give Details of Match To-day.

SET FOR FEBRUARY 26.

Expected Dempsey Will Meet Winner For World's Heavyweight Crown.

MIAMI, Florida, December 28. Canadian Press. — Tex Rickard has a secret to disclose in Miami to-day. It is that W. L. (Young) Stribling, of Macon, Georgia, will meet Jack Sharkey of Boston, about February at Miami Beach, and that Jack Dempsey will see the fight as a means of deciding whether he will meet the winner.

Of course the New York promoter may have the cards stacked another way, and there is the moral support of Miamians he will interview yet to be considered, but unless deuces are wild the thing is settled.

En route to Miami last night Rickard choked off the Jacksonville, Florida, sporting fraternity, with a statement that he would disclose his secret in Miami at 3 p.m., to-day and no sooner. However he let the scribes know that he had signed three fighters. This last between puffs of a huge Perfecto, which in itself was not without its choking properties.

So, the scribes brilliantly figured it out. Sharkey's manager announced that the Boston cub has signed. Pa Stribling said his acrobatic son would go to Miami to train on January 25; and Dempsey left Salt Lake City with Jerry Luvadis, his trainer, yesterday.

As for the Dempsey corner of the triangle, Rickard had this to say — somewhat more definite than his previous statements:

"I don't know Dempsey's plans but if he thinks he can whip the winner of the Miami fight, I believe he will go in the ring again. If not, he probably will stay in retirement."

Gamache was struck and dragged about twenty feet the police claim. Scott was driving. The car hit two other automobiles also, then continued on its course without stopping, witnesses at the inquest said.

Hockey Interest Aroused In Maritimes By Tours of Canadian College Teams

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The Globe says to-day:—

"The Christmas holiday trip of the Queen's University senior team and the Montreal Victorias to the Maritime Provinces has aroused considerable hockey interest in that part of Canada. The Nova Scotia and the New Brunswick cities where these touring teams will visit are sending strong teams against the invaders, and the result of these contests will furnish a good line on the strength of the senior teams in the Maritimes. Since the Maritime provinces have entered the Allan Cup contention, they have been striving to improve the calibre of hockey in that locality, and the games played there last year by the Toronto Grads on their way to the Olympic games did much to inspire the men who have charge of hockey affairs in the far Eastern centres.

TO INVESTIGATE NOTE.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 28. —(Canadian Press.) — Capt. H. J. Brian, of Kingston, brother of the late Captain of the ill-fated steamer Kamloops, arrived in the city yesterday to investigate the finding of a bottle at Agawa Cove by Louis Coutu, which contained a message purporting to have been thrown overboard last December by the last survivor of the Kamloops, when the vessel went down off Isle Royale in a storm. Capt Brian expressed the opinion that the message was authentic.

FLU

is now Epidemic!

Compared with 1918, this epidemic, so far, is mild; and yet, in spite of vastly increased capacity, the Vicks laboratories are once more operating night and day to meet the emergency demand for more and more Vicks VapoRub. Over 432,000 jars are now being produced daily.

How best to use Vicks VapoRub

1. AS A PREVENTIVE

Several times a day, insert Vicks up the nostrils. Also melt a little night and morning in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming medicated vapors. This helps to ward off germ-infection.

2. IF A COLD STARTS

If possible, go home and go to bed. Take a laxative and a hot lemonade. Apply hot, wet towels over throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. Then rub vigorously with Vicks. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-covering loose, so that the vapors, released by the body-warmth, may be freely inhaled. At the same time, Vicks also acts through the skin like a poultice. Repeat this treatment every four hours, eat lightly, and stay in bed until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body throw off the cold more quickly.

3. AFTER A FLU ATTACK

Physicians advise that the chief danger in this epidemic is after influenza. Then, more than ever, colds, attacking the weakened system, may lead to bronchitis, sinus-trouble, or pneumonia. This is especially true of children or old folks. Heed even the slightest cold as a danger signal. Vicks is especially valuable here, because it is applied externally, and so can be used freely, as often as needed, with upsetting delicate digestions, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Don't miss the theatrical treat of years. Coming to Grand Opera House New Year's night, "The Merchant of Venice," with a real English cast. 3d-153.

AT THE CAPITOL.

BEBE DANIELS IN "TAKE ME HOME"

With Bebe Daniels in one of her entertaining comedy-drama pictures and a tenor soloist Eddie Jackson, who made a great hit in his first appearance last night, the Capitol Theatre has a good program for the week-end.

Mr. Jackson got his audience from the first moment of his appearance and the sound of loud and enthusiastic applause followed him when he disappeared and brought him back for a couple of bows. He has a thrilly tenor voice that possesses odd, resounding note of the radio singer, and his repertoire is evidently an extensive one. During his stay here, he invites the theatre fans to send him the names or ask for any songs they desire to be sung, whether of an old favorite, popular or red hot jazz type. According to Mr. Jackson, jazz songs remain paramount in public opinion.

Last evening, his fine voice and his infectious gayety made him a very popular addition to the program of the evening. He gave a Scotch-English rendition of an old favorite "K-k-k-aty" that brought down the house, also "That Wonderful Mother of Mine" and "Mammy" song.

The feature picture is preceded by a peppy "Collegian" episode, showing the two rival colleges in a prize fight, when Don Trent is the hero, rather than Ed. Benson, as is usually the case. But Ed. helps Don to win the fight and gets his innings in that way.

There is also one of the exquisitely colored brief pictures that are always interesting. It is a rather modern version, as regards language and action, of the famous romance of Anthony and Cleopatra, with the "Dark-browed queen" in a conquering role.

"Take Me Home" is a title that has nothing whatever to do with the picture and appears to have been chosen at random. But Bebe Daniels is as entertaining as ever in the part of a "chorine" as her girl friend calls her, Peggy Lane, who dances in the chorus of a New York Revue and walks home alone every night, even though she is just as good looking as the rest of the group. This picture shows a great deal of back-stage life which is always interesting, and the big scene is a real, honest to goodness fight between Peggy and Derelys De Vore, the leading lady of the show who vamps Peggy's beau and then has Peggy fired from the company. Lilyan Tashman, who seldom makes an appearance here and has a way all her own that gets across in remarkable style, makes a wonderful vamp lady, but Peggy puts it all over her when she rages into her dressing-room and proceeds to fight "like a man" as she puts it. The hero is Neil Hamilton, as Daniel North, befriended by Peggy when he comes from an Idaho farm to break into the "big time" by way of a vaudeville show. It is a rapid-fire picture with plenty of action and interest.—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT.

"CONEY ISLAND," A TRUE PICTURE OF FAMOUS RESORT.

The vagaries of life around the concessions at the world's greatest amusement park, are vividly pictured in "Coney Island," an FBO production, which was shown for the first time last night at the Regent Theatre.

With Lois Wilson, Lucila Mendez, Rudolph Cameron, Eugene Strong and William Irving in the cast, this picture proved extremely entertaining. Ralph Ince, the director, went to great lengths for realism and dramatic intensity. Anyone who is familiar with his Coney Island can understand why it is necessary for Mr. Ince and a company of players to journey three thousand miles from Hollywood to get the atmosphere for this production. The famous resort, which is known throughout the world, makes a colorful setting for this story of love and intrigue.

Miss Wilson, who is well known to theatre patrons here, gave an engaging performance and Lucila Mendez, a newcomer to the screen gives great promise by her work as the exotic cabaret dancer. Miss Mendez, who by the way is Mrs. Ince in private life, brought to her role years of experience on Broadway in musical comedies. Rudolph Cameron, who also is well known on the legitimate stage in New York, made a highly satisfactory young millionaire.

"Coney Island" tells an intensely dramatic story of the ambitions of a young concessionnaire, his love for the beautiful ticket seller at his roller coaster, the intrigue of a grasping politician for control of the amusement centre and the intereference of the young society man and his actress friend. One of the most thrilling scenes in the picture is the panic at the roller coaster on a Fourth of July, with the crowds thrown into a frenzy through the dirty work of the politician's henchmen. This scene reaches such heights that the audience last night fairly gasped at it.

"Coney Island" is one of the outstanding pictures of the year and one that you should put on your preferred list. It will be continued for the remainder of the week at the Regent theatre.

McGill Sextet Loses Fourth Straight Game

BOSTON, Mass., December 28. Canadian Press.—University Club handed McGill University the 4th straight defeat of the current invasion of the United States in the Garden last night. The score was 13 to 3, and it might have been anything so completely did the locals outplay the Canadian visitors. University used every man on its large squad and all combinations outplayed McGill.

BOBCAYGEON IN DIFFERENT GROUP

Intermediates Will Play in League Comprising Marmora and Lakefield.

That the Bobcaygeon Intermediate team will play in the league comprising Marmora and Lakefield was the announcement of Richard Butler, president of the O.H.A., to-day. This change was made because of poor train service between Bobcaygeon and some of the other places in the district in which they had first been grouped.

This leaves in the original group Port Perry, Whitby, Lindsay and Stouffville. The convenor of the northern group, F. Martin, stated that there was no need to alter the schedule, but that the games to be played with Bobcaygeon will just be dropped out.

The game scheduled for to-night between Stouffville and Lindsay cannot be played because of the absence of ice. The Lindsay management are planning to have the game played a week later on January 4, which is an open night in the schedule.

Bobcaygeon Juniors stack up against the Lindsay Midgets in the Scugog town on New Year's Eve and all indications point to a battle royal.

LITTLE CHANGE IN KING'S CONDITION

This morning's bulletin was regarded in Palace circles as slightly less disquieting in character. It was pointed out that the advance made by His Majesty during the last twelve hours was very slight and that anxiety at the Palace was lessened only to a small extent.

An important feature of the bulletin was the statement that the King's general condition does not show the same progress. It is His Majesty's general condition which is the physicians' chief concern and it will not be until this shows a considerable improvement that, it was stated, any more definite progress can be made.

The fact that the local condition continues to show progress, although satisfactory, is not felt to be of immediate importance. The good sign in the bulletin, as interpreted in well-informed circles, was that the doctors were finding it less difficult to-day to induce the King to take the nourishment necessary for building up his strength.

Little Improvement Shown

That the King's general state slightly improved during the past 12 hours indicated to Palace officials that the hope expressed last night that he might regain some of the lost ground has been justified to a small extent.

Sir Stanley Hewett left the Palace during the noon hour. Sir Humphrey Rolleston and Sir E. Farquhar Buzzard, who had been in the royal residence for more than three hours, departed shortly afterwards, while Lord Dawson of Penn remained another hour with the understanding that he would return during the afternoon.

The Prince of Wales visited at the Palace during the morning. Princess Mary, who had intended going to the Lascelles home in Yorkshire, will remain at the Palace for the time being.

The crowd around the Palace gates which had been comparatively small for several days when the reports indicated that the King's condition was taking a better turn, was much larger this morning. Men and women stood in the cold, damp air for hours until the bulletin was issued. Anxious to see if there had been any change in His Majesty's condition during the night. Relief was manifested when the bulletin was posted indicating that such change as had taken place had been slightly for the better.

Harness Horse Association Holds Annual Meeting in Toronto.

SEEK AMALGAMATION.

Arthur W. Blade was re-elected a director of the Dominion Harness Horse Association at the annual meeting in Toronto on Wednesday. J. H. Lock of Toronto was re-elected president by acclamation.

The chief business of the convention was the discussion of overtures from the National Trotting Association toward an amalgamation which the National Association has been suggesting for some time. The harness men have taken the position that they are favorable toward union providing it is on their terms. In other words, they demand that horse owners shall be entitled to membership, which they now enjoy in their own Harness Horse Association. This condition will remain essential to any amalgamation that may be effected.

Bolivian Forces Advance Twelve Miles Farther Into Interior of Paraguay.

GRAVE SITUATION.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 28 (Canadian Press).—The Paraguayan Government last night advised its legation here that Bolivian forces "have occupied Fort Vanguardia and have advanced twelve miles farther into the interior."

Fort Vanguardia was the scene of the initial encounter between the troops of the two countries, which started the present controversy.

The despatch of the Paraguayan government said that A very grave situation again has been created."

THE GAS PLANT BY-LAW

When the Provincial Government, in order to supply publicly-owned electric power in this district, purchased the holdings of the Electric Power Company, they had to take over other utilities along with the power developments, including gas plants in Peterborough and other places. The Government desires to dispose of these other utilities, so that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission may concentrate on its proper function, for which it was organized, that is, the development and transmission of electricity. For that reason it intends to sell the Peterborough gas plant, and has offered it to this City before trying to sell it to private interests.

The purchase of the gas plant will not affect the borrowing powers of the municipality, or add to the taxes, because this utility, like the waterworks and the electric power and light, will carry itself, for the revenue from it will pay the running expenses and also the interest on the debentures and the principal of the debentures as they become payable. By paying off the debentures from the receipts from the sale of gas, the debt will be wiped out when the last instalment of principal is paid, and the people will own the plant free from this debt.

The street franchise was given to the Peterborough Gas Company in 1869. There is no time fixed in the By-law granting the right for it to expire, and this is a very valuable franchise. If the plant is sold to a private company this right to use the streets will go with it, but by purchasing the plant the citizens will recover this franchise and prevent it again falling into private hands.

WEDDING BELLS

WATERMAN—TAGGART

The United Church at Westport, Ontario, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at the noon hour on Wednesday, December the twelfth, when Renette Gertrude, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Taggart, became the bride of Willard Gordon Waterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waterman, of Fraserville.

Rev. T. F. Townsend, B.A., B.D., performed the ceremony. The bride, who was unattended, entered the church with her father, to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Ethel Waterman, sister of the groom. The Westport Dramatic Club, of which the bride was a valued member, acted as "Guard of Honor." The bride's gown was of rose beige crepe de chine and transparent velvet. She worn a gold metallic picture hat and carried Madam Butterfly roses. The aisles and chancel of the church were prettily decorated with ferns and roses. Mr. Jack Cameron, cousin of the bride, acted as usher. Following the ceremony, Mrs. T. F Townsend sang, This Day of Golden Promise."

After the church ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Concession street. The dining room was beautifully decorated in white and rose.

Amidst a shower of confetti and good wishes, Mr. and Mrs. Waterman left by motor for Montreal. The bride travelled in a plum-colored cut velvet dress, and seal coat.

The many beautiful gifts received testify to the popularity of the bridal couple.

The out-of-town guests included, Mrs. Waterman, mother of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Finlay, Miss Ethel Waterman, and Mrs. J. A. Vance.

BIGELOW—HUDSON

A pretty Christmas wedding was solemnized on Tuesday morning at the Springeville manse, when Dorothy Mae Hudson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold V. Hudson, of Detroit, Michigan, became the bride of Gordon J. Bigelow of Peterborough, younger son of Mr. Robert H. Bigelow and the late Mrs. Bigelow, of Cavan. The Rev. A. H. McConnachie officiated.

The bride was gowned in Madeline blue georgette, the only trimming being a bow of chiffon velvet in periwinkle blue. She wore a Soleil hat to match, gray suede slippers and hose to match, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. Her only ornament was the gift of the bridegroom, a genuine crystal set in a white gold brooch.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Harold D. Bigelow of Crow Lake, the latter wearing a gown of rose georgette and carrying a shower bouquet of Briarcliffe roses.

After the ceremony, the wedding party and immediate relatives received in the parlor of the Empress Hotel, where a wedding dinner was served from a table centered by the bride's cake and decorated in pink and white.

Mr. Bigelow and his bride left for a wedding trip through the border lake states, the bride travelling in a frock of jungle green with hat to match and seal coat with grey squirrel collar and cuffs. She wore tan shoes and hose and gloves, and pocketbook to match. On their return, they will live at 280 Hunter street west.

Federal Minister Prophesies Old Age Pensions In Ontario

Hon. Peter Heenan Tells of the Great Strides Made in Recent Years To Improve Lot of Laboring Man and His Family in Ontario.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA IN ADDRESS IN TRADES AND LABOR HALL

Act At Present Has Been Adopted By All Western Provinces Except Alberta—Minister Claims Present Law Is Only First Step in Right Direction.

"I don't want to talk out of turn, but I am prepared to state on good authority that the Ontario Government, at their next session will likely adopt and bring into force in this province the Old Age Pension Act," said Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Labor in the Federal House, speaking in the hall of the Trades and Labor Council here last evening. Mr. Heenan came under the auspices and invitation of the local Trades and Labor Council, and although the meeting was not largely attended, a fair representation of those interested in labor problems in this district were present to hear his most inspiring and instructive talk dealing with the great strides that have been made in recent years to improve the lot and conditions of the laboring man and his family in Canada.

J. J. Hartley, in former years a president of the local branch of the Trades and Labor Council, presided as chairman of the meeting in the absence through illness of President Tom McMurray.

"On my previous visit to Peterborough, I was not only surprised but delighted with the splendid industrial progress that I saw during an inspection of the factories. The size and most modern electrical plant of the C. G. E., especially impressed me, and I can prophecy an even greater future for those engaged in the manufacture of electrical apparatus and appliances. Cheap power is the basis of all industry to-day.

Improvements in Labor.

"I have, as you know, been chiefly interested in labor problems, and I have been able, perhaps, through the co-operation and aid of others, to do something to help those conditions in our country. I was one of those who helped to fight for compensation for disabled workmen, and the act was first passed by the Ontario government in 1914; since then by steady urgings it has been improved until to-day it is without doubt the best compensation act operating in any country in the world. Before this act was passed all such matters and claims of injured workmen had to be brought into the law courts and very few it was to receive allowance for injuries suffered. The act of 1914 was never accepted as final, and since that time noted improvements have been made, chiefly in 1920. Now annually more than $6,000,000 are paid out as compensation to workmen."

Mr. Heenan dealing further with the question of the benefits of Social legislation to the workers, mentioned the Mother's Allowance Act, and the Minimum Wage Act for Women and Girls. He also spoke of the strenuous work accomplished in gaining the resolution adopted by the Provincial House of fair wages, and the timber and water power leases. After doing great work in the Ontario Government Mr. Heenan continued into the wider field of the Federal Parliament, and he was forthwith handed over the respnsible portfolio of Minister of Labor, which was established by Mackenzie King, while yet fresh from college to cope with labor problems. Since Mr. Heenan took charge of the department the Union Labor Act has been passed which has been a great aid in the recognition of Union made goods. Also a fair wage has been established in the timber and water power industries.

Nine Branches.

Speaking of his department, he said —"There are nine important branches which really deserve an hour of discourse each in describing their detail importance; all contribute to the national life of the country." The annuities grants under the present regime have increased ten times during the last ten years; in 1918 there were 214 grants totalling $431,000 and for the first ten months of the present year there have been 1223 grants, reaching a sum of $3,843,000. There is another important department, which is growing ever increasingly important, that handling Old Age pensions. These pensions have been adopted by every western province except Alberta and at the present time all indications point that Ontario and New Brunswick will shortly bring them into effect too.

'FUL' EPIDEMIC IS SPREADING

Shows No Signs of Abatement As Far As Toronto Is Concerned

NOT SEVERE TYPE.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 29. Canadian Press. — The influenza epidemic so far as the city of Toronto is concerned, showed no signs of abatement to-day. Five deaths were reported from the hospitals over night and a number of others died at their homes.

Physicians are quoted as expressing the opinion that the epidemic is spreading in the city. The nursing situation is serious with a great number of nurses themselves suffering.

Close to 500 patients are in the various hospitals suffering from influenza or its variations.

The Board of Management of the Separate school has announced the Christmas vacation is extended to January 7th. The re-opening set for Jan. 3rd, was postponed because of the prevalence of influenza. A decision regarding the re-opening of the Public schools will be made later, it was stated to-day.

SPREADING THROUGHOUT DOMINION.

OTTAWA, December 29. Canadian Press. — "Influenza is spreading throughout Canada, and we have the epidemic. But theer is nothing to indicate that we are in for a big epidemic." This was the statement of Dr. A. J. Amyot, Deputy Minister of

Attorney-General Has Not Ordered Body Of Woman In Cornwall To Be Exhumed

CORNWALL, Ont., December 29 (Canadian Press). — Chief of Police Seymour of Cornwall, acting in conjunction with the Montreal authorities in an effort to solve the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. George C. Schnabel, of Montreal, stated last night that no word had yet been received from the Attorney-General's Department, ordering exhumation of the body of a woman found in the canal near Moulinette some weeks ago, and interred here.

The body when found was in an advanced state of decomposition and was interred without being embalmed.

A report was current here last night that a dentist who had attended Mrs. Schnabel had been located in Montreal, and that he would be brought to Cornwall in an effort to establish identity, if the body is ordered exhumed.

Blacksmith Is Burned to Death

APPLIED BRAKE TOO QUICKLY ON SLIPPERY ROAD

Inquest Is Held Into Death On Provincial Highway of Arthur R. Reynlods.

RECOMMEND SIGN.

Several Witnesses Tell of How Accident Occurred On Christmas Night.

We, your jury, find that the said Arthur R. Reynolds, of Peterborough, came to his death on the 26th of December, 1928, at the hour of 2 a.m., caused by the applying of brakes too quickly on a slippery road ,which caused the car to skid into the ditch. The said Arthur Reynolds thereby came to his death by a fractured skull. The accident happened about 2 and 1-2 miles west of Peterborough on the Provincial Highway, Number 28."—Herbert J. McCannan, foreman.

A rider submitted with the verdict read: We, the undersigned, recommend the erection of a checkerboard sign at the intersection of the two roads.

Thus, after an half hour of deliberation, the jury empanelled by Coroner T. W. H. Young expressed itself last night, having first heard the evidence of police officers, a doctor and companions of the late Arthur R. Reynolds, of 364 Mark street, who met his death while at the wheel of a motor car on the above mentioned highway last Wednesday morning.

Held in the city police court room in the city buildings, the inquest was attended by a large number, and but for the length of time required for the reaching of the verdict would have terminated within the hour.

County Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K. C., represented the Crown, while the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K. C., held a private brief, taking no part in the inquest.

Car Skidded Before.

George Stevens, Sr., father-in-law of the dead man, was the first witness. He had been a passenger in the car on the night of the accident but could recall only scattered details. He told of the journey from Toronto to the scene of the fatality, mentioning that on several occasions the car had skidded owing to the icy condition of the highway. His son, riding beside Reynolds, had shouted a warning to not apply the brakes as the car began its fatal skid, and the next that the witness could recall was of his attempting to regain his feet after the car had turned over. Reynolds was dead then, he believed.

George Stevens, Jr., of Newcastle, Pennsylvania, retained a more consistent recollection of the accident, and events surrounding it. He stated that the highway had appeared quite bare, but that in reality it was very slippery, for it was difficult to walk upon. The car had skidded, struck one of the white stones which outline the turn, and catching the right rear bumperette upon a telephone pole, had turned over twice. "It was a clear, moonlight night and there were other cars coming toward us," said the witness. "We were coming from Toronto and travelling at about 25 or 30 miles an hour when it occurred. If we hadn't put on the brakes, we probably would have made it without an accident. It happened right at the intersection where the dirt road joins the highway."

Charles Stevens.

The other passenger in the ill-fated car who escaped injury, was the third witness, namely Charles Stevens of Napanee father of the first and grand father of the second witness. He did not recall details of the accident, though he had heard and agreed with the evidence previously submitted. He added that Reynolds had been a capable driver and had driven carefully that night.

Went to Scene of Accident.

Sergeant Arthur Thomas, of the City Police Force, told of going to the scene of the accident, after receiving a call to do so, at two o'clock. He and Constaple John Naples had driven out, and had found the roads slippery. He had discovered Reynolds dead (as near as an examination of pulse and heart beat could discern) with injuries to his skull.

Constable John Naples corroborated the evidence of Sergeant Thomas, who recalled, described how a second car, in coming to a stop at the scene of the accident, had skidded into the ditch as a result of the application of its brakes.

More Detailed Examination.

Provincial Constable H. Thompson had reached the scene of the accident at 2.05 a.m., and on examination of the car, had found a broken rib in the top, corresponding with the location of a fracture of the dead man's skull.

A telephone pole, about four feet from the travelled portion of the highway had been struck, while the white stones marking the turn, bore marks corresponding with the course of the

Marmora Man Ailing; Blaze Is Unexplained

Charred Remains of Benjamin Osborne Are Recovered Early This Afternoon By Villagers From Partially Destroyed Building.

CORONER DR. W. HARPER, OF MADOC IS SUMMONED WORRY OVER BAD HEALTH CONSIDERED CAUSE

MARMORA, Dec. 29. — (Examiner Correspondence). — Benjamin Osborne, 65-year-old resident of this village, lost his life in a fire which partially destroyed the barn, located adjacent to his home at 11 o'cock this morning. His charred remains were found by villagers who rushed to the scene and who believe that he was in the barn with closed doors when a quantity of hay, stored therein took fire. At 2:15 this afternoon the arrival was awaited of Coroner Dr. W. Harper of Madoc and provincial police officers, and it is presumed that a preliminary inquest will be held immediately.

The late Mr. Osborne had suffered from ill health for some time, and only a few weeks ago was missing from his home for more than a day, only to be found by a search party. His wife is living, and in addition, there is on son, Ernest in Winnipeg and two daughters, Dora and Marion.

As it was a small barn, the insurance was not considered an important detail and Mr. Osborne was known to be worried by state of his health.

COMMANDER EVA BOOTH CLAIMS SHE IS NOT PUSHING FORWARD AS NEW HEAD OF SALVATIONISTS

American and Canadian Army Linked Life Family Declares Leader.

CHANGE IN CONSTITUTION.

Refuses To Forecast Possible Decision To Be Reached By the High Council.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 29.—(Special Cable By Henry Somerville; Copyright).—I saw Commander Eva Booth in her London hotel to-day where she is besieged by newspaper correspondents. A hospitable welcome was given to a Canadian inquirer, for, she says, "I am a former Canadian. I was in Canada nine years, and Toronto was my home. I left for the United States twenty-five years ago but I was kept closely in touch with Canadian affairs.

"American and Canadian Salvationists" she continued "are closely linked, like one large family. They stand for the principle of international solidarity in the army. There is no truth in the suggestion that the American Salvation Army is disposed to cut itself off from the international body."

Speaking of her brother's illness, she said she had intended to come to visit him earlier, but reports were that he was improving and that there was no urgency. Miss Booth has already got in touch with the general's family and hopes to be allowed to see him, though his doctor has forbidden his being informed that high council has been called. Commander Booth says that though she had no part in calling high council, she is glad the step has been taken.

For a number of years she had been talking to her brother about the need of a constitutional change in Salvation Army, she declared, and in October 1927, she gave her ideas concrete shape and submitted fifteen points which required consideration, the two principal matters being the appointment to the generalship, and the trusteeship of the property of the Salvation Army.

Trust From Father

Her brother took the view that he received the existing constitution as a trust from his father, and that he must hand it down unimpaired to his successor. Commander Eva replied to this by saying that what is asked of the General is that he should exercise powers given in trust deed and provided an acceptable method by which a successor may be chosen.

Speaking of the possibility that she may herself be elected General, Miss Booth said, "I am not putting myself forward as a candidate, but if the choice fell on me I would take it as the Will of God."

The commander added that not only were American Salvationists unanimous in supporting constitutional changes, but practically every leading officer in the world takes the same view.

She refused to forecast the possible decision of the High Council. A member of her staff spoke more definitely: "It is inevitable that the democratic principle of election must ultimately prevail through all ranks of the Army. The first thing to do is to abolish autocracy in the appointment of the general. The founder, William Booth was a wonderful man, and he was able to persuade the conference to make him autocrat, with the power of appointing his successor, but you connot in practice bequeath an autocracy. The Salvation Army must come into line with the democratic sentiments of the day. You can take it that when Commander Eva Booth speaks, she speaks for America. The High Council has technically no power to make changes in the constitution. It con only deal with the appointment of a new general, but when you have heard representatives of eighty-two countries, it is certain that the whole question of the Army's constitution will be discussed."

Ex-Soldier Gets Card After Eleven Years

PORT CREDIT, Ont., December 29. — Canadian Press. — Dr. C. A. Dudgeon, Port Credit, yesterday received a Christmas greeting, more than eleven years after it had been written by a wartime pal. The letter was addressed to him in Sussex, on Dec. 23, 1917, when he was serving in France. The envelope was weighed down with stamps that had been affixed to it in its wanderings over Europe and North America.

KING GEORGE IS PUTTING UP BIG STRUGGLE

Margin of Safety For His Majesty Is Considered To Be Very Narrow.

GIFT OF SOLUTION.

England Wonders Whether King Has Been Suffering From Unconsciousness.

LONDON, Dec. 29. — (Canadian Press.— It was generally felt to-day that the margin of safety for King George continued very narrow. The report of the maintenance of a slight improvement during yesterday was welcomed but it has done little to allay the anxiety generally felt over the loss of strength of Thursday.

Some of the views of medical writers in the morning newspapers on the King's condition were very gloomy. The medical expert of the Daily Mail said to-day that recently the King had not made progress but at best he was just holding his own and there had been considerable periods of unconsciousness. Hope that progress would continue until he had gained some of his lost strength has unhappily for the moment been deferred."

The gift of a quantity of Dakin's solution by Dr. William O'Neill Sherman of Pittsburgh has aroused considerable public interest. It was generally understood that the employment of the solution forms no part of the new measures which it was intimated the King's doctors were contemplating in the hope of bettering his general condition. It was thought that the solution would be used merely for the treatment of the local trouble in the chest.

Dr. Sherman who is chief surgeon for the Carnegie Steel Co. at Pittsburgh was associated with Lord Dawson of Penn one of the King's physicians during the Great War. The solution was stated to be a preparation of sodium hypo-chloride and was used by the Allied armies for sterilization of wounds.

Danger Not Overcome.

While it was noted that the last two bulletins indicated that the dangerous relapse of Thursday had been brought at least temporarily at a standstill it was felt that the danger had not yet been overcome.

The medical expert of the Daily Mail pointed out that the inter-dependence of the trouble from the chest abcess and the extreme weakness of the general condition. He siad that the chest trouble could not be healed without borrowing strength from all the body reserves. These reserves must necessarily have been severely taxed already and now have little to spare. Even that little was already heavily mortgaged for the maintenance of the functions of life itself and these reserves can only recover strength from nourishment and rest. That the King's physicians were able to report a greater disposition to take food and the enjoyment of a quieter sleep was therefore welcomed and formed some ground for hope.

There naturally was intense interest in any hint of a new method of treatment for the stricken ruler and in addition to that aroused by the American contribution of an antiseptic solution received yesterday which it is hoped will prove helpful, an unofficial suggestion that a blood transfusion would likely be employed excited the public imagination keenly. It was stated authoritatively this afternoon, however, that this has not been considered by the King's doctors.

New Course of Medicine.

It was understood that the measures yesterday upon yesterday for the purpose of increasing His Majesty's general strength relate to a new course of medicine.

England continues to wonder whether the King has been suffering from periods of unconsciousness. This has been definitely stated in the press, but neither the bulletins nor the unofficial palace statements mention this condition.

A larger crowd than usual for the last few days waited outside Buckingham Palace this morning to watch the arrival and departure of the doctors and the posting of the bulletin.

Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Hugh Rigby the noted surgeon, arrived at 9.50 o'clock this morning. Sir Hugh left at 11.35 and Lord Dawson at 12.20.

The Prince of Wales went hunting with the Belvoir Hounds to-day, thus indicating that anxiety in the Royal family had been allayed at least a little, as the Prince had planned to cancel his week-end hunting program.

Faithful Attention To New Year's Affairs Is Promised By All

None Anticipate Any Major Problems in 1929 Affairs — Some Have Special Objective in View, But All Are For Bigger and Better Peterborough.

ONE ADVOCATES CIVIC PLANNING COMMISSION WHICH WILL PROTECT BEAUTY SPOTS IN CITY

Another Suggests Making James Stevenson Park a Thing of Beauty, As the Present System of Spending $500 a Year Is Not Making Any Permanent Improvements to Park.

Peterborough's seven candidates for the Aldermanic board expressed in interviews with The Examiner to-day a common desire to assume an active part in the administration of the city's business. None of them anticipated any major problems in the course of the new year's affairs, and in their statements to the electors they promise faithful attention to the duties they are willing to assume, and a forward looking attitude on all questions which are presented to them.

Some of the candidates have special objectives in view, but on the whole their appeals are similar in their promises of the application of their time and abilities to the city's affairs.

Candidates for the Board of Education also tell of educational lines they will follow, if elected on January 1st.

Ald. Huffman

"There has been a general improvement of the streets of the city during the past year and this should be carried on in 1929 and following years.

"James Stevenson Park to me is a disgrace to the city. The parks on the water front at Cobourg and Oshawa attract outsiders. This park should be put into shape at once if possible by issuing debentures in payment of the work. The future citizens will benefit and should help pay for it. The present system of spending $500.00 a year will never get anything done right.

"Our bathing beaches need to be cleaned up and put in shape. The one at Inverlea should have a decent building where the people could disrobe. The present building is unfit for this.

"A woman's rest room down town has been talked of and should be given attention this year.

"It has been said that economy is money well spent. In asking for re-election, I submit that the council for 1928 has been economical."

JOHN A. McNABB.

"If honored with the confidence of the ratepayers by my election, I will endeavor to advocate the establishment of a thoroughly qualified and active industrial committee for the purpose of interesting manufacturing institutions to locate their factories in Peterborough," was Mr. J. A. McNabb's comment.

"I would also advocate a city planning commission whose duty it would be to protect our beauty spots and residential districts from value depreciation by the location near them of undesirable structures.

"It is only by industrial growth and the location of new industries that our city will grow and prosper, and unless active attention is given to that branch of the city's enterprise, it is impossible for our mercantile and residential sections to expand.

"If I am promoted to the City Council by the electors, I will go there to give the city's business the best that is in me. My stand on every question will always be in the interest of the ratepayers. I have a keen desire to see Peterborough grow to that position which we all believe the near future has in store for us as a community, and it would be a great privilege to have an active part in creating that expansion. As a ratepayer and a business man my interests are the same as those of all the electors, and it is through a desire to be of public service that I offer myself as a candidate for the Council."

ALD. MALCOLM McINTYRE.

ering from a rather severe attack of ering form a rather severe attack of the "flu," and was able to be out for the first time to-day to insert an election card in the advertising columns of the Examiner. He said he did not feel much like even talking, but hoped to be fully recovered in a few days.

Ald. McIntyre has been a member of the Council for nine years. This

KING SOLOMON WAS FIRST KING

Afghans Claim Descent From One of Lost Tribes of Children of Israel.

WAR-LIKE NATURE.

The Afghan revolt now raging reveals itself as a war among the clouds between peoples who claim descent from a lost tribe of Israel, in one of the most romantic and little known nations of the world.

Thousands of feet up, in the passes of the Hindu Kush Mountains, Mohammedans who claim descent from King Saul of Israel, although this is disputed, are fighting one another for possession of the throne which some native historians declare was founded by King Solomon himself.

King Saul, they say, had a son named Peremiah, who had a son called Afghana. The many children of Afghana were deported by Nebuchadnezzar and made their way to the Mountains of Ghor and Feroza, east and north of Herat.

The Beni-Israel (Arabic for Children of Israel) as native chroniclers call the Afghans, are now merely carrying out the warlike traditions of their race. The present revolution is another act in the military drama of their country, in which the Afghan revolt of 1924, the Anglo-Afghan war of 1919, and the two Anglo-Afghan wars of 1878 and 1838 and 1641 were episodes.

Perhaps the most conclusive instance of the Afghan spirit was the total annihilation of a British force of 8000 men and 12,000 followers, including regulars and natives, in the first Afghan war. Only one survivor (Dr. Brydon) reached Jalalabad with one of the most terrible tales any man has ever related.

Loyal Troops Victorious.

Advices to the Afghan Legation from the Foreign Office at Kabul tell of victories by troops loyal to King Amanullah of Afghanistan over the rebels on two fronts. The rebel movement in the eastern province was losing ground and the northern rebels were in full flight.

The legation denied a rumor that King Amanullah intended to abdicate in favor of his son.

The advices stated that northern rebels were being pursued in order to compel their submission. The capital itself was in a normal state.

The position of the government at Jalalabad was stated to be strong and the important Mohmand tribe was assisting the government troops against the Shinwaris, with whom the government was negotiating for peace. The government stated that the Shinwaris were not making any anti-foreign demands as the price of peace, and that it was untrue that expulsion of all foreign legations from Kabul had been ordered.

Famous English Hunter Is Killed Riding With Prince Wales At Belvoir Hunt

COLSTON BASSETT., Nottinghamshire, Eng., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press)—The hunt of the Belvoir hounds with which the Prince of Wales rode to-day was marked by a tragedy in the death of the famous English hunting man, William Wroughton, of Melton Mowbray, whose horse fell at a high fence and rolled on him. Another rider who fell at the same fence escaped injury.

Wroughton was former master of the Pytchley Hunt.

The accident took place not far from where the Prince of Wales was riding, but the Prince himself did not witness the fall.

Wroughton, who was over seventy years old, has had a number of minor hunting accidents during the last three seasons and had expressed the wish that when his time came to die it would be in he hunting field.

Neighbours Tell Story Of Rawdon Fire

BODY OF MURRAY BURNED BEYOND ALL RECOGNITION IS FOUND NEAR BARN DOOR

Richard Meiklejohn Questioned By Police As To What He Found When He Arrived at the Fire—Building Had Partly Fallen In.

CORONER DR. ALGER, OF STIRLING, ORDERS INQUEST FEW COINS FOUND IN ASHES NEAR BODY

CAMPBELLFORD, December 29 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Soon after one o'clock yesterday afternoon, the smouldering ruins of Morley Murray's barn gave up the remains of his charred body, and established the fact that he had been burned. The incidents leading up to his death will be all that the jury will have to assist them in arriving at the cause of his demise. Immediately after the remains were found, the coroner was called by the Provincial Police, who had charge of the search, and as soon as possible a jury was formed to view the remains and permit burial. The last rites will be performed on Sunday afternoon with interment in Rylestone Cemetery.

Since the fire was first noticed on the evening of December 26, the belief that the owner was in the barn has increased to almost a certainty till his charred body was taken from the ruins to-day and turned supposition into fact. Burned to a crisp and beyond recognition, practically, as that of a human, the blackened object was found to have small particles of clothing adhering to it with metal buttons and buckles. A few coins were found almost on the same spot and also the metal top of a leather purse. The metal clasp was the final mark of identification which proved to the satisfaction of the relatives that the body was that of Murray.

"There's no use looking any longer, boys. That's him."

These were the words of Melville Fitzgerald, husky with emotion, when he looked closely at the burned trunk of the human body that had been his wife's brother. Later when the coroner asked for any person who could identify the form, Fitzgerald said that he knew the purse well and that there could be no doubt but that the body was that of Murray. Satisfied, Coroner Alger of Stirling issued the permit for burial.

Neighbors Assist in Search.

It has been a long weary vigil for the relatives and hosts of friends from the entire district who have carried on the search of the ruins. Yesterday they were still smoking and an occasional flicker of flame danced in certain corners. Anxious to learn the fate of their friend and neighbor, the men of the district had begun a detailed search of the ashes. A group of them found the object of their search in the south-west corner of the ruins, less than ten feet from a door which would have meant safety and life had the unfortunate man been able to open it. At first it was thought to be an animal, since several carcasses had been found nearby. But a button attached to a bit of cloth, gave them pause, and upon more minute examination showed them that their search was almost at an end. Close investigation of the ashes on the spot, revealed several bits of bone from the skull and other parts of the body. There were also several teeth located. Coins and the metal clasp of a purse completed the findings.

No Will Made

Dr. Alger, the coroner from Stirling, was immediately summoned. While awaiting his arrival, the provincial police ordered the remains to be left untouched and went into the room where Murray had apparently eaten his breakfast on Wednesday morning. John Murray, brother of the deceased, and Melville Fitzgerald, a brother-in-law, were also in the room. After taking careful note of the stove a fire was lighted and the case discussed unofficially. It was said that the barn was well insured and that the missing man was believed to be carrying a certain amount of life insurance As nearly as could be learned, there was no will ever made by the unfortunate man. He was a member of the Orange Order several years ago and also of the Oddfellows. He was a regular attendwas a man of temperate habits. The was a man of temperae habits. The meeting in the school which he attended on the last day he was seen alive, was not a meeting of the trustees, but a general meeting of the ratepayers of the section. His brother and brother-in-law said that the deceased was not a member of the board.

Richard Meiklejohn, the first man to arrive at the fire on the night of December 26, was summoned by the police, and questioned as to how he learned of the fire and what he found when he arrived. Meiklejohn admitted readily that he was the first man at the fire and said he saw nobody around. "It was a bright moonlit night," he said, "and he was coming back from Springbrook. On the way he passed the Murray home and did not see a light in the window of the house or around the barns. There was no fire showing then, he claimed, or he is sure he would have noticed it. He said he had formed a habit of looking for Murray's light when passing at night. On the fatal night, he passed shortly after ten o'clock and had only been in his own home about ten minutes when he heard the phone ring. His wife answered it and told him that there was a fire either at the school house or at Morley Murray's. He at once put on a pair of rubber-laced boots and hurried over to Murray's in the car. He was the first there and tried to waken Murray by shouting to him through the windows. But he could not make anyone hear and, noticing that the car was gone, decided that Murray was not at home. The northern portion of the roof had already fallen in, and the fire seemed to be mostly in that end of the building.

He burst in a door and managed to save a few stray hens that had intended to spend the night in the barn rather than in the hen house. There was an opening and he could see into the cattle stalls. He noticed that there were no cows in the stable and that the chains which tethered them when stabled were hung orderly on their hooks. By that time others began to arrive on the scene and they went to the lower doors of the building. The pigs began to squeal and they tried to open a door to get at them. But the doors were fast, and when one was finally battered down, it was too late.

All the time, everyone kept expecting Murray to return, thinking that word of the affair would be sure to reach him if he were anywhere within a wide radius. As time went on hope dwindled. Friends and relatives in Campbellford, Stirling, and Springbrook, where he sometimes went, were called without finding any trace of the missing man.

Jury Picked.

Dr. Alger arrived at two twenty-five, and lost no time in selecting a jury. The nine men were all from the neighborhood. They were: Sidney Mason, foreman; Everett Heath,

CHEESEMAKERS SET HIGH OBJECTIVE

200,000 MEN WITHOUT WORK IN COAL FIELDS

Not a Question of Demand For Higher Wages Or Unwillingness To Work

FAILING DEMAND.

Children Are Facing Rude Welsh Winter Without Proper Clothing Or Shoes.

MERTHYR TYDFIL, South Wales, Dec. 28. — (By George Hambleton, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press. —Two hundred thousand men are wearily tramping the streets of the mining villages of England and Wales without work and with little hope of work. In the phrase of the official statistician, they are the permanent surplus of the coal-mining industry

There is no question of a demand for high wages, or an unwillingness to work. They have been caught in the nip of a failing demand. The development of Hydro-Electric energy, the conversion of big passenger liners and warships to the use of oil fuel, and a reduced demand for coal in other directions has left the miners high and dry. Their savings are gone and they are seeking out a meagre existence on the so-called dole or poor law relief or public charity. They are rapidly approaching destitution.

Travelling through the mining districts one hears story after story of a mother sacrificing herself for her children. In South Wales the school teachers themselves are contributing part of their salaries to keep the children shod Yet, despite all this, despite national appeals from the pulpit, through the press and the radio. In some Welsh villages 60 per cent. of the children are facing the rude winter of the mountains without proper clothes and shoes.

Desire For Migration Small.

So far there is no evidence of a widespread desire for migration. Some of the miner-harvesters who went to Canada last fall declare their intention to return the coming summer, and stay for good. "But before there can be any great development in migration," says George Hall, miner, member of parliament for Aberdare, who toured Canada with the Empire Parliamentarians last summer, "there must be not only reduced passage but free passages. These people have no money. They have spent all their earnings. Their homes can be purchased for half or a third of their rateable value. They cling to the hope of a possible revival of trade. A number of young men have expressed their desire to go to Canada, but being struck off the unemployment benefit first, they have no money to go."

Who has not felt how sadly sweet
The dream of home, the dream of home,
Steals o'er the heart, too soon to fleet,
When far o'er sea or land we roam?

Splendid Progress Shown During 1925

First Annual Banquet of District Cheesemakers Is Held in Downeyflake—In Past Season Grade Has Registered 98 Per Cent.

OBJECTIVE FOR 1929 IS 100 PER CENT.
THOMAS BORLAND WINS BANK TROPHY

The cheese-makers of the counties of Victoria, Durham and Peterborough set their quality objective for next year at 100 per cent.—perfection.

Some of the makers achieved that score during the season of 1928, and others trailed the leaders by only fractional margins. The district as a whole registered a grade of 98 per cent. as compared with their 89 per cent. for the season of 1927, a vast forward stride of almost ten points, and the average quality for the whole province of Ontario this year was 96.7 per cent.

These were figures that dazzled the members of the Peterborough, Victoria and Durham Cheesemakers' Association at their first annual luncheon in the Downyflake tea room Friday afternoon.

Some of the speakers were dubious about improving this year's accomplishment. J. L. Irwin of Campbellford, Dairy Produce Grader at Belleville, reminded the optimists that Frontenac county had been added to the Central Ontario family circle for 1929, and the cheese industry as a whole in that county was not quite up to the Central Ontario standard. This factor might tend to depress the division's score next year, "but there shouldn't be any doubt about it in 1930 Mr. Irwin predicted.

New Spirit Evident

After their seven-league advance this season, the cheese-makers of this district—Peterborough, Durham and Victoria—have become imbued with a new and stronger spirit of confidence in themselves, and some of them have only to repeat their 1928 performance to contribute a perfect score to the Central Ontario 1929 record. The Association has also created among the members a respect for each other, a kindly, co-operative attitude which has already produced substantial benefits not only among the members but also to the industry.

As some of the speakers expressed it yesterday, something has happened in the cheese industry of this district, and that something has sprouted from the cheese-makers' association, an organization which authorities like G. A. Gillespie, H. B. Cowan, J. L. Irwin, Jas. Cook of Belleville, W. J. Moore, local dairy instructor, and others all declared to have been long overdue.

Tom Borland's Success

The presentation of prizes to the outstanding cheese-makers of the district was the main feature of the program, of which R. G. Allan of the Peterborough Milk Products Company, as president of the association, was chairman. The Bank of Commerce silver cup, a handsome prize, awarded for the highest scoring cheese in the three counties, was won by Thomas Borland of Warminster factory in Dummer township. It was presented by A. G. McDermid and A. L. Nevison of the Norwood and Lakefield branches of the Bank.

Mr. Borland also won the first of two prizes contributed by Flavelles of Lindsay and presented by G. A. Gillespie. This prize was a gold watch. The second, a carving set, was won by J. C. Cummiskey of Fleetwood factory in Manvers township, Durham county.

The next two prizes, donated by Mr. Moore, the local instructor, were won by C. H. Foster of Warsaw factory and George Wilson of Buckhorn.

Andrew Wilson of Young's Point received an order for five gallons of rennet from the Smith Hardware of Belleville, and Rex Wilson of Selwyn won a cheese trier given by the De Laval Company and presented by H. B. Cowan. A second prize from the De Laval Company, a cheese hoop knife, went to Patrick O'Brien of South Burleigh.

Won Fountain Pen.

The Bethany branch of the Bank of Toronto contributed a fountain pen, which went to Archie Beattie of Star factory in Victoria county.

The dinner's company included a number of women, wives of members of the association, and among the guests were G. A. Gillespie, H. B. Cowan and A. J. Reynolds of Peterborough; A. G McDermid of Norwood; A. L. Nevison of Lakefield; J. S. Cook of Belleville; W. E. Brennan, Belleville, president of the Central Ontario Cheese-makers' Association; W. V. Drewry of Warkworth, vice-president of the Central Ontario Association; J. L. Irwin, Campbellford, dairy produce grader at Belleville; John Hall, cheese-maker of the Quinte factory in Prince Edward county.

CONSUL GENERAL MAKES APPEAL

He Asserts Chinese Are Being Waylaid In Ottawa Streets.

HEARING ADJOURNED.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 29 (Canadian Press).—Charging that a number of Chinese had been waylaid and assaulted in the streets of Ottawa since the recent disturbance in an Oriental cafe here, K. H. Chow, Chinese Consul-General in Canada, addressed an appeal to Mayor Arthur Ellis last night, asking that greater protection be afforded Chinese residents of the city.

Considerable feeling has been engendered in the capital over the cafe brawl, in which Harold Starr, local athlete, is alleged to have been attacked by a number of celestials and seriously injured. The case was aired in Municipal Court here yesterday.

According to Mr. Chow, a number of Chinamen had been stopped on the streets and asked: "Are you connected with Chinese restaurants? If they replied in the negative, they were let off, he charged, otherwise the men were attacked.

"Inasmuch as we regret the whole affair at the cafe, we do not see any reason why the whole Chinese community should be in jeopardy and this majority should be victimized because of the supposed mistakes of the minority. It is inconsistent with British justice and fair play that the innocent should suffer together with the guilty," he said.

Hearing Adjourned.

January 8 was the date set by Magistrate Charles Hopewell yesterday for the resumption of the hearing into the charge against Harry Woo, Chinese restaurant worker, who, it is alleged, assaulted Harold Starr, local athlete, and inflicted grievous bodily harm during a fracas in an Oriental cafe here last Sunday morning.

Starr, appearing in court yesterday, was swathed in bandages where he had suffered serious injuries during the brawl. Evidence showed that Starr, while endeavoring to conduct a friend, Arthur Tabor, from the restaurant, had had to fight his way through between fifteen and twenty enraged Chinese, all of whom had armed themselves with whatever objects lay to hand. Woo's part in the riot, according to the evidence, was as a wielder of a red-hot poker, with which he is declared to have scorched Starr in various parts of the body. The accused was positively identified by Starr as the individual who brandished this weapon.

Commander Evangeline Booth Declares She Did Not Come To London To Seize Throne

LONDON, December 29 (Canadian Press). — Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Salvation Army in the United States, on her arrival in London yesterday afternoon to attend the meeting on January 8th of the High Council, said emphatically: "I have not come to seize the throne."

"There is no split in the Salvation Army," she told the Canadian Press correspondent. "There will be no split whatever decisions for reforms the High Council may make. The Army is more united to-day than ever before. I shall never be a party to any step that will interfere with its unity. I am here merely as a member of the High Council, but I come with the prayers, faith, and confidence of the entire United States Army behind me. The Army in the United States is one in its desire for a closely unified Army throughout the world. This feeling extends among the rank and file as well as among my officers and territorial commanders."

COUNTY CONSTABLE GIVEN JAIL TERM

STRATFORD, Dec. 29. — (Canadian Press).—John Hutchinson, Perth county constable convicted of allowing Maxwell M. Rozan, official of the Guggenheim Distilleries at Kitchener, to escape from a moving train while returning to Stratford from Toronto following the dismissal of his appeal against jail sentence, was sentenced to two months in jail and fined $500 to-day. The fifteen days which Hutchinson has already spent in jail since his conviction will be allowed on his sentence.

Rozan was convicted and sentenced to the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph for fraud in connection with the defunct Guggenheim distilleries at Kitchener. Following the dismissal of his appeal against the sentence, while en route to the Stratford jail to await removal to Guelph he was allowed to go to the wash room of the train by Hutchinson, who had charge of the prisoner.

When he did not return, the constable went to get him, but Rozan could not be found. He is still at large.

WESTWARD HO!

All good Canadians realize that Canada is a country to be proud of, but how many however, have tried to visualize the remarkable variety and vastness of this far-flung Dominion? It is only through travel that the immensity and outstanding natural beauty of our great heritage is realized. Travelling westward to the Pacific Coast we pass mighty rushing rivers innumerable lakes and dense lumbering regions thence across the wide prairies and through the magnificent Rockies a revelation of peerless scenic grandeur—then Vancouver and Victoria, those gems of the North Pacific, where the warm Pacific winds made year round golf possible.

Travel facilities are of the best. Every day the year round "The Vancouver Express" widely known Canadian Pacific transcontinental train leaves Toronto at 9.00 p.m., making the through trip to Vancouver in 4 days. Schedule provides for good connections to all western points and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly arrange for reservations and tickets on request.

VAPOUS EDITOR IS COMMITTED

Opening Proceedings Are Enlivened With Numerous Clashes Between Counsel.

INTERPRETER OBJECTS.

SUDBURY, Dec. 29 (Canadian Press).—On a charge of seditious slander against King George and the Prince of Wales Arvo Vaara, editor of the Finnish paper Vapous, was yesterday committed for trial by Magistrate J. S. McKessock. One passage in the objectionable articles, published on December 4th last, to which the bench directed attention, was that which said that King George had caught the whooping cough by standing outside for two minutes at some festivity.

"If that isn't trying to bring royalty into contempt, I don't know what is," the magistrate held. "In many other ways these articles have tended to disturb the tranquility of the state, I know, and for another thing, they are heartless in tone and have the same effect upon the populace."

Yesterday's proceedings were enlivened by numerous clashes between Crown-Attorney R. R. McKessock and A. W. Roebuck of Toronto ,counsel for Vaara. Other high lights were the bench's order to the business manager of The Vapus, John V. Kannasto, to produce the subscription lists, and the refusal of J. A. Jarvis, an interpreter called by the Crown, to translate the articles for the court. Threatened with a charge of contempt, he consented.

Jarvis frankly admitted that his sympathies were with the defence in the case, and claimed that he should not be asked to act.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

WE are fast approaching the close of another year—and that should set us thinking. Shallow indeed must be the mind that is not impressed with the departure of one year and the arrival of another. It may be true, as some have said, that our divisions of time are wholly arbitrary and that there is nothing in reality in the last day of December corresponding to what is spoken of as the turning of a new corner, or the opening of a fresh chapter in our lives, but we ought to be thankful for anything that will make a break in the even flow of our days. It would be well worth while if it did nothing else than compel us to cast a look back over the road by which we have travelled.

STOCK-TAKING.

Perhaps one of the most profitable experiences we could have would be to sit down toward the closing hours of 1928 and make an inventory of our inner condition.

On one occasion a Presbyterian preacher addressed a great congregation gathered for a Watch Night service in some such fashion as this:

"Now, if New Year's Day is to be a day of hope, this must be a day of thought. If New Year's Day is to be a day of wishes, this must be a day of questions. If New Year's Day is to be a time of resolution, this must be a time of examination. I wonder how many of you have ever done that. I wonder if any of you ever sat down some New Year's Eve, before the clock had chimed the midnight hour, and instead of joining in any festivity and merry-making, find out how things were going with your soul. You have all read newspapers and books in abundance this year, but how often have you looked into the story which your own life is telling? You are an eager man of business, and this year has brought you rich experience and better knowledge, but do you know your own self any better?"

Stock-taking of this sort may not be the most pleasant for our feelings, but if we are to rise to the challenge of the New Year and achieve nobler things, stock-taking of the most careful kind will be absolutely necessary.

NUMBERING OUR DAYS.

It is my sad lot to spend a large part of my time in visiting homes upon which there has fallen the shadow caused by death. How empty would any mere words of mine sound at such a time. I hope my presence counts for something. And I trust that the grip of my hand is successful in conveying to stricken hearts the feelings of my own heart. But, thank God, I am not left to my own words. I have something of weight and of worth to utter when I read from the Word of God.

Very often I start off by reading a portion of the 90th Psalm:

"Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God.

"So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

I am not sure that there would be much of comfort in these words for mourners were these all that were written. Of that I shall have more to say again. But for the present it seems to me that such words might be a very fitting introduction to a season of serious meditation at this particular time of the year.

WILL YOU DO IT?

As we look back over the past year no doubt most of us have much of which we are ashamed. Thank God, He knoweth our frame, He remembereth that we are dust, easily tempted and prone to yield to temptation. I am sure that the weakest of us have His sympathy and can count upon His support in the coming year. But let us prepare ourselves for what may await us by sincerely praying this prayer: "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

There are not many who seem disposed to number their days. Why, I cannot exactly say. Perhaps it is because at the end of the count there is death. Death is an enemy and the time of its arrival is an evil day; therefore, we try our utmost to put off the evil day as long as we can. When we get down to the business of trying to number our days we eventually have to face the fact of death and that is a fact few of us can face with complacency. The result is that our days are left unnumbered so far as we are concerned.

Then again when we try to number our days we are impressed with the uncertainty of life. Some times the most unlikely go first. But in spite of the uncertainty of the number of our days and the inevitability of death it would be well if we engaged in such an exercise at the close of one year and the opening of another.

TOO BUSY.

Most of our lives are so full and so busy that very often other and greater interests are crushed out. One of the crying evils of the twentieth century is the rush and fever of life.

A charming lady belonging to the Quakers once asked Robert Southey how he spent the day. And this man of great learning told how he parcelled out all the hours of the twenty-four. And the Quaker lady said: "But, friend Robert, when dost thou do thy thinking?" Such a question could be very properly addressed to almost a hundred per cent. of the people I know. It would seem that the aim of everybody is to be strenuous and busy in season and out of season. If our day has any dogma it is that one must be ever and always doing things. The consequences are that most of us are swept off our feet by a congestion of occupations and engagements so that we have "no time almost to eat," let alone think!

This may mean a gain in dollars—although I very much doubt it—but physically, intellectually and morally it is causing us a great loss.

Pascal had a famous saying that "half the calamities of the world come about because men are not willing sometimes to sit still in a room." It is folly of the worst kind to leave no hour in the day, nor day in the week, for calm brooding thought. Failure to make such provision for meditation and thought will sooner or later bring a crash.

WEARING THE SOUL THIN.

There is a story told of a man of intense business enterprise and activity. He never let up. His friends could never get him to take any time off for a vacation. But by and by there came a breakdown, and he had a very long vacation. A friend was visiting him one day, and he said, comparing his business now and when he was driving his immense business: "Now I am growing. I was running my soul thin by my activity. But now I am growing in the knowledge of myself, and of some things that most intimately concern me."

I read of a disaster to one of the United States torpedo boats and of two bluejackets who lay side by side in the hospital, both mortally wounded. In his terrible agony one poor fellow raved and blasphemed. But the other was made of different stuff, and he said: "Hold hard, shipmate! It will soon be over. We've got but little time to live. Let's be decent."

As we try to number our days let us determine that we shall at least be decent, whether these days be many or few. Let us take time to behold Him, the Lamb of God, slain for the sins of men. In beholding Him we shall be made like Him.

Yours for a happy and prosperous New Year. —Allan Fairbairn.

The Minister Remarks—

—The reason why some people stay away from church is that they are afraid of hearing something disturbing.

—It is a delusion to think that you can dispose of a difficulty by dodging it.

—Some people mean well — but mean well so feebly that they never amount to anything.

—Preaching should be something more than a mere parade of innocuous commonplaces.

—Real religion is a stimulating adventure, not a mere routine or ritual.

—If you want to walk in the best of company get under the Cross, Christ is there!
